JAY GOULD'S PLUCK WON AT COURT TENNIS

Young Player Defeated Former Champion, Joshua A. Crane, Jr.

BIG GALLERY WATCHED GAMES

Boston Expert Had Match Almost Won When Gould Rallied and Captured Sensational Contest.

One of the most remarkable displays of pluck and endurance ever witnessed in competition was seen yesterday at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club's court, when Jay Gould, the slender seventeen-year-old son of George J. Gould, defeated Joshua A. Crane, Jr., of Boston in the last match of the first round for the court tennis championship of the United States by the score of 6—4, 3—6, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2. Gould won by steady, consistent playing. He won the first set, but lost the next two. With the score 5 to 2 against him in the fourth set, Crane appeared to have the contest at his mercy, and needed but a single point to win the match. Young Gould never faltered nor weakened. He not only stopped Crane's apparently irresistible advance, but drew up level with his opponent, and finally won the set, which was a deuce and vantage one. The unexpected loss of the fourth set proved Crane's undoing, as he went to pieces in the fifth and deciding set, and Gould won by a one-sided score.

The hard smashes of Crane did not cause Gould any undue worry. He did not attempt to take impossible shots, but reserved his strength where it was most valuable. Crane was effective and deadly in the winning gallery, grille opening, and dedans. He has acquired the new English style of strokes, which he picked up last year when he competed for the British championship. He showed the same brilliancy of play that won for him the championship in 1901 and 1904. The victory makes young Gould the strongest kind and a candidate for championship honors.

Not since Peter Latham and George Standing played for the racquet championship of America has there been as big a gallery as that of yesterday. Standing room was at a premium, and the plucky and successful efforts of young Gould elicited round after round of applause. From the first game until the last there was not a slow or uninteresting moment in the play, which lasted nearly three hours. Crane won the first game of the first set after vantage had been called. Gould captured the next four games, Crane going out of court twice. Deuce and vantage was called three times before Crane won the sixth game. The two players alternated in the games until Gould ran out winner by the score of 6 to 4.

Crane won the first three games of the second set before Gould woke up. The latter made a plucky up-hill fight and carried the score to 3—4, but Crane found the dedans in the eighth and won the ninth game easily, making the sets one-all. Crane repeatedly found the winning gallery and dedans in the third set, and reached the grille twice. Gould protested the fourth game, which was allowed. Crane maintained his winning gait and took the set 6—3. The fourth set was full of exciting plays. Crane secured an early lead, and with the score 5 to 2, and the eighth game 40 to 15 in his favor, many of the spectators began to leave. Gould pulled the game out of the fire and took the next two, making it a deuce and vantage set. He kept his nerve, and by the best play of the season won the next two games and the set by the score of 7—5. Crane went to pieces in the fifth set. Gould did not let up for a moment, and the Boston player repeatedly missed the grille and dedans, which had been his strong point during the early part of the contest. The fifth game went to vantage six times and was finally won by Gould, who captured the set 6—2. Summary:

Court Tennis Championship of the United States.—First Round—Jay Gould, Tuxedo Club, beat Joshua A. Crane, Jr., Boston Athletic Association, 6—4, 3—6, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2. Referee—Richmond Fearing, Boston Athletic Association. Referee of service—George Standing, New York Racquet and Tennis Club. Marker—J. Hammond, New York.

Billiardist Sutton in Good Form.

In preparation for the big billiard tournament George Sutton played two practice games at the Broadway Billiard Academy yesterday and showed excellent form. In the afternoon, at 18-inch balk line, two shots in balk, he scored 500 against 64 for J. F. Frank, an amateur player, averaging 33 2-13. In his tenth inning Sutton made a splendidly executed run of 174, while he put together 107 and 79 on two other occasions. His command of the balls was excellent and his position play of a high order. In the evening he allowed John Hendrick 93 while he was making 500, and again ran over a hundred in his tenth inning. His average was 29 7-17, his best run 117, while he made 97 and 73 in two other efforts. The games were watched by a big crowd.

ROAD DRIVERS' MEETING.

Alderman to be Asked for Appropriation to Build Speedway Stand.

The weekly meeting of the Road Drivers' Association of New York was held last night at the Hotel Cadillac, when several important matters were passed upon. Nathan L. Ely, who presided, announced that the entry blanks for the annual Speedway parade and horse show on May 5 had been mailed, not only to the members, but to prominent horsemen in New York and Brooklyn. An effort will be made to secure an appropriation from the Board of Aldermen to erect a stand, similar to those in use in the public parks, near the finish of the brushes on the Speedway. It is the intention of the Road Drivers to arrange the stand, if approved, so that it can be used for the regattas on the Harlem River.

Ex-Chief of Police John McCullagh invited the members of the Road Drivers' Association to take part in an intercity race met at Elkwood Park, Long Branch, N. J., in August. It is intended to offer a $500 cup for competition by the amateur drivers of New York, Philadelphia, Trenton, Long Branch, and Atlantic City. The track is one mile long, and has not been used for trotting purposes for years. It is proposed to hold several other events on the same day as the intercity meeting. The matter was referred to the members for their co-operation.

Superintendent John S. Caldwell announced that the Speedway would be ready for fast driving on Saturday next, providing a heavy rain does not spoil it in the meantime.

Hoppe Plays Well Against Gallagher.

Willie Hoppe played in good form against the veteran "Tom" Gallagher at Hoppe's billiard academy last night, the champion scoring 400 to 209 at eighteen-inch balk line, two counts in balk. Hoppe averaged 25, and made a high run of 95. Gallagher averaged 13 14-15, with a high run of 47. They will play again this afternoon and evening.

SUES ON NAVY CONTRACTS.

Government Seeks to Recover from Defunct Perth Amboy Company.

Vice Chancellor Stevens, sitting in Newark yesterday, began the hearing in the case of the United States Government against the insolvent Perth Amboy Shipbuilding and Engineering Company.

The Government seeks to recover a claim of $48,800, which represents the added cost of vessels which had to be constructed elsewhere after the defendant company defaulted its contract.

The Perth Amboy concern had the contract to build two steel screw steamers for harbor service in the Quartermaster's department of the Government for $105,000.

Richmond Co. Country Club Prosperous

The Richmond County Country Club of Staten Island has passed through an unusually prosperous year, according to the reports presented at the annual meeting on Tuesday night. The Treasurer showed a very satisfactory financial condition, the income being greater than the expenses, with about $500 in the reserve fund. It was also shown that the membership is growing at a rapid rate, and the club is seriously considering such alterations or additions to the club house as will give increased accommodations.

The interest in golf has never been so great as at present. This has had the effect of materially changing the aspect of the club, which was originally organized for riding and driving. The lawn tennis feature of the organization promises to be more important this year than ever before. The club has also two well built squash courts. The officers elected at the annual meeting follow: President, Edward W. Brown; Vice President, George Cromwell; Secretary, E. E. Foster; Treasurer, D. S. Hays; Directors, Ernest Flagg, Bradish J. Carroll, George Quirk, W. I. Seaman, and Herbert R. Woods.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Lower—Call Money Rates 6@19 Per Cent.

Late Rise in Prices Upset by High Money — Exchange Breaks.

All the action in yesterday's stock market was crowded into the final hour of the session. In the first four hours of business prices displayed steadiness similar to that which characterized the trading on Tuesday, in spite of the obstacles presented by activity in money, conflicting reports from the headquarters of the representatives of the anthracite miners in conference here, heavy losses to the Sub-Treasury, and the declaration of the usual dividend on Atchison common stock, where an increase has been rather generally expected. The volume of business was very much smaller than on the previous day, but just as the trading seemed to have reached a dead centre at the opening of the last hour activity developed in the group of anthracite stocks under the leadership of Reading, which rose in all some 2 points, and was closely followed by Delaware & Hudson, with a gain of 5½ points, and Ontario & Western, which moved up 1½ points, activity developing in Pennsylvania, although on a smaller scale, at the same moment. The influence bred by this vigorous rally was rapidly extending to the market in general when call money began to rise, quotations advancing until the 10 per cent. rate at the inception of this movement had given way to a quotation of 19 per cent. This marked the culmination of the advance both in the anthracite shares and in the market as a whole, but where the recessions left prices in general at the close well below those at the end of Tuesday, the coal roads themselves managed to retain a portion of their gains. There was nothing in the news of the day to explain this demonstration in the anthracite group; in fact, Wall Street is disposed to look upon a strike as a practical certainty, but the movement was easily the most interesting feature of the day's trading. Atchison was adversely affected by the failure of the Directors to increase the dividend on the common shares; Consolidated Gas exhibited more uniform strength than for some days past; American Sugar sold off moderately on the theory that a successful issue in the rebate suits might curtail the company's profits, since it is generally understood that it has conducted its sales in such fashion that any concessions by the railroads inured to its benefit, and the Chicago traction stocks moved erratically, following the results of Tuesday's voting in Chicago upon the municipal ownership proposals, these results being both bitter and sweet from the traction companies' point of view. United States Steel shares fell back slightly, although this movement found no basis in the day's advices from the bituminous regions, where independent operators in considerable numbers continue to sign the 1903 wage scale, thereby insuring the operation of their mines.

Call money's advance to 19 per cent. yesterday, this rate constituting the highest quotation touched in April in two decades or more, not only served to upset the stock market, but also demolished preconceived notions of the duration of the money disturbance incident to the April disbursements. The explanation lies, of course, in the fact that these disbursements, which were extraordinarily heavy, fell in with an unusually heavy drain to the Government, and exceptionally large transfers of funds, both through the Sub-Treasury and direct, to out-of-town points. The banks had lost to the Sub-Treasury up to yesterday $3,644,000, as against $1,904,000 in the same period a week ago, while to Boston and Philadelphia there have been heavy remittances, it being found practically impossible to purchase the requisite amount of exchange in either of these markets. To Boston alone the shipments have amounted to at least a half million dollars. In the meantime the break-up of Winter inland has led to the usual full employment of funds for business and crop planting purposes, the effect of this situation so far having been felt in the withholding of money from this city rather than in its actual withdrawal. Accompanying the sharp upturn in call money came a decline in demand sterling, which dropped 15 points to a figure practically identical with that prevailing when the first gold engagement of the season was made. This fall in sterling led to active bids in London and Berlin for gold, and may well result in engagements, particularly so if the hopes of London in the matter of a reduction in the Bank of England's discount rate, either to-morrow or next week, are fulfilled.

C., H. & D. Foreclosure Suit Brought.

CINCINNATI, April 4.—The foreclosing of the mortgage for $50,000,000, covering all the properties held by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway, was asked by Thomas W. Paxton, attorney for the Central Trust Company of New York, in a suit filed in the United States Circuit Court to-day. The suit is brought by the trust company in the interest of bondholders.

HARRIMAN DROPS BANKS FROM SOUTHERN PACIFIC

Speyer and Other Bankers Fail of Re-election as Directors.

THEIR REMOVAL UNEXPECTED

Mr. Harriman Said to Disapprove of Alliances Between Banking Interests and His Roads.

James Speyer and Charles H. Tweed were not re-elected Directors of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company at the annual meeting of the stockholders held yesterday at Beechmont, Ky. In all five new Directors were elected to replace the members of the firms of Speyer & Co. and of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and James H. Hyde. The new Directors are Henry W. De Forest, Robert Goelet, Ogden Mills, W. V. S. Thorne, and A. K. Van Deventer. Otto H. Kahn and Mortimer L. Schiff, the two members of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., announced their retirement from the Southern Pacific board at the time the members of that firm withdrew from all their railroad Directorates. The retirement of James Speyer and his partner, Mr. Tweed, had not been generally looked for in Wall Street, and the fact that they were not re-elected Directors of the company was widely commented on in the financial district.

At the office of Speyer & Co. it was said that the firm had no statement whatever to make in regard to the fact that Mr. Speyer and Mr. Tweed were no longer members of the Southern Pacific Directorate. It was asserted, however, that this was not to be taken as an indication of the firm's policy in reference to the general question of bankers acting as Directors of railroads with which they have financial transactions. It was said in well-informed quarters that members of the firm of Speyer & Co. have no intention of withdrawing from other railroad boards with which they have been associated.

A man in a position to speak authoritatively of Mr. Harriman's policy in Pacific affairs said yesterday that the fact that the members of the firm of Speyer & Co. were not re-elected to the Southern Pacific board was due to Mr. Harriman's desire to do away with all entangling alliances between bankers and the railroads in which he is interested. It was explained that the retirement recently of the members of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. from the Directorates of the Harriman roads as well as of other railroads was in keeping with the policy which had been adopted by Mr. Harriman with the full knowledge and approval of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

The retirement of the members of Speyer & Co. from the Harriman roads, it was said, was the natural sequence of the withdrawal of the members of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. from those roads. It appears from this that the action recently taken by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. was as much the result, so far at least as the Harriman roads were concerned, of Mr. Harriman's policy as it was of the policy adopted by the firm itself. This explains the fact that Speyer & Co. have also withdrawn from the Southern Pacific Directorate, notwithstanding the definite statement that that firm has not adopted the policy expressed some time ago by Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 4.—The annual stockholders' meeting of the Central Pacific Railway Company was held here yesterday. The only business of importance was the re-election of the old Directorate, with E. H. Harriman at its head.

CHICAGO TRACTION MUDDLE.

Wall Street Believes the Situation Will Now Be Relieved.

Interests identified with the Chicago traction companies were busy yesterday studying the full decision in the Chicago Traction case, which the Supreme Court handed down on Monday. New York bankers closely associated with the Chicago traction companies expressed the opinion yesterday that Tuesday's vote in Chicago indicated that Chicagoans were already growing tired of the municipal ownership propaganda.

Rafael R. Govin of H. B. Hollins & Co. was one of those who took this view of Tuesday's vote. He said:

The tremendous change in public opinion which was demonstrated by yesterday's election, in which only through a paltry few thousand votes municipal ownership was approved of in Chicago, and municipal operation totally defeated, whereas only a year ago the sentiment for municipal ownership was so strong that a sweeping majority voted in its favor, shows that what the people desire is not experiment in street car ventures, but good service and adequate transportation at an early date.

The present companies can give this good service, and I have no doubt that a settlement satisfactory to all interests will be made between the city and private interests. That the administration of the City of Chicago will now insist in following a policy which involves endless litigation, with a subsequent delay in the attainment of a good street car system, if it can be ever attained by municipal ownership and operation, when it is possible to come to a fair agreement and to have at once for Chicago a first-class railroad system, seems impossible.

NEEDN'T PAY BOND INTEREST.

Pere Marquette Wins in First Step to Declare Issue Illegal.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 4.—The injunction restraining W. A. Bradford and Kleybolt & Co. from prosecuting their suit against the Père Marquette Road for defaulted interest on bonds will stand. Judge Lurton's decision was filed in the United States Circuit Court here to-day.

The original suit was started by Bradford and Kleybolt & Co. to collect interest to the amount of about $700,000 on a bond issue. The Père Marquette filed a counter suit in which it charged that the bonds were illegally issued, and secured a preliminary injunction restraining the holders of the bonds from forcing their suit. It is this premilinary injunction which will stand until after the issue raised by the Père Marquette can be decided.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were steady and trading was quiet. Consols were upheld, being stimulated by the sinking fund prospects.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Apparently the edge was taken off the market for local traction stocks yesterday. After the results of the local referendum were assimilated La Salle Street came to the conclusion that a traction settlement is quite remote. In New York Union Traction common opened around 7¼, dipped to 5¾, and rallied to around 7 again. The preferred sold from 21½ down to 18½ and rallied to around 21. Locally West Chicago sold from 30 up to 32 and back again, while North Chicago sold in one lot at 35, compared with a recent sale at 30.

Chicago Edison stock seemed to feel the influence of a turn of sentiment in its favor, and sold up to 159, compared with 148, the low point about a week ago. Telephone sold at 116. Subway was quiet at steady figures. Illinois Brick was ex dividend 61@62.

Money, 5 to 5½ per cent. New York exchange, 5 cents discount to par.

NEW NEVADA COPPER PLANT.

Guggenheims to Enlarge the Capacity of the Consolidated Conern.

It was formally admitted yesterday that the Guggenheim interests had obtained practical control of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company, and would immediately proceed to construct a smelter with 1,500,000 tons annual capacity. The funds for the construction of this plant have already been provided. Control of the Nevada Consolidated was acquired by the Guggenheim interests through option and other purchases of the stock which were made after the property of the company had been examined by A. Chester Beatty and other mining engineers representing the Guggenheim interests.

The proposed plant will produce from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 pounds of copper a year, which it is estimated will enable the company to show a profit of from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually. The company expects to be producing copper early in 1907, and to have the entire plant in operation the following June. The railway which is now being constructed to connect the company's mines at Ely, Nev., with the Southern Pacific Railroad is expected to be completed by June 1.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Those who wait for a clear course in speculation usually miss their market, or find the running so crowded when they do go in that the chances of success are greatly reduced.

The stock market appears to be fighting the money market again. Considering the advance that has taken place in the last ten days, the indifference displayed yesterday afternoon to the spectacle of 19 per cent. call money was remarkable. Prices were somewhat reactionary, it is true, and the flurry in money was obviously a restraint on bullish operations of an aggressive nature, but the bull crowd may be said on the whole to have stood its ground. Such recessions as occurred yesterday were probably no greater than would have occurred under the pressure of professional realizing, without the strain put upon the market by the inaccessibility of money. The bull argues, with the weight of recent experience on his side, that when money is easy again prices will be so much higher that those who are now bulling stocks in the face of tight money will be willing to sell to such as can then afford to buy. This is what happened several months ago. The bull crowd went right ahead advancing prices in December with call money as high as 125 per cent., and then in January, when money was easy again, it unloaded on the commission houses at fancy prices. Those who bulled stocks in December were simply aiming at a higher level of prices on which to sell out as soon as money should become accessible to the public for purposes of speculation. A distribution of stocks with call money ranging from 50 to 125 per cent. was impossible. But prices could be advanced by manipulation. The same might be said with reference to the present situation. When the stock market is advanced under such conditions conservative people say that the situation is abnormal, that it is flying in the face of Providence to put up prices in the face of tight money, &c., but the thing sometimes succeeds. It did the last time.

The Bankers' Almanac records that on April 4, 1905, call money in New York was worth only 3½ per cent., that time money was also quoted at 3½ per cent., and that the Bank of England rate was 2½ per cent. Yesterday the range of call money was from 6½ to 19 per cent., time money was quoted at 5 per cent. for all dates from sixty days to six months, and the Bank of England rate was 4 per cent.

In view of the limited response of commission houses to the advance of the last few days the market's demonstrated capacity for absorbing realizing sales from professional sources deserves comment. One explanation is that the Street is trading in a fixed amount of floating stocks, which is to say, with certain qualifications, that it is trading not in stocks, but in contracts. Brokers' loans have not been increasing proportionately to the increase in the volume of transactions, owing to the professional nature of the speculation, which consists very largely in the swapping of contracts between traders. There is a certain minimum of bona fide business, however, and there is no doubt that a large aggregate of real stocks has been placed upon the market during the last 2 or 3 points of the advance. Such selling has been more than offset, at least so far, by the increase of speculative confidence on the bull side. With call money dancing in this manner brokers are just as well satisfied to see business lagging; the situation would be a good deal more embarrassing if commission houses were loaded up with stocks.

The leading bull operators have been supposed to enjoy the support and encouragement of the so-called big interests, meaning the more prominent financial interests of the Street, but from the manner in which loans were called at a late hour on Tuesday and again yesterday it might be inferred that certain large banking institutions are disposed to check the stock market through the agency of the money market. Some banks, at least, have shown very scant regard for the stock market's comfort. It is a question, therefore, whether the flurries in money this week have been positively unavoidable, or whether they have been intended as a warning to operators who are perhaps trying to carry things up too rapidly.

It is said that there has been some very good buying of Erie issues recently, especially the common stock. Bullish inspiration appears to be coming from the same crowd that managed last year's bull campaign in Erie.

An eminent banker says that in his judgment the depression in bank and trust company stocks is about at an end.

The declaration yesterday of the regular dividend, at the rate of 4 per cent., on Atchison common was evidently a disappointment to a few persons who had given credulous ear to rumors of an increase at this time. No well-informed Atchison friends expected an increase, although it is understood that one element in the board favored raising the rate to 5 per cent. It was reported yesterday that the Union Pacific people favored an increase and threatened at one time to stand out for it, but the conservative element prevailed, to the relief of all who are sincerely interested in the future of the property. The position of the stocks, in the estimation of many good critics, is stronger on a 4 per cent. dividend basis with an increase in prospect than if the rate had been raised at this period. No one could have supposed from the actions of the stock recently that the dividend was likely to be increased. It has seemed to bull rather hard above 94.

Distillers' Securities common has been bulled about 15 points on the hope of the enactment by Congress of what is called the "free alcohol" bill, removing the tax from alcohol used for commercial purposes. It seems reasonable to suppose that there has been a considerable distribution of the stock to commission houses, since the bull campaign has been in progress for some time and has evidently been a success from the pool's point of view.

Persons who may be supposed to know declare that there is a very large short interest in United States Steel common, and that it is perhaps the most obstinate bear account in the whole market. Brokers say that traders in many instances have covered up everything else that they were short of, leaving their Steel common out. The statement was made yesterday on personal knowledge that three small commission houses are short of more than 35,000 shares between them. This is no great amount of stock, but if the same proportion held good throughout the Street the aggregate short interest in the stock would be enormous. Only a few weeks ago Steel common was about the most popular "safe" sale in the market. Traders thought it safe because if business should begin to let up the Steel stocks would be highly vulnerable, whereas if business did not let up their recovery in the market would probably be so slow that short contracts could be retired in a leisurely manner. From its low point Steel common has enjoyed a maximum recovery of more than 8 points. The short interest has not been stampeded, but it has shown signs of uneasiness.

The principal bull tips yesterday referred to Reading and Union Pacific. Reading was to be put to 140 and Union Pacific to 160. The Reading tip was good.

Union Pacific is a wonderful stock. Its fluctuations absorb more interest than those of any other security in the entire list. For two days the trading has been all within a range of 1½ per cent. Since the stock crossed 158 there has been evidence of fairly good selling, some of it coming, presumably, from banking sources, but the absorption, whether of speculative or other origin, has been sufficient to offset such realizing. Traders got the idea yesterday morning that the stock had been put up in London in order to get a level on which to sell in this market. It was the leader of Americans on the other side, but failed to open up here to a parity with the London price. Its high price on Tuesday was 159½; it sold there again on the opening yesterday, and then declined steadily under profit taking until it touched 158⅛ in the last half hour, where the support became very aggressive. It looked as if an effort was being made to break the stock through 158, but it did not touch that figure. Large transactions were reported on the tape at 158⅛@158¼, and then in the last five minutes the stock went back to 158½, where it closed.

The Colorado Fuel Company's plan for raising fresh capital was not favorably received by the Street. The stock closed at a decline of 2½ points. The comment on the plan was that it betrayed the company's urgent need of money and the low state of its corporate credit.

Although the Western crowd in Wall Street is usually bullish, the Western public has not taken hold of the market as yet with any enthusiasm.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 4.—Reported deals in trust companies and the United Railways kept the market agog to-day. The general trading was active and broad. Union Trust advanced on every sale. It opened 8 points higher at 63, then swung to 64½. Bondholders let go at a handsome profit. It was reported that control had been wrested from George Blackistone, the President, and that the Maryland Trust had secured it. In certain well informed circles it was stated that no local trust company would appear as the buyer, but that a New York financial clique would appear as the concern to which the control would go. This, it was stated, would be in accord with the recent policy of Speyer & Co. in acquiring control of the Maryland Trust Company in Baltimore.

The Union Trust Company is reported in excellent condition, though much of its capital was for a time tied up in the Belvedere Hotel. It owns most of the first mortgage bonds of the hotel company, and its President, Mr. Blackistone, is one of the hotel receivers. The new financial plan of the United Railways in connection with the Maryland Electric Company is daily expected. The Girdle Electric Railroad charter, just granted by the Legislature, has been sold to New York financiers. Houston Oil recovered slightly to-day. Baltimore Brick common ran off 1 point. Georgia Southern and Florida common suffered a loss of 5 points. Georgia, Carolina & Northern 5s advanced ¼. Consolidated Gas 4½s declined 1½ to 99.

In the bond list United Railways free incomes eased off ¼. United Railways pooled incomes were ¼ lower. Alabama Coal and Iron 5s ran off 2. The market closed firm and fairly active.

Shares, 1,435; bonds, $109,000.

W. P. Brown of New Orleans broke silence yesterday, and, after buying considerable cotton in the Southern market, circulated bullish views on the situation. A great deal of May and July was bought in the New York market yesterday afternoon, and some thought they could trace this buying to the same source. Early in the day, however, New Orleans was a heavy seller in this market, and Wall Street sold some.

Opening 1 point higher, at 11.02, May broke to 10.95. The local bull leaders came in with some support and started a rally which extended to 20 points, May running up to 11.15. July sold off to 10.92 and up to 11.09. The new crop months were relatively strong, selling up 8 to 9 points from the previous close—October to 10.49 and December to 10.52. The local leaders continued their support right up to the close, May ending at 11.13, July at 11.08, October at 10.49, and December at 10.51. The spot market advanced 10 points, to 11.65 for middling, against 8.15 last year. Sales were 1,100 bales.

Southern weather was generally favorable, but some rain was reported over the Western belt.

The bulls have made much of what they termed the spot short interest. The argument has been that all the foreign mills, being sold six to eight months ahead, have engaged the cotton from spot houses here, and that these spot houses have not yet got the cotton for delivery. That this short interest was of sufficient magnitude to become a potent factor was denied yesterday by one competent to know. This man said that the so-called spot short interest this year was very much less than last, and, in fact, was below the normal.

A dispatch from New Orleans said that the exports from there this month would exceed 200,000 bales, and the outlook was for record shipments in May.

The proposal to close the New York Exchange over the same Easter holiday period as Liverpool—from Thursday, April 12, to the following Tuesday—was carried by a vote of 105 to 28. With New York and Liverpool observing Good Friday and Easter Monday, it is thought that the New Orleans Exchange will take similar action. Brokers here hope so, as otherwise they would have to keep in touch with the latter market during the holidays.

Port receipts were 18,970 bales, against 16,472 last week and 38,272 last year. Exports, 6,698 bales. Receipts since Sept. 1 are 6,772,576 bales, against 7,945,247 last year. Shipments, 5,158,864 bales, against 6,437,900 last year. Receipts at the thirteen interior towns were 9,430 bales, against 10,273 last week and 21,499 last year. Shipments were 12,337 bales, against 12,578 last week and 22,429 last year. Estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 3,250 to 3,750 bales, against 2,045 last week and 4,510 last year; Galveston, 4,000 to 5,000 bales, against 6,861 last week and 7,756 last year; New Orleans, 3,500 to 4,300 bales, against 3,849 last week and 8,708 last year.

Liverpool spot sales were again 14,000 bales at 1 point decline, 12,000 bales being American. Liverpool futures opened quiet at 2 points decline and closed quiet and unchanged to 3 points lower, May-June at 5.87d.; July-August, 5.87d.; August-September, 5.83d.; October-November, 5.64d., and December-January, 5.63d.

Manchester yarns were reported quiet and firm, and cloths firm.

Cotton Opinions.

A. O. BROWN & CO.—The only admissible conclusion from a due consideration of the bullish factors would seem to be that prices are destined to seek a higher level, whatever temporary interruptions may occur from profit taking and natural reactions. Very prominent interests here are still to all appearances heavily committed to the bull side, and are constantly buying and supporting the market. The season is opening inauspiciously in the central and eastern sections of the belt, and much replanting will have to be done in Texas.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—Among bulls and bears alike the opinion is unanimous that every acre possible will be planted, which accounts for the general feeling that the market should be sold; but the spinner absorbs the actual cotton and leading operators the options, so we think a short advance may occur when least expected.

T. A. McINTYRE & CO.—We do not expect to see anything better than a continued comparatively narrow traders' market for small quick returns until after the Easter holidays.

E. F. HUTTON & CO.—The new crop months show more steadiness than the old. The short interest in the latter is no doubt very large and is composed of weak interest, mostly coming from the South and by people who were bulls on the old crop at 12 to 12½ cents. We prefer the long side on every soft spot.

BAILY & MONTGOMERY.—We cannot but feel that the market will be shaped after a few days almost wholly by the weather news, no matter what may occur in regard to the old crop months, which are controlled by people who are able to advance or depress them at will.

WEIL BROTHERS.—As to acreage, the intention of the planters is unquestionably in the direction of an increase.

SANGER & ETTLESON.—It will be remembered that during the growth of the large crop the South sold the new crops steadily throughout the Summer. There is a tendency for a repetition of these tactics this season. The past experience demonstrates the fact that these contracts will in all likelihood be bought back at higher prices, as most of the contracts are held by people who really want the cotton.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—As an illustration of increased acreage in this section, a St. Louis man just returned from Brownsville County said that one man who had 200 acres in last year has 1,900 in this year. The local man bought a 43,000-acre ranch and is putting in 10,000 acres in cotton.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—Our stocks will lose heavily this and next week. Last Friday stocks here were 22,422, last year, 26,949.

WACO.—Heavy rains in this section yesterday. Very little planting has been done yet, and unsettled weather is delaying all farm work.

Following are the opening, highest, and lowest, and closing prices:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev's Close.

Market closed steady, with sales estimated at 250,000 bales. New Orleans closed steady, 10 points up on May, at 10.19; 10 points up on July, at 10.29; 7 up on October, at 10.43, and 6 higher for December, at 10.44.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—A large business was put through in cash wheat, exporters taking 320,000 bushels, but speculative trading remained generally quiet, notwithstanding the fact that four important markets, closed yesterday, had resumed business. The world's stock of wheat March 31 totaled 155,851,000 bushels, against 158,557,000 bushels March 24, and 136,555,000 bushels a year ago. The bears contend that this represents a sufficient supply, and that statistically the market is weak. Nevertheless, the New York market shows a premium of 8c for May wheat over the Chicago May price, with a tendency still to widen. The cash market closed firm, with No. 2 red quoted at 88c in elevator, and 90c, nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Corn ruled moderately active but firmer on cables, poor weather, light receipts, delayed Spring work, and in sympathy with wheat. Locally there was but little speculation. The market closed firm at top prices, net rise ⅛@½c. The cash article closed nominally at the following figures: No. 2 corn quoted at 55½c in elevator, and 52½@53c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 53½@54c, and No. 2 yellow, 53½@54c, free on board, afloat.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 4.—The local money market continues firm.

Call loans, 6@6½ per cent.; time loans on collateral, 5@5¼ per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 5¼ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 5¼@6 per cent.; New York funds, 12½@15c discount; clearings, $33,723,948; balances, $2,295,247; Sub-Treasury debit, $150,821.

After the opening, which was fairly active, the market became rather quiet, and there was some profit taking on the weakness in Amalgamated.

United Copper and Bingham were features of strength, each showing a fractional gain. Boston Consolidated, Greene, and Nevada were quite active, but fluctuated within narrow limits. Trinity was a feature in the late trading, advancing to over 11.

Closing was strong. Complete list of transactions follows:

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Opens Firm, but Falls Off.

Irregularity Develops Toward the Close—Coppers Fairly Active, and Industrials Make Larger Sales.

The tendency of the curb market at the opening to continue the firm tone of Tuesday was disturbed as the day progressed, and prices made recessions, reflecting the uncertainty of the market on the Exchange. There was more interest in the industrial list yesterday, though the total sales were small. Mackay Companies sold 1,500 shares, closing ⅝ down, at 62¼, and Central Foundry sold 1,000 shares. Bethlehem Steel opened 2 points below Tuesday's close and lost ¾ on trading in 800 shares, closing at 30.

Coppers were fairly active, but irregular. With few exceptions fractional losses were the result of the day's trading.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

REPUBLIC IRON AND STEEL.

Company Earned $1,100,000 in the Quarter Ended March 31.

The Republic Iron and Steel Company's report for the quarter ended March 31 shows earnings of $1,100,000, or at the rate of $4,400,000 a year, breaking all records. In 1900, the best previous year in the company's history, the total for the fiscal year was $3,643,728.

In the year ended June 30, 1904, there was a deficit of $234,188, which was increased to $611,484, after the payment of a dividend on the preferred stock. At the present rate the earnings, after the payment of 7 per cent. on the preferred stock, will equal a dividend of 11 per cent. on the common stock.

Bankers' Annual Convention.

The New York State Bankers' Association's thirteenth annual convention will be held at the Hotel Champlain, Bluff Point, N. Y., on July 5 and 6. President Alfred H. Curtis has appointed the following Committee of Arrangements: David H. Pierson, Cashier of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, Chairman; Charles Elliot Warren, Cashier of the Lincoln National Bank; Edward O. Eldredge, Cashier of the People's Bank of Buffalo, and C. S. Johnson, Cashier of the First National Bank of Plattsburg.

CALL MONEY AT 19 PER CENT.

Highest Rate for the First Week in April Since 1893.

Call money rose yesterday to 19 per cent., which is the highest rate reached in the first week of April in any year since 1893, when call money loaned at 25 per cent. The highest rate previously quoted this week was 12 per cent. The further advance, which occurred yesterday, caused considerable surprise in Wall Street. It had been anticipated that the high rates the first of the week would be quickly followed by a more plentiful supply of funds, and many were at a loss yesterday to explain the continuance of unusually high rates. The most generally accepted view of the matter was that yesterday's abnormal call money rates were due to a demand for currency by out-of-town banks, which came just at the time when the New York City banks were obliged to care for the April 1 disbursements. The banks were, therefore, in a poor position to stand the shipment of large sums to other parts of the country.

The advance in call money yesterday was reflected in the foreign exchange market by a sharp decline, which brought demand sterling down to 4.8515, a drop of 15 points. No further takings of gold were announced, but the opinion was expressed in banking circles that the high rates for money here and the reaction in exchange made it very likely that gold imports will be arranged in the near future. Rumor had it that the National City Bank had secured more gold in Germany, but this report, it was learned, was unfounded.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Moderate Buying of Pig Iron to Offset a Long Strike.

Commenting on the iron and steel situation, The Iron Age says:

> There has been some buying of pig iron as a protection against a protracted strike, but the movement has reached only moderate proportions. The foundry trade is on the tip toe of expectation over the outcome of the bids for 12,000 tons of iron for the Westinghouse interests. * * *
> The Steel Corporation has bought a little Bessemer iron and is expected to purchase more soon for April requirements. The furnaces of the corporation have broken all records during March, having made in that month 1,001,226 tons as compared with the best previous achievement of 947,476 tons in October, 1905.
> The rail mills are under increasing pressure, and it is becoming a serious problem now to arrange rolling sheets so as to meet deliveries far toward the end of the year. Reports are current that at least one large system is seeking relief by turning to foreign rail makers, hopeless though that step may seem.

The output of the Carnegie steel works for March has broken all records. The Buffalo and Susquehanna Iron Company reports net earnings for the past eight months of $377,000. This is the period during which its second furnace has been in blast. The company is unable to supply the demand for its product, which is a high grade of foundry pig.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 4.—The Iron Trade Review to-morrow will say:

"Reports indicate that nearly all manufacturers are well supplied with coal, and the miners' strike will probably not cause much inconvenience unless long continued. A number of bar iron mills, however, will not be able to continue operations more than a few weeks.

"The pig iron market is a little more lively. Steel bar manufacturers have reaffirmed prices, and very little business is appearing. Implement manufacturers are inclined to await developments, as most of their contracts for the year ending July 1 are $4 per ton below present quotations. The rail market continues active.

"The new business of the American Bridge Company for March has been slightly in excess of 60,000 tons. Active preparations are being made throughout the country for building operations, and it is expected that the showing for the year will make a new record."

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Copper metal in the London market yesterday made a decline of 5 shillings for spot from the closing price of Tuesday. Futures advanced a like amount. The closing quotations were: Spot, £84 5s; futures, £82 5s. A feature of the metal market was the sharp advances in tin and antimony. Pig tin for immediate delivery went up £2 10s, to £174, a new high record. Antimony advanced £7 from the previous quotation, to £85, three times the low price of a year ago.

The closing prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of the preceding day:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—Trading on the floor of the local Exchange was dull and narrow, except for the arbitrage transactions in Reading and United States Steel common. These issues furnished nearly two-thirds of the total business, which was restricted to about 34,000 shares. And their prices followed closely the fluctuations made in New York. Philadelphia Rapid Transit became a little active in the last hour, when 1,100 shares were sold at 28⅝, as compared with 29 at the close Tuesday. Philadelphia Electric was quiet and heavy pending the promised introduction in City Councils to-morrow of the ordinance permitting the Comonwealth Electric Company to lease the Keystone Telephone conduits and compete for local municipal and private lighting.

Less than 800 shares of the Philadelphia Electric stock were sold, however, and all offerings were well taken around 8. After an early display of irregularity Lehigh Valley rallied in the final hours and closed firm, with nearly 1,500 shares selling. Pennsylvania Railroad was well supported, but Cambria Steel sold off a fraction, to 36. United Gas sold quietly between 94½ and 95. Operations in the rest of the list were without either volume or especial feature.

New Seaboard President.

The Directors of the Seaboard Air Line received the resignation of President J. M. Barr yesterday, and elected in his place Alfred Walter of Baltimore, who has at various times been connected with the Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie, and Lehigh Valley Railroads. He was President of the latter road from 1897 to 1902. Mr. Barr's resignation was in line with his determination, expressed early in the Winter, to give up some of his activities. He will continue in the Directorate of the road.

MILES M. O'BRIEN HEADS NEW AMSTERDAM BANK

Elected Its President in Place of R. R. Moore, Resigned.

MORSE'S CONTROL STRONGER

The Board Reduced—Mr. Moore Won't Discuss a Report That He Will Enter Other Business.

Miles M. O'Brien, Vice President of the Mercantile National, one of the Morse chain of banks, became President of the New Amsterdam National Bank yesterday. He succeeded R. R. Moore, who has retired from all connection with the New Amsterdam.

Mr. O'Brien was elected to the Presidency of the New Amsterdam National Bank at a meeting of the Board of Directors on Tuesday, and began the discharge of his new duties yesterday morning. He retains his post of Vice President of the Mercantile.

The retirement of Mr. Moore, who has been President of the New Amsterdam since 1901, was not generally expected. Mr. Moore said yesterday that he had retired voluntarily, and intimated that in a few days he would give out a statement as to his plans for the future. The New Amsterdam Bank officials said they understood that Mr. Moore was to engage in other business.

Coincidently with the change in the Presidency of the New Amsterdam, the Board of Directors of the bank was reduced in numbers from twelve to ten members, to include C. T. Barney, John F. Carroll, Joseph D. Carroll, W. M. Healey, R. V. Lewis, C. W. Morse, H. F. Morse, Louis Stern, Miles M. O'Brien, and George W. Wilder. R. R. Moore, J. Romaine Brown, Frank Curtiss, and F. K. Sturgis were dropped from membership on the board.

Although none of the board will say so, the new personnel is accepted as one giving Charles W. Morse more power in the control of the bank. A short time ago George J. Baumann, Cashier of the bank, was promoted to a Vice Presidency as an associate of Mr. Morse, and Mr. Baumann is now actively engaged in the work of the two offices. Edward O. Eldredge of Owego succeeds Mr. Baumann as Cashier. The office of Associate Vice President was created especially for Mr. Baumann.

Mr. O'Brien made this statement yesterday regarding his new post:

"I was approached by representatives of the Board of Directors of the New Amsterdam Bank several days ago and asked if I would accept the office of President of the institution. I took time to consider it, and finally agreed to accept the place provided I should be allowed to retain my post as Vice President of the Mercantile. This was agreed to, and on Tuesday I was elected. I do not believe that any more changes in the bank are in prospect. I understand that Mr. Moore is to engage in other business."

Mr. Moore said:

"I submitted my resignation several days ago and it was accepted, to take effect to-day. The resignation was offered voluntarily. I am not prepared to say what my future plans are, but I may announce them later. I would not say that I am to 'engage in other business.' That is a matter I cannot discuss now."

Mr. O'Brien was President of the Broadway National Bank in 1901. Later, when it was consolidated with the Mercantile and Seventh National Banks under the joint name of the Mercantile National Bank, he became first Vice President of the merged institution. He was a member of the Board of Education from 1882 to 1904, and its President after the consolidation of the boroughs. He established the Commercial High School of New York. The officers of the New Amsterdam National Bank now are: Miles M. O'Brien, President; Charles W. Morse and George J. Baumann, Vice Presidents; Edward O. Eldredge, Cashier, and John G. Hemerich, Assistant Cashier.

About a month ago an attempt was made to rob Mr. Moore at the Hotel Astor by Henry Tillsbury, who, posing as John Cornish, a Pinkerton detective agent, enticed the bank President to a room at the hotel. Tillsbury represented that he wanted to tell Mr. Moore about a plan on foot to rob the New Amsterdam Bank. Mr. Moore went to the hotel followed by two detectives and caused Tillsbury's arrest.

BROOKLYN BANKS MERGED.

The Greater Union Bank Will Have a Capital of $1,000,000.

The projected merger of the People's Bank and the Union Bank, both of Brooklyn, was accomplished yesterday at a special meeting of the stockholders of the two banks. The stockholders of the Union Bank, which absorbs the People's Bank, voted at the same time to increase the capital $500,000, making the total capital of the merged institutions $1,000,000.

The People's Bank and its Hancock branch will be conducted as branches of the Union Bank. D. A. Sullivan will be President of the enlarged Union Bank, and G. W. Spencer will manage the People's branch.

The Alliance Realty Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. This is an increase of ¼ to 1 per cent. over the previous payment, and places the stock on a 7 per cent. basis. The dividend is payable April 16.

The syndicate which underwrote $25,000,000 of the 4 per cent. collateral bonds of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, it was announced yesterday, has been dissolved.

It is stated that economies effected in the management of the Clyde Steamship Company since it passed under the control of Charles W. Morse will amount to $110,000 a year. The present bond interest is $200,000 per annum, and the net earnings are said to be now at the rate of four times the interest charge.

A. A. Housman will sail on the Kronprinz Wilhelm next Tuesday. He will be gone for an indefinite time on business.

The Directors of the Vulcan Detinning Company, besides the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock, have declared an extra dividend of 1 per cent. These extra dividends have been declared so regularly that the stock may be practically considered as on a 9 per cent. basis.

A NEW HUDSON TRUST.

It Is the United National Bank, Converted by the Thomas Interests.

The Thomas interests in the United National Bank, in which Mr. Thomas and his associates acquired a controlling interest a few months ago, have taken the final step in their plan to convert the bank into a trust company. There was incorporated at Albany yesterday the Hudson Trust Company, with a capital of $1,000,000. The Directors are O. F. Thomas, E. R. Chapman, E. R. Thomas, William L. Moyer, John Gerkin, William J. Lewis, and Henry C. Stranahan.

All of these men are Directors of the United National. They were signers of a circular sent to stockholders of the bank some time ago apprising them of the plan of the Directors to change the institution into a trust company. There is another Hudson Trust Company, whose name is familiar in Wall Street. It is a New Jersey corporation, however, the transfer agent of the United States Steel Corporation, and, though its main office is in Hoboken, it conducts a branch at 71 Broadway.

SWORE OFF ON CIGARETTES.

Court Frees Offender on His Taking Oath to Quit Smoking.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4. — Judge Charles B. Staples, sitting in the Criminal Court, to-day imposed a novel sentence upon Charles Hollister, Jr., of Belmont, N. Y.

Hollister pleaded guilty to three indictments charging false pretense, and Judge Staples suspended sentence on condition that Hollister make oath before the Clerk of the Court that he would abstain from the use of cigarettes for the period of one year. He is also required to report once a month by letter to Judge Staples.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Reciprocity Applies Only to Direct Shipments—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Eugene G. Hay, the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a claim filed by C. H. Wyman & Co. of St. Louis. The firm imported brandy and still wine which were concededly of French production. The merchandise was claimed by the importers to be entitled to the reduction in duties provided for in the reciprocity treaty between this country and France. It happened, however, that the goods were exported from Germany, and on this account the board holds that full duties must be paid.

General Appraiser Hay also wrote a decision denying protests filed by Daniel Frank & Co., Boston, and Sichel & Co., Portland, Me. The board held that the customs officers were within their rights in having included the Cuban Internal Revenue tax in the dutiable value of merchandise imported from Cuba.

Other protests overruled were filed by Perry Ryer & Co., R. H. Macy & Co., M. J. Corbett & Co., Paul Puttmann, the Siegel-Cooper Company, and others, New York, and the Rosenthal-Sloan Millinery Company, St. Louis, Mo.

The board sustained claims filed by Henry Glass & Co., Julius Wile, Sons & Co., and T. H. La Petra, New York.

Jacobs, who did business as the Monarch Coal Company at 42 Broadway, whose liabilities were $19,877 and assets $1,212, and to Arnold Weiss, who did business as A. Out of Town.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y.—A petition in bankruptcy against the Albany Material and Construction Company of this city has been filed with Judge Ray at Syracuse by Albany creditors. It is alleged in the papers that the company has sold out to the Granite Construction Company with intent to defraud its creditors. The Material and Construction Company recently had a contract under the Albany Water Department annulled after it had expended $20,000. The assets and liabilities are not known.

SAVOY HOTEL

LONDON.

OVERLOOKING THE RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

Never has the Press of England shown greater unanimity than in its praise of the additions and improvements to the Savoy Hotel, London, upon which have been spent upwards of one million pounds sterling.

The new building is characterized by extreme luxuriousness.
The Times.

The magnificent buildings of the Savoy make a truly noble show.
Daily Telegraph.

The building is palatial—the greatest possible comfort combined with luxury.—Morning Post.

One of the most sumptuous and costly interiors in London.
Daily Graphic.

All is peace and refinement.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A scale of luxury hitherto unattempted in any hotel in London.
New York Tribune.

More beautiful than ever.—Morning Leader.

A delight to the eye—no lavishness seems to have been grudged.
Sportsman.

One of the handsomest of London edifices.—Globe.

Elegance and artistic character are everywhere. Nothing has been omitted that could conduce to the comfort and content of the visitor.
Ladies' Field.

The most beautiful hotel in Europe.—Outlook.

An ideal home for twentieth century London—Queen.

The great pile of buildings included in this latest addition to the architectural sites of London forms a combination of luxury and beauty which cannot be surpassed in the wide world. The New Savoy is a vast palace of a thousand splendours, of a thousand surprising and delightful innovations. Nothing that could contribute to the comfort, the smoothness, and the joy of life is wanting which the inventive genius of America and Europe could supply, or that the taste and skill of the world's schools of art in all its branches could furnish. The place is, in its way, a very triumph of genius. Its match is not to be found in London, nor in Paris, nor, indeed, in any capital of this little planet. To do it justice in a necessarily brief article is impossible. Having rambled through its glorious salons and galleries, and ante-chambers, up and down marble staircases of noble breadth, beneath panelled ceilings, adorned in relief with exquisite golden tracery, one feels that all this royal magnificence, this opulent beauty, might well inspire a volume which should be bound in white satin and gold.—Western Mail.

PARENTS' DAY IN SCHOOL DRAWS MANY MOTHERS

After Supt. Maxwell Denounces Tea, They All Have Some.

ONE LONE FATHER PRESENT

At Least So 'Twas Reported—There Is No Cause for Overstudy, Declares Maxwell.

They celebrated Parents' Day at Public School No. 6, Madison Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street, yesterday. It was the first occasion of the kind at the school. There was a crowd of mothers present, and it was reported that one father ventured into the school building, but that was not certain. The children went through different kinds of work for the visitors, giving what some one called a "four-ring circus," which prevented crowding and enabled each mother to see all the work of her own child.

In four different rooms in the building exercises were going on at the same time. There were schoolyard games in one room, and rooms where little ones sang about "Five Little Chickadees," told the different divisions of the week, washing, ironing, sweeping, &c., as they sang "Here We Go Round the Mulberry Bush." In another room they had bean-bag lessons and "Derby Jigs," and in the gymnasium they did hoop drills and played reformed basket ball. They played "Find the Ring" and "Simon Says" this, that, and the other, to learn quick obedience.

This was in the girls' department under Miss Katherine Blake, and at the same time the boys' department, under Dr. Maurice J. Thompson, was doing various lines of work. It was from the boys' department that the orchestra which furnished the music was drawn.

Supt. Maxwell was the speaker of the day, and asked for the co-operation of the parents in public-school work.

"You have the children nineteen hours a day and we have them only five," said Dr. Maxwell, "and much depends upon your work. How many of the mothers have the children do the physical exercises they are taught in the school for a few minutes night and morning? I am certain from your faces that none of you do, and I would venture to suggest those exercises for the mothers themselves. If they tried them there would be less neurasthenia than there is now. I was brought up on the other side of the water and nothing has surprised me so much here as the little walking done by women. I have been in the Summer to a big hotel or boarding house and seen women holding down the chairs on the piazza from early morning to late at night. If you are wise you will have your daughters walk, and you will walk yourselves.

"An important consideration for the growing girl is her diet. Girls, if they were allowed, would subsist on candy and cake and pickles. You make millionaires of the candy makers in New York, for the women and girls eat candy all the time. Stop the candy, stop the pickles and most of the cake, and don't give the children tea or coffee. They should drink milk.

"We hear of children who sit up studying their lessons until 11 or 12 o'clock at night. No teacher gives a child exercises that require that amount of study. You think the children are studying with their heads over their books, but they are not; they are dreaming. Make a rule that the lessons shall be learned in an hour or not at all, and see what will happen. What better can you teach your child than to concentrate its mind on his work? Then if the lessons are not learned it is time to go to the teacher."

Dr. Isabel Strong Smart spoke to the mothers upon the necessity of hygienic living for the children—no tea or coffee, and plenty of sleep.

"Imagine a little child having nervous worry!" said Dr. Smart, "but many do."

After Supt. Maxwell had finished denouncing tea, the guests were all invited to have some. They accepted unanimously.

FOOLED POLICE SEVEN YEARS.

Jordan Merely Grew a Beard and Called Himself Denny.

The possibilities of New York as a refuge for anybody desiring to lose himself from friends and foes alike were strikingly illustrated yesterday, when the arraignment of George L. Jordan before Recorder Goff in General Sessions brought to light the fact that, although badly wanted by the police for seven years, Jordan has not only lived but done business right here during all but a short part of that time.

To protect himself Jordan took two precautions only—he grew a long beard, and changed his name to Mark Denny. He even opened a real estate office under this name, and would have continued to live in obscurity had not his growing sense of security tempted him into an attempt to swindle a man who had all along known his identity.

Jordan came here in 1898 as a duly accredited representative of the British Government to buy horses for the Boer war. He gave the impression that he was an army officer, and he looked the part. Letters of introduction and his own fine bearing opened many desirable doors to him. He lived well and seemed to have plenty of money. One day the banking firm of R. C. Bennett & Co. of 18 Wall Street discovered that the name of one of their clients, H. P. Fyse, had been forged to a promissory note for $20,000 with so much cleverness that the spurious document had been cashed by them without a moment's hesitation. The forgery was easily traceable to Jordan, and a warrant was sworn out.

There were several things connected with the crime which made the firm very anxious to bring the offender to justice. But he had disappeared completely, and, though an indictment was returned, all efforts to find him proved unavailing. That was in 1899. Nothing more was heard of Jordan until a few days ago Lawyer J. Woolsey Shepard, attorney for Bennett & Co., received a visit from a professional friend with whom he shared offices several years ago. Mr. Shepard did not even recall the name of Jordan until his friend mentioned the forgery.

"Would you still care to get hold of the man?" asked the visitor.

"Indeed I would," cried Mr. Shepard.

"Do you remember coming home one night while we were living together and meeting me in the hallway on my way out in company with another man?" asked his friend.

"I think I do," ventured Mr. Shepard.

"That was Jordan," said his visitor. And then he told about the indicted man's new name and whereabouts.

"I took pity on him," he added, "and though I have known him these fifteen years, and knew of the break he made seven years ago, I kept his secret and helped him all I could. But the other day I caught him trying to bunco me as he had buncoed others. And then I made up my mind to shield him no longer."

Jordan occupied comfortable apartments at 210 West Eighty-eighth Street, and there he was arrested by Roundsman Beery of the District Attorney's staff. It was said yesterday that he has been fairly successful as a real estate dealer, though doing business on a scale meant not to attract too much attention.

When arraigned in court yesteday, Jordan looked much older than sixty, which is his age, and those who seven years ago were impressed by the presence of the alleged cavalry officer would have had great difficulty in recognizing him in the broken-down old man who leaned wearily against the prisoners' bar.

He was remanded to the Tombs to await trial. Although the District Attorney asked that bail be fixed at $20,000 only, the Recorder put it at $25,000.

SHE TOOK THE SECURITY.

Says Mr. Woodman, Who Lent $2,909, Accusing Miss Chase.

Helen H. Chase of 120 West 112th Street was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Terry and locked up in Ludlow Street jail in default of $2,000 bail on an order issued by Justice Greenbaum of the Supreme Court in an action begun by George H. Woodman to recover $2,909 from her.

According to Woodman's complaint, when the defendant lived at 125 West 111th Street on Dec. 30 last he lent her $2,659 on a quantity of jewelry and a warehouse receipt for a phaeton and harness stored in Brooklyn. Woodman says that the jewelry and receipt were displayed on a table in her apartments, and that as soon as he made the loan she grabbed the property and locked it in a trunk. He complains that he has been unable to get either the money or jewelry. He adds $250 for interest.

James H. Hickey of 41 Wall Street is Woodman's attorney.

NATHAN BOY WITH HIS FATHER

Youngster Who Wished to be a Soldier Put in His Parent's Custody.

Justice Clinch, in the Supreme Court, directed yesterday that Albert Samuel Nathan, the eleven-year-old son of Ralph Nathan, who ran away to West Point in the hope of some day becoming a soldier, should be put temporarily in the Weingart Institute. Father and son returned to court later, and the father reported that the boy could not be received there. The Justice then told the boy's father to take care of him himself pending the report of a hearing.

Young Nathan was in court as the result of a writ of habeas corpus sworn out by the boy's grandmother, Mrs. Fannie Rogers of 1 West 128th Street. Since the boy's return from West Point he has been in the custody of the Gerry Society, which was directed to show cause why Albert should not be turned over to his grandmother instead of to his father. The petition alleged that the father was a common gambler, and not a fit custodian for the boy. The argument disclosed a family quarrel, and James J. Nealis was appointed referee to take the testimony.

Nathan said that his mother-in-law had made trouble for him ever since the night of his marriage on Oct. 23, 1893. His wife died on Dec. 24, 1904, and since then he had provided for his children. He denied that he was a gambler.

There are four of the Nathan children, and Mrs. Rogers has charge of the two youngest of them.

BIG CITY WATER BOARD MAY HAVE TO GET OUT

Bill to be Reported Legislating Them from Office.

OUTLAY MAY BE WASTED

Catskill Supply Plan Denounced as Extravagant and Unnecessary—Mayor Is for It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—Strenuous opposition to the plans of the New York City Water Board developed in several directions today. The Assembly Committee on Water Supply decided to report out the bill legislating out of office the entire City Water Board, and at the joint hearing on the Saxe Water bills it was stated that New York could not avail itself of the Catskill supply without a constitutional amendment permitting the flooding of State forest lands.

It was also shown that the large sums of money now being expended by the City Board owing to the uncertainty which surrounds the scheme may be an entire waste, and it may be years before anything along the line of the Catskill supply can be accomplished.

The Water Board is composed of J. Edward Simmons, Charles N. Chadwick, and Charles A. Shaw, each of whom receive $12,000 a year. J. Waldo Smith, the Chief Engineer, gets $16,000 a year. John R. Freeman of Providence, R. I., consulting engineer, gets $12,000 a year, while Frederic P. Stearns of Boston, who holds a like position, receives $100 a day. Several other engineers get salaries ranging from $6,000 to $1,800 a year.

"When I wrote to the City Board telling it about the constitutional trouble," said Chairman Agnew, "all I got in reply was a note telling me that my letter had been received."

Senator Saxe's bills seek the repeal of the laws that prohibit New York from entering Suffolk and Dutchess Counties. A number of Dutchess County merchants who were on hand approved the repeal and asked only that the Dutchess County water supply, so far as it was needed in the county itself, be not interfered with.

Thomas A. Fulton, Alderman Myers, and Frank A. Moss led a delegation from New York City in favor of the Saxe bills. They assailed the Catskill plan as extravagant, unnecessary, and as antagonistic to the general scheme of water for all cities and villages in Eastern New York, which ultimately will have to be adopted.

"The purpose of my bills," said Senator Saxe, in opening the hearing, "is to save the city an expense of $300,000,000. We want time in which to think over this Catskill project. It's a serious undertaking."

Mr. Moss, who said he represented the City Vigilance League and other organizations, said the Catskill scheme was railroaded through, that the plan was suddenly presented to the city Water Board and adopted within fifteen minutes after it was received. It was not until the proposition was laid before the State Water Supply Commission that the people of New York began to understand its full import.

"The estimate of the cost, $160,000,000, is a mere guess," said Mr. Moss. "I am told that $200,000,000 would be a conservative estimate. We are asked to spend this enormous sum and devastate the State park in the Catskills to obtain a limited supply of water." He favored the Dutchess and Suffolk County water plans.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Guy said that Mayor McClellan was in favor of the repeal of the Burr and Smith laws shutting New York out of these counties, but that he was opposed to the abandonment of the Catskill plan. He asserted that the city would have to pay larger indirect damages in Dutchess County than in Ulster.

The tremendous amount of water which is wasted in any city by carelessness and defective faucets was well illustrated by a statement made by E. H. Fulton of New York before the Senate Judiciary Committee this afternoon. "A trickle as large as a toothpick from a faucet will waste sixty gallons a day; one as large as a lead pencil will waste 1,300 gallons," he said. "Few people realize this, and a stoppage of these small wastes by the use of two-cent washers would greatly reduce the water consumption of any city."

The statement was made in a hearing on the Saxe bill to repeal the acts which exclude New York City from taking water from Nassau County or from the Fishkill and Wappingers Creeks.

OBJECTED TO ARCANUM RATES

Expelled Officer Must Show Why the Court Should Not Let Him Stay Out.

S. M. Lindsley, a Utica lawyer, applied yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Rogers of Watertown, now sitting in the Supreme Court of this department, for an order directing Frank Z. Wilcox to show cause at Syracuse on Saturday why a temporary injunctions restraining Supreme Regent Wiggins of the Royal Arcanum from carrying out an order issued by the Supreme Regent expelling Wilcox from the Royal Arcanum should not be dissolved

A year ago, when the Royal Arcanum raised their assessment, Wilcox, who is a member of a Syracuse council, it is alleged made many speeches against the Supreme Council. Charges were preferred against him, and W. F. McConnell of Syracuse, Dr. W. A. Griffith of Brooklyn, and Charles E. Cornell of Ithaca were appointed a committee to investigate the charges. The committee found Wilcox guilty and recommended his expulsion. Supreme Regent Wiggins approved the order, and on March 15 issued a proclamation expelling Wilcox from the order.

WAINWRIGHT'S BOX EMPTY.

No Trace of Dr. Pinault's Jewels in Thief's Strongbox.

When Central Office detectives opened yesterday the second safe deposit box of Bartlett, alias Wainwright, &c., the Minneapolis "Raffles," they were surprised to find only a copy of a newspaper and a lot of tissue paper. There was nothing else in the safe.

The tissue paper is of the sort used by jewelers, and it is believed that Bartlett had in the box some of the jewelry he stole from the Minneapolis physician, Dr. Nicholas Pinault. The requisition papers for the burglar have not yet reached Headquarters.

Wife's Word Convicts Him.

The testimony of his wife convicted Henry Pratley, a young Englishman, in General Sessions, yesterday, when he was tried on the charge of stealing a gold purse belonging to Mrs. Helen M. Sheehan. The purse was lost last June in the Hotel Cumberland, at Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street, of which Mrs. Sheehan's husband is a part owner. Pratley, who was working there at the time as a waiter, was suspected, but denied having seen the purse.

It was shown that Pratley was sent to Elmira Reformatory in 1885, and that he had served several terms in prison since that time. He will be sentenced to-morrow.

WHAT IS ANT-I-WET?

MEN who have not worn Ant-I-Wet clothing nor seen them on their friends, may infer that the chief attribute of Ant-I-Wet clothing is their moisture-proofness.

This is an error; it is but ONE of the twelve points of excellence which we have from time to time published.

At this time we refer to the chief point, and that is the quality of the fabrics. Uniformly excellent, whether in a Suit, Top Coat or Rain Coat, and with all this goodness, prices begin as moderately as

THE MINERS PROPOSE A NEW ARBITRATION

Would Let Judge Gray and Conciliation Board Adjudicate.

OPERATORS DELAY ANSWER

Will Think It Over and Reply on Monday—But They Issue an Unconciliatory Statement.

Arbitration by the present Conciliation Board, with United States Circuit Court Judge George Gray, or some person appointed by him, as Chairman and umpire, is the solution of the anthracite coal difficulties proposed by the miners. The answer of the operators willl not be known until Monday, but a statement issued last night on their behalf shows that they regard some of the miners' demands as entirely inadmissible, and are in no conciliatory mood.

In not a single point have the miners abated their demands. At the meeting with the operators yesterday they reiterated their demands for a 10 per cent. increase in wages, the eight-hour day, the revision of the Conciliation Board, and the "check-off" system, which, the operators say, binds them not only to recognize the union, but to act as its agent in the collection of dues from union and non-union hands alike.

The only point they conceded was that that if the operators would consent to arbitration the Scales Committee would order the miners to return to work at once, pending the award of the Conciliation Board on the matters brought before it. This award, as far as wages are concerned, would take effect from April 1, last, the day on which the three-year agreement of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission expired, and would continue in force for two years from that date. Ratification by a general convention of miners, however, would be necessary after the sub-committees of miners and operators had come to a settlement and the men had returned to work.

None of the operators would make any public comment upon the suggestion of the miners, but it was learned that they felt that the question was so important that hey must consult the independent operators and other interests directly concerned, before giving their answer.

In the meantime, they put forth a caustic criticism on one or two points of the miners' demands. They pointed out that the "check-off" system would make every operator a collecting agency for the strike funds of the miners, and quoted the declaration of the Strike Commission on the general subject of unionism and freedom of labor.

The proposal for a two-year agreement they stigmatized as calculated to bring the readjustment of their relations with their employes back to a Presidential year, "thus affording a new opportunity to make this great industry the football of politics."

The full Scales Committee of the miners was in session yesterday morning at the Ashland House for about twenty minutes. It was called to hear the decision that the sub-committee had come to as to the exact form in which the demand for arbitration was to be presented to the operators. It was little more than a formal gathering, and the only other business that came before it was the report made by Secretary Dempsey of District No. 1 that there was trouble at Yatesville, Penn.

While the meeting was in session he was called to the telephone to receive a report fro mthe union's representative in that place that the State constabulary were searching the houses of miners near the Fernwood colliery for firearms. The colliery belongs to the Erie Coal Company, and there was, it is said, fear that the strikers might burn down the breaker.

The conference with the operators was called for 1 o'clock at the Jersey Central Building, 143 Liberty Street. No one was allowed to be present except the seven operators and seven representatives of the miners, but the usual crowd gathered in the corridors. The meeting opened with the reading by John Mitchell of the proposition of the miners. It was as follows:

> The committee appointed by the Shamokin convention on Dec. 14 last, representing the employes of the various companies operating the mines, washeries, and breakers in the anthracite coal region, having under consideration our propositions to you, dated Feb. 27, together with your counter proposition of March 9, which was for the continuation for three years of the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission, and the letter from the Governor of Pennsylvania, have decided that in view of the great public interests involved, aside from those we represent directly, it is our duty to make some further effort and even a sacrifice of what we believe to be justly our due in the matter of wages and conditions of employment, in order that a great public calamity may be avoided.
> Therefore we propose that, subject to the approval of a convention of anthracite mine workers, which shall be called at the earliest date possible, differences between us, as stated in our propositions and your counter proposal, be referred for a determination and settlement to a Board of Arbitration, composed of the members of the present Board of Conciliation, provided for in the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission, with Judge George Gray or any person he may appoint, to act as Chairman and umpire.
> A decision of this tribunal of a majority of the members thereof, in so far as it influences wages, shall be effective from April 1, 1906, and continue in force to March 31, 1908; such decision to be final and binding on all parties and interests.
> The employes of the anthracite mines, washeries, and breakers to resume work and to continue at work pending the decision of the board.
> (Signed.) John Mitchell, T. D. Nicholls, John T. Dempsey, W. H. Dettrey, John P. Gallagher, John Fahy, and George W. Hartlein.

The operators, when they had heard this document read, consulted briefly among themselves, and then asked for an adjournment. They said that the proposals involved large questions, and that there were other interests affected by the matter, which were not fully represented in the conference. They desired time to consult with these, and they therefore suggested that the committees should come together again on Monday at 1:30 o'clock. The miners assented, and the conference broke up.

At first Mitchell would not answer questions.

"Will there be another conference?" he was asked.

"I have nothing to say," he replied.

The operators waited until the miners had withdrawn and then came out one by one. First appeared Mr. Baer, walking briskly on the way up stairs to his office. He had nothing to say, and did not think there would be anything to say later. Probably the way Mr. Mitchell had taken his remarks after the first conference lingered in his memory. Then came Mr. Truesdale. He was likewise in a reticent mood. Up stairs in the office of Mr. Thomas the operators gathered bby themselves.

At the Ashland House there was little excitement. Mr. Mitchell, a few minutes after he got back, decided to make his request to the operators public. He came down stairs, went up to the cigar stand,

STRIKERS USE DYNAMITE.

Mine Steam Pipe Destroyed—Riots Continue in Pennsylvania.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 5.—More acts of violence were reported to-day in this region by coal companies, while the State mounted police gave further evidence of their efficiency.

At 2 o'clock this morning the entire city was shaken by a terrific explosion which was heard ten miles away. An investigation revealed the fact that a quantity of dynamite had been placed under the four-inch steampipe conveying steam to run the fans at the Franklin Colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, close to this city, and fifty feet of the pipe had been blown to pieces.

A pole bearing electric light wires to the Fernwood colliery of the Hillside Coal Company, where fifty workers and sixteen guards are stationed, was cut down and the light supply cut off during the night. This morning some shots were fired at the colliery. The company thereupon decided to order the 300 Italians residing at East Boston, near the colliery, to leave their houses, and four troopers were detailed to serve the notices, but these are not yet made out.

Seven of the rioters who at the muzzles of guns drove off the workers at the West End Washery at Mocanaqua yesterday were captured by a force of ten State troopers and local constables to-day.

That the State troopers mean business was evident when three men who fled when at a distance of 300 yards were called upon to halt. The tropers whipped out their big army pistols and fired fifteen shots, which struck all about the fleeing men, but did not hit any of them. Two escaped, but the third, Carlo Cache, the leader of the mob which raided the workings yesterday, was captured.

Each of the prisoners taken during the day was armed with a stiletto or a revolver. They were brought to this city and charged with riot, threats, carrying concealed weapons, and pointing guns, and were sent to jail by Alderman Pollock in default of $1,500 bail in each case.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 5.—National Executive Committeeman Joseph Sharpe of the United Mine Workers led a party of striking miners on the Madison Mine of the Keystone Coal Company, near Irwin, this morning, and a fierce stonefight resulted, in which the strikers were driven off and forced to wade a creek. When the party appeared at the mine company's property for the purpose of inducing the thousand men in the mine to quit work, they were met by company guards and employes and forced back. They made a second attempt to reach the mine, and were driven back with stones and forced to wade a creek.

At the Edna mines shooting continued throughout last night, the strikers endeavoring to scare men who wanted to work from slipping into the mines in the darkness. In this district no progress was made toward starting the mines to-day. About as many men were at work as yesterday. The miners of the independent mines want all those to whom the scale has been granted to remain out for a week or two until they get settled up. Thye say they will march on the working mines and tie up the district unless their scale is signed soon.

New officials of the district, elected to take the place of officials ordered removed by the district convention appeared at headquarters to-day and demanded possession, which was refused. President Dolan is still holding the fort and refuses to give up. The new officers will take their case to court.

Fortythree of the mines of the Pittsburg Coal Company are reported in operation, and with the adjourning of the district convention here to-day it is expected that it will be a few days more when all the mines in this district will be working. This was said to apply as well to the independent operators who have heretofore fought the granting of the advance demanded by the miners as to those operators who have already signed the scale.

ESCAPED FROM SUNKEN SHIP.

Extraordinary Story of the Only Survivor of the Borodino.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 5.—Ushim, an able seaman and the sole survivor of those who were on board the battleship Borodino when she was sunk in the battle of the Sea of Japan, has returned to St. Petersburg with a remarkable story of his escape.

He says he was in the turret when the ship turned turtle. He tried to reach a porthole, but the suction of the water forced him back. He finally found a small air space under the roof, where he managed to breathe, and there he undressed. After the ship had sunk he located the port gun with his foot and plunged down, coming out on the surface of the water. He clung to a piece of wreckage until he was picked up by a Japanese boat, which took him a prisoner to Japan.

A SOCIETY REVIVAL.

Miss Duncan Runs It and It Is Not for Reporters.

Society held a revival meeting in the Hotel St. Regis yesterday afternoon. It was attended by many women, and no one was admitted except on production of an invitation card.

The invitations were sent out by Miss Ethel Thompson of 47 East Sixty-seventh Street, but the principal in the affair was Miss Amy L. Duncan of 5 East Sixty-fourth Street. Miss Duncan gave a talk on religion, after which the company had tea.

Miss Duncan is the leader of a revival movement in sympathy with that which has swept through fashionable England. To judge by the numbers of expensively dressed women who swept into the St. Regis drawing room, the revival here is likely to be successful. Reporters were not admitted. One, after many adventures, got through the outposts of uniformed guards to the inner circle, where he was confronted by Miss Duncan herself.

"We are going to talk about Christ," she said, "and do not care to let any one in without an invitation."

May Buy Fort Nonsense Site.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 5.—Negotiations are said to be pending for the purchase of the Fort Nonsense tract in this city for the purpose of constructing a private drive over the fort range of hills to Bernardsville, and a large hotel on the spot where the old fort once stood. It was at Fort Nonsense that Washington and his army encamped during the Winter of 1777. Under Washington's orders a fort was built, and was afterward torn down. Because of this it was called Fort Nonsense.

Dupont, Isman, and Other Capitalists in the New Company—Pledge of Independence.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—Application for a charter was made by the Philadelphia Elevated and Subway Company in Harrisburg to-day, under which the company proposes to build an elevated and subway passenger railway between Sixty-third Street and the Delaware River over the same route practically as was embraced in the recently abandoned project of the Philadelphia & Western Railway Company.

Under the act of June 20, 1901, the application must be approved before such charter is granted by a Board of Commissioners, consisting of the Governor, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the Attorney General, following upon public advertisement thereof for a period of thirty days.

The new company consists of Philadelphia and New York capitalists, including Alfred I. Du Pont, Vice President of the Du Pont Powder Company; E. L. Erlanger and Marc Klaw, theatrical managers of New York; Edward T. Davis, Jr., of this city, formerly identified with the William Weightman estate, and Felix Isman of this city, real estate operator.

The company will, if it gets a charter from the State, apply to the councils for a franchise to build and operate," said Mr. Isman, the President, last night. "Before we apply to councils or commit ourselves in any way, we shall be fortified by the most expert engineering opinion that we can procure.

"We ask only fair treatment in our endeavor to enter the field of competition in the operation of street railways in Philadelphia."

George Q. Horwitz, counsel for the company, in filing the application and articles of association, also sent to Secretary of the Commonwealth McAfee a communication setting forth that in submitting them he thought it proper to state "that the incorporators are not connected with any other railroad or street railway company existing under the laws of Pennsylvania, and further, in procuring the letters patent for the proposed railway company, it is not for the benefit or to be connected with any railroad or other street railway company."

After the customary preamble the articles of association set for that the length of the elevated and subway railway proposed to be built, "will be as as near as may be six miles."

The articles set forth also that the elevated structure will be so built and erected as to allow at least a clearance of twelve feet, if not more, at every street crossing, and will be built to accommodate at least two tracks. Regarding the subway section of the road, the articles provide that the interior dimensions would be not more than 26 feet in width and 14 feet 6 inches in height, "excepting at such points along said railway as may be necessary and proper either for the erection of stations or the proper, necessary, and convenient approach thereto, or both.

"The length of the elevated structure will be not less than 8 miles and 3,500 feet, and the length of subway will be not less than 2 miles and 440 feet. Only so much of the surface or ground or streets, either for terminals or for connection between the underground and elevated sections of said railway, shall be used as may be necessary, but in no one place will the surface so occupied exceed 2,500 feet in length. The said railway is to be operated by power other than by steam."

The articles set forth also:

"That the capital stock of said company is to be $300,000, being at least $50,000 for every mile of road proposed to be constructed, and shall consist of 6,000 shares of $50 each.

"The affairs of the company shall be controlled by a President and a board of five Directors, and the following are the names and places of residence of those who shall manage its affairs until the first annual meeting, and until others are chosen in their places:

"Edward T. Gavis, J., Philadelphia; Felix Isman, Philadelphia; Alfred J. Dupont, Wilmington, Del.; Layton Martin Schoch, Philadelphia, Wayne Purviance, Chestnut Hill. Felix Isman is President."

The subscribers to the article, and the number of shares each agrees to take, are as follows: Edward T. Davis, Jr.; Felix Isman, Alfred I. Dupont, E. L. Erlanger, and Marc Klaw, each 500 shares; Layton M. Schoch, 450 shares, and Wynne Purviance, 50 shares. Mr. Schoch is a lawyer and Mr Purviance is a broker.

Abraham C. Erlanger was in Philadelphia last night on business connected with the franchise. Marc Klaw, his partner, said to a TIMES reporter when asked why the firm was going into the railroad business:

"Some of our friends wanted us to go into this to help them out, and we are doing so."

ROOSEVELT ON MUCK RAKES.

Decoration Day Address Will Give His Views on Some Writers.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—President Roosevelt will deliver his Decoration Day address this year before the Army and Navy Union at Norfolk, Va. The ceremonies there will be held at the navy yard and in the sailors' cemetery.

The address of the President will be practically a repetition of the address he delivered at the dinner recently given by Speaker Cannon to the members of the Gridiron Club and other guests. The text of the speech was "The Man with the Muck Rake," in which the President compared some of the publishers and writers of the present day with the famous character in "Pilgrim's Progress."

In the course of the address he denounced the men who devote their energies to an exploitation in a sensational way of the graft and rascality which they by any means can rake up, ignoring at the same time the good in the world which the President believes is predominant. He scored some of the sensational magazine writers without mercy and expects to repeat his statements in the Norfolk speech. It is not unlikely that he may elaborate his remarks in a forceful way.

Since the delivery of the speech at the Cannon banquet, the President has been urged to repeat it, so that it might be had in permanent form. While the Norfolk speech will contain much that is new, it will follow closely the lines of the original address.

VESUVIUS CAUSES TERROR.

Loud Detonations and Frequent Earthquakes—Villagers Flee.

NAPLES, April 5.—The eruption of Mount Vesuvius is causing great terror in the vicinity. The roads leading to the crater are covered with lava, and in the surrounding villages the ashes lie an inch thick. Reinforcements of soldiers and carbineers have been sent to maintain order.

The inhabitants of the small villages near the crater are escaping, while processions of villagers, carrying images of saints and the Madonna and praying for a cessation of the eruption are passing through the neighboring towns.

From several small new craters and many fissures lava and cinders are being thrown up, while from the central craters the eruption has formed a cone 3,000 feet high. Different streams of lava now reach a length of over a mile, some of them being 500 feet wide.

Loud detonations, heard for twenty miles, frequent earthquake shocks, and an oppressive atmosphere increase the terror of the inhabitants, although the director of the observatory at Mount Vesuvius, Prof. Matteucci, says that the fall of ashes is not likely to last more than another day.

The smoke and ashes are carried so far that all Naples is sprinkled with cinders. The Neapolitans are not alarmed. In fact, they are rather glad, saying that the eruption of Vesuvius is in preparation for the arrival of King Edward, who left Marseilles on April 3 on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, accompanied by Queen Alexandra, and who is now due here.

COUNT SUES TO GET MARRIED.

His Mother Opposes His Union with an American Divorcee.

PARIS, April 5.—Count Roger de Martimprey has brought proceedings before the Civil Tribunal of the Seine with the object of obtaining a decision making null his mother's opposition to his marriage to the divorced wife of Count Bernard de Pourtalès.

The Tribunal has reserved its decision. Countess Bernard de Pourtalès was formerly Miss Florence Drouillard of Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Florence Drouillard was married to Count Bernard de Pourtalès at Nashville on April 29, 1896. Many of the most prominent families of the South were represented at the ceremony. Afterward the bride and bridegroom visited Newport, where various entertainments were given in their honor, and later they sailed for France.

Three years ago Count Bernard fought a duel with Count Roger de Martimprey. Immediately afterward the Countess came to America and remained at Nashville with her mother for several weeks. Then she returned to Paris, and it was reported that she and her husband had been reconciled. Later the Countess again returned to America, and it was reported that Count Bernard had obtained a divorce. This report had never been definitely verified until yesterday's dispatch from Paris showing that the Countess is free to marry again.

There is probably no other noble family in Europe which can show so many marriages to Americans as the Pourtalès family. Count Francis de Pourtalès became an American citizen and Director of the Zoological Museum at Boston. He married an American, and his daughter married a distant cousin, Count James de Pourtalès. Count Otto de Pourtalès married Miss Laura Montgomery of Colorado. Count Hermann married Miss Helen Barbey of New York.

ZULUS DRIVE BACK BRITISH.

Liquor Imbibed by Natives Saved White Refugees from Impanza.

GREYTOWN, Natal, April 5.—The colonial field force which was concentrating at Impanza, twelve miles northwest of Greytown, for operations against the insurgent Chief Bambaata, the deposed regent of the Greytown district, has been compelled to abandon its laager after heavy fighting and to retire to Greytown.

A portion of the force, sent to rescue women and children isolated at Keate's Drift, succeeded in doing this, but while returning was attacked by rebellious natives. A running fight was kept up for six miles, the Zulus continuing the pursuit until within a mile of Greytown. Three of the colonial police were killed and several were wounded. The remainder are safe at Greytown.

The police report that the rebels are in strong force and flushed with victory, and the officials fear further excesses. A strong force of artillery, infantry, and mounted men is moving out of Greytown to-day to operate against the rebels.

A laager has been formed here, and every preparation has been made to defend Greytown in case of attack. An assault on the town, however, is considered unlikely, the Zulus preferring to fight in the rugged country outside.

The British field force, which at present numbers only a few hundred men, will be strongly reinforced in the next twenty-four hours.

LONDON, Friday, April 6.—A dispatch dated "With Mansell's Column, April 5," gives the following account of the fighting between Zulus, led by Chief Bambaata, and the Natal expedition which rescued the women and children isolated at Keate's Drift:

"Bambatta surprised the column at dusk at Impansa, the natives springing out of the thicket, fanatically shouting their battle-cry and attacking the vanguard with their assegais. The police behaved with coolness, keeping the hords of blacks at bay, and steadily continuing the march to Greytown. The fighting did not cease until midnight, when the column reached Botha's farm and safety. The women and children had been placed in the centre of the column and thus were completely shielded.

"The infuriated natives hacked the bodies of three policemen who were killed, but the bodies were rescued.

Sergt. Brown is missing, and it is feared that he also has been killed.

"The white residents of Impanza escaped to Keat's Drift at Bambaata's first attack, and the looting of the hotel and the imbibing of liquor incapacitated the rebels for pursuit."

TURMOIL IN ASSEMBLY; DEMOCRATS UP IN ARMS

Members Threaten, Yell, and Throw Books About.

JIMMY OLIVER SUPPRESSED

Nearly a Fight Between Him and an Officer of the House—The Row Is Over Two Unimportant Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 5.—For an hour tonight the Assembly was in an uproar over two bills that of themselves amounted to little. Members yelled like dervishes, books were thrown about, and furious threats were made.

Democrats shouted themselves hoarse endeavoring to gain recognition from the Speaker. Mr. Palmer, leader of the minority, appealed from the decision of the Chair, and "Jimmy" Oliver, who, with Palmer, was the centre of an excited throng of Democrats, was singled out by the Police Department of the House and induced by physical methods to take his seat. The representative of the Sergeant at Arms was for throwing Oliver into the seat, but the silver-haired "Jimmy" bristled up and shouted:

"Take your mitts off me—take 'em off, do you hear? You'll make a mistake if you don't take 'em off quick."

Majority Leader Moreland had signaled to Speaker Wadsworth to suppress Oliver. "Put him down, put him down; he's run this House long enough!" said Moreland.

"The Sergeant at Arms will put the gentleman from New York in his seat," directed the Speaker. Oliver persisted, demanding that he be recognized. The gavel was banged continuously. Oliver continued to shout for recognition; then he turned his attention to the officer of the House. He pushed him aside at first, but the officer clung to him. After delivering his threat, that it would be a mistake not to leave him alone, the member from the Sixth New York slid into his seat.

The trouble arose over two bills of Senator Malby legislating certain Democrats out of office in Ogdensburg. Mr. Merritt of St. Lawrence wanted to advance them. Mr. Palmer thought that if Democrats had been found in St. Lawrence, where none but Republicans were supposed to live, the Democrats were entitled through him to a presentation of their cases before being put out. He was willing to consent that the bills go over to Tuesday. Merritt would not consent to postponement later than Monday.

Over that the trouble began. Malby had asked Moreland to do all he could to hustle the bills along, so the whole power of the House machine was exerted to carry out his desire.

As fast as the bills were read Moreland and Merritt moved the previous question. This angered Palmer. It absolutely shut off any debate on the bills.

Palmer raised point after point, but the Speaker gaveled him down on some, ruled out some, and neglected to notice others. Finding that his efforts brought no result Palmer shouted, "I move to adjourn!"

"Not inorder!" shouted the Speaker, banging his gavel.

"A motion to adjourn is always in order," answered Palmer.

The Speaker did not see it that way, holdin that, the previous question having been moved on Merritt's motion to advance the bill, that was the only one before the house. On the rollcalls the Democrats insisted on detailed statements. Then all got out their blue rule books and yelled for decisions on various points.

Mr. Lafetra wanted the bills read line by line, but the Speaker refused to entertain such a motion. Every man behind the desk was pressed into service to help along the majority programme. The gavel was heavy enough to drown out everything. Amendments to the bills were handed up by a dozen Democrats, but none were entertained, the Speaker refusing to recognize anybody on the Democratic side.

Finally, when the bills had been progressed, the Republicans suddenly moved to adjourn, leaving Palmer in the well, shouting in vain for recognition. The balance of the calendar was left where it was without ceremony. Palmer intends to carry the fight on to-morrow. He has issued a statement relative to the fracas and the upholding by a party vote of the ruling of the chair. He says in part:

> "For the first time in the history of the State, so far as the recollection of any member now sitting goes, the House today under its so-called reform leadership and youthful officers has defied every rule and every decision made in the State of New York by a Speaker, many of whom were considered at least competent to preside over this body.
> "Every member of the Legislature, however brief his period, knows the rules of the house to-day and believes that a motion to adjourn is always in order and takes precedence over any other business. Yet the Speaker of the house today defied the rule by sheer force of majority vot. This force, without justification, was exercised, in defiance of all legislative law, in order that the Democratic officials of the City of Ogdensburg might be legislated out of office. It evidently was known that discussion and publicity with reference to these bills pending would not be savory.
> "The reason the bills were asked to go over until Monday was that an agreement had been made between the minority and the Republican member representing the bills that they should go on the calendar Monday night without advancement. After this Republicaan member had received instructions from some source he violated that agreement, and the brutal force of the officers of the House was exercised to the limit."

HOTEL COLLAPSES; 52 DEAD.

New Black Forest Building Falls While Guests In It Are Dancing.

NAGOLD, Black Forest, Germany, April 5.—Fifty-two persons were killed and seventy were dangerously injured to-day by the collapse of the Hotel zum Hirschen, (the Stag Hotel.) The building had not been fully completed, and the catastrophe is attributed to the non-observance of proper precautions.

The roof of the building had only been put in place this morning, an event which, in accordance with German custom, was celebrated by a feast. The guests are reported to have engaged in a dance, and this, together with the large number of persons on the floors, was probably what caused the building to collapse.

Senate Rejects Bribery Charges.

TRENTON, N. J., April 5.—The Judiciary Committee of the Senate, which investigated the charges against Senators Shinn and Martens of demanding money for the suppression of two bills affecting pawnbrokers, reported to-day that the charges were not sustained. The accusations were brought by Philip Krinke, a pawnbroker, who said the two Senators had demanded money for the suppression of the bills introduced by Senator Shinn.

KNIFE FOR MISS BARRYMORE.

Successful Operation for Appendicitis—Her Company Disbanded.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 5.—Ethel Barrymore underwent a successful operation for appendicitis at the Bay State Hospital today. Dr. Brooks said Miss Barrymore will stay at the hospital two or three weeks, and he added that, if she follows the advice of her physicians, as she undoubtedly will do, she will not play again this season. Her company has disbanded and returned to New York to-day.

Immediately after the operation a cablegram was sent to Capt. Harry Graham of London, to whom Miss Barrymore is engaged, notifying him that all was well. Miss Alice Agnew and John Barrymore, a brother of the actress, both of the "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" company, were with her before and after the operation.

CLERGYMEN PLAY POKER.

Bridge Whist an Indictable Offense Also, Says Cleveland Prosecutor.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 5.—"We have as much legal authority to return criminal indictments against society women who play bridge whist for money as we have to indict brokers for keeping bucket shops," said Prosecutor McMahon to-day. "Bucketing and bridge are both gambling institutions."

The Prosecutor's attention had been directed to the act of a Georgia Judge who this week instructed a Grand Jury to indict devotees of society gambling.

"Has any one ever requested you to take such action?" was asked.

"No," answered the Prosecutor. "Polite gambling is winked at by society here because you could never tell where such an investigation would end. I have positive knowledge of ministers who play poker with their friends with a five-cent limit."

But Remounted and Finished First in the Meadow Brook Hunt.

P. F. Collier, master of the hounds of the Meadowbrook Hunt Club, was first to finish at yesterday's hunt, despite the fact that he came a cropper in the early stages of the run. Although badly shaken up, Mr. Collier remounted and soon regained the lead.

Harry S. Page and Warner Baltazzi were also thrown and they retired from the hunt. The meet was at Westbury, but the pack got the scent at Hicksville. There the trail led to E. D. Morgan's home at Wheatley Hills. In the hunt party were:

Scott Cameron, R. L. Raney, Jay Phipps, Miss Caroline Bryce, William C. Hayes, R. L. Beeckman, Mrs. J. L. Kernochan, Leonard Jacob, Mrs. Smith Hadden, Miss May Bird, Mrs. Cameron, and Mrs. Hayes.

CANNON EXPECTS REVISION.

Tariff Changes Sure to Come, but Not This Session, He Writes.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, April 5.—Speaker Cannon of the House of Representatives has addressed a letter to John N. Taylor of the Knowles Taylor and Knowles Pottery Company; W. E. Wells, Potus Potters' Association, and John S. Goodwin, of the Goodwin Pottery Company, in which he says that a revision of the tariff is sure to come.

"I am satisfied that there will be no tariff revision this Congress," he says, "but it goes without saying that the desire for a change which exists in the common mind will drive the Republican Party, if continued in power, to a tariff revision. I do not want it, but it will come in the not distant future."

Greene Says Capt. Carter's Father-in-Law Got $500,000 Profits.

Special to The New York Times.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 5.—The division of profits gained from the Government work in this district on river and harbor improvements was explained to the jury in the Greene and Gaynor case to-day by Benjamin D. Greene, one of the defendants, who occupied the stand throughout the session of the Federal court.

His version made R. F. Westcott, father-in-law of Capt. O. M. Carter, a partner in the Savannah contracts, sharing profits equally with Greene and Gaynor, who, according to Greene, paid Westcott $450,000 or $500,000 without the scratch of a pen having passed between them, and merely to secure Westcott's influence when they should seek a heavy contract to be let by the New York Central Railroad.

GIRL LOST $14,365.

Was on Her Way to a Broker's Office to Invest the Money.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 5.—While Miss Emma Slagle, a young woman, was on her way yesterday to a broker's office with $14,365 in bank notes wrapped in brown paper, she lost the parcel. She did not inform the police, and her loss was not known until she put an advertisement in the newspapers to-day, offering a liberal reward for the return of the money. Miss Slagle, an orphan, sold some real estate left by her father. Three months ago she drew the money from a savings bank, and ever since had secreted it in her room in a boarding house. She was bound for the broker's office to invest the money in Government bonds.

When asked why she did not notify the police immediately, she said she was so worried she just went home, after going over the route she had taken and not finding the parcel. aLst night she decided to advertise her loss. She did not know the broker to whose office she was going to buy bonds, but had seen his advertisement of securities. She has no legal adviser.

NOCQUET A VICTIM OF HIS AMBITION

Had Made a Record and was Eager to Tell It.

BUT TRIED THE IMPOSSIBLE

Story of His Last Journey Told by the Condition of His Clothing—How They Brought Him Home.

Paul Nocquet, the sculptor-aeronaut, in his two-mile struggle through the marshes and creeks of Gilgo Bay, from Jones's Beach toward the lights of Amityville, on Tuesday night, accomplished that which not one man in a hundred could have done even in daylight, and he fought his way by the pale light of a waning moon. Then he attempted the impossible, failed, and struggled back to die.

At the ebb of his strength, after battling with mud and water through nearly half of the five miles which lay between his abandoned balloon and Amityville, he found himself on the brink of a creek 40 yards wide and 2 feet deep, with twice that depth of mud at the bottom. It was then he discarded his overcoat, swallowed his last drop of brandy, and threw away the empty flask. For nearly 200 yards more after that he plowed through water, seaweed, and swamp grass and reached Copp's Island.

He found himself on the shore of Long Haul, an inlet of the Great South Bay, a quarter of a mile wide—too deep to wade, too full of a tangle of grass and seaweed to swim.

The tide was running through the Haul like a millrace and the further shore, behind which were the beckoning lights, was dim, but he was undaunted. Weak as he was he plunged in, his face toward the lights, and swam until he saw the hopelessness of further effort. Then he turned back to the land he had left, walked stumblingly fifty feet inland, and stretched himself downward on the ground to die.

That is the story told by the examination of Nocquet's lifeless body yesterday. The overcoat he had discarded before reaching Copp's Island was thick with mud. The clothing on the body, the boots the aeronaut wore, were soaked with water, but washed quite clean. The tide had done that in his last hopeless swim into Long Haul.

As to why he ever started from Jones's Beach yesterday's inquest and the further details that daylight inquiry brought out made it plainer than it has been.

It was not suicide. The man's friends, one and all, scout that ridiculous assumption. He had his will in his pocket, it is true. What amateur aeronaut starting out on a dangerous journey might not have? But had he wished to die he would have chosen a different and an easier fate.

In landing as he did on Jones's Beach, Nocquet had achieved quite a triumph in aeronautics. The beach is not wide. It was not easy to come down. He, an amateur, did it, and proved thereby a cherished theory of his own. He was eager to tell the news; the lights beckoned, and he knew not clearly what lay between. So he set out, and—

In the waning moonlight shining over Copp's Island at 2 o'clock yesterday morning the rescue party which had gone out from Amityville to bring in what was left of the man who so gayly had sailed up from the Bronx hardly more than twenty-four hours before found his body where the old boatman had left it tied to a stake. There were five in the party. A. B. Haff, its leader; Capt. George Smith, the bayman who had found the body; E. W. Davis, Superintendent of the electric light works at Amityville; Fred B. Powell of that town, and a TIMES reporter. None of them will forget the trip.

Bringing Back the Dead.

To cover the two miles to the island where the body lay it was necessary to travel at least five miles, so tortuous were the channels of the waterways to be traversed. More than once the gasoline launch towing a skuff, in which the trip was made, grounded, though it drew a scant foot of water. The tide was out, and sandbars showed their skeleton ribs on every hand.

The start was made at 11 o'clock Wednesday night. There were few preparations. The permit to remove the body had been secured from Coroner Savage by Undertaker White, and the instructions were to bring it back to Amityville in as nearly the same conditions as it was found as possible.

The moon was almost three-quarters full when Amityville slipped away in the wake of the launch. The explosions of the motor, like the popping of a whip, sounded from shore to shore. Capt. Smith, an odd, weatherbeaten little figure, in sou'wester, overalls, and rubber boots, with long, straw-colored chin whiskers bleached white by the sea, was at the wheel.

"I'll take you to the body straight as the pesky water'll let me," he said at the start. "I know just where he lays, to the yard. He's got a rope around his right leg, where I staked him down like I allus do, but I never turned him over or moved a thing. He's a-laying like he was cold in his sleep, with his hands doubled up under him an' his hat half over his face."

Gilgo's Island showed dim and was gone, the occupants of the launch catching a misty glimpse in passing of the houseboat from which Henry Purdy turned deaf ears to Nocquet's shouts for aid. Half a mile more and the pilot signaled to stop the engine. As the chug-chug of the motor stopped a stillness which was almost oppressive closed in. Without a word Davis stuck an oar in the mud bottom to serve as anchor, and Haff, a distant relative of Capt. Hank Haff, pulled the skiff, which was to bear the body, alongside.

"There's pretty near a mile to go yet, but it's too shallow for the launch," Capt. Smith explained.

"I know," assented Haff, "there's room enough to put him in the skiff and take us all, though. Let's get along. I hate to think about him lying out there so lonesome."

Davis volunteered to stay with the launch. Haff and Capt. Smith took the oars, while Powell and the reporter seated themselves in the back of the skiff. It was after 1 o'clock. To the west, a dim line against the sky, was Copp's Island.

What Was Seen at the Island.

"He's on the far point," volunteered the Captain, as he set the stroke. There was no mention of Nocquet by name. It was "he" throughout the night.

The boat wound its way forward, the outline of the island where the body lay waiting, lifting itself higher and higher from the water.

As the shore was neared Capt. Smith paused an instant, standing up in the skiff. The other occupants followed suit. The surface of the island, covered with dry grass and seaweed, showed straw color in the moonlight.

"Pull in here," commanded the Captain. "That's him—" and he pointed to a black blotch, showing plain in the vista of pale grass. "You'll find him a-layin' just like I said."

The dry grasses and seaweed crunched complainingly under foot as the little party walked toward the black blotch. There was a freshening wind from the northwest.

The black blotch took on shape. It resolved itself into the figure of a man resting, as Capt. Smith had said it would be, face downward. As the men stood for a second about it, the rippling of the baby waves of Long Haul sounded a whispered protest against the disturbing of the night and its dead.

"A-layin' like he was cold in his sleep," softly repeated Capt. Smith. The spell was broken. Haff, as the official head of the party, issued his first command.

"Light the lantern," he said, "and we'll turn him over and take him to the skiff."

Lay Dead as If Asleep.

The lantern was lighted, and for a space the attitude of Nocquet was closely studied, that some idea might be had of how death had come to him. He was resting with his head to the south, away from the lights which had lured him to attempt the impossible. There was a soft hat resting upon his light curls, shading the face. The arms were under the body, and the life preserver, which had vainly aided in his battle for life, was still about his body. There was not a line about the figure which did not suggest repose. By no possibility could the aeronaut have fallen in such a position. He must have disposed himself deliberately, realizing that there was no use in struggling longer.

Haff ordered the loosing of the rope that bound the right leg of the body to the stake. Then the body was turned over. Under the rays of the lantern the face showed no evidence of pain or fear. The features were composed and peaceful. Had it not been for the seams left by the rank grass which had pillowed it, it would have been almost lifelike. The eyes were closed.

Evidence of the Last Struggle.

It was just fifty-one feet, by actual measurement, to the bank of Long Haul. Haff measured it off, and then returned for a closer inspection of the body. There was no mud on the clothing of the dead man nor on his shoes. He commented on the fact.

"His overcoat's over across the crick," said Capt. Smith, "an' it's just a cake o' mud. The bottle lyin' nigh it is mud crusted, too."

"He must have tried to swim Long Haul the last thing he did," reasoned Haff, "an' washed the mud off his clothes that way. When he found out he couldn't make it he turned back and come here to die."

The other members of the party agreed with him, and this diagnosis was accepted by those who visited the scene later in the day.

The skiff was fully 100 yards away. Haff stirred the body.

"He's mighty heavy," he announced. "It'll be hard to carry him."

"I had to help carry a girl across the marsh onct," vouchsafed Capt. Smith. "She was drownded. It was moonlight, too."

The wind, blowing stronger, put out the lantern. Powell and Capt. Smith lifted the head of the dead man. Haff lifted his feet. The reporter picked up Nocquet's hat and the extinguished lantern and followed to the skiff.

How He Came Home.

The body was put in its bow and Haff and Powell started off to find the overcoat and bottle which Smith had told of. They had not been disturbed. The work of getting back to the launch was undertaken with difficulty. The body occupied the entire forward end of the skiff, and it was necessary to pole instead of row.

"We got him," called Haff, as the launch loomed up through the night. When the launch was alongside it was found necessary to shift the body from the bow to the stern of the boat. The moon was almost overhead while the work was under way.

"He wouldn't tow good in the bow," said Capt. Smith, "an' he might get splashed."

"We'll make better time goin' back," Capt. Smith announced. "The tide's with us, an' there's a fair wind. There's more water, too."

There was hardly another word spoken as the launch got under way and the skiff swung in behind, the low line taut and shaking drops of water from its strands. They glistened like tears.

The return journey was begun a little after 2 o'clock. As the launch gathered speed, the skiff, with its silent weight astern, settled deep in the water, leaving a white seaway, with converging lines swelling out into a foamy, lacelike V. Along the dim shores of the unpeopled islands the little launch sped, its explosions startling night birds from the grasses.

"Poor fellow. He didn't know how he'd come home," the Captain said, as he looked back at the skiff, following on like a ghost.

Before leaving Amityville Haff had figured it out that he would be back at the canal bridge at 2:30 o'clock, and there the undertaker's wagon had instructions to be waiting. It was almost 3 o'clock when the head of the canal was reached. The launch was doing its best. On either side houses rose, still and dark. Amityville was sound asleep.

"I reckon they'd wake up if they knew we had him with us," said Haff grimly.

When the bridge was sighted there were lights twinkling about it. "They're waiting all right," Haff continued. "I wonder if they'll have to take the life preserver off to put him in the coffin."

There was quite a little crowd at the Bridge. An automobile was panting in the roadway. It belonged to Dr. Thomas and Israel Ludlow, members of the Aero Club, who had made the run from New York when they learned that Nocquet had been found, and were awaiting the body. There were a dozen reporters lined up on the bank with the doctor and his companion and several policemen, in addition to the undertaker's force.

The lowest step of the landing rose a sheer six feet above the skiff and it was only by the hardest kind of effort that the body was lifted ashore.

Dr. Thomas and Mr. Ludlow swung a lantern over the face. "It's him," they announced in a breath. "Poor Nocquet."

Up to that moment they had hoped against hope that the body might be that of some one else.

The overcoat and hat were lifted out, and Dr. Thomas made a hurried examination of the dead man's face and felt his limbs to see if there were any injuries which might have been responsible for his death. There were none.

It was determined to cut away the life-preserver, as it had been surmised aboard the launch that it might be necessary to do, to get the body into a coffin. Then the coffin was carried to the local undertaker's. The rescue party separated and the New Yorkers sought their hotels.

One division of the New Yorkers found itself locked out. Its members finally succeeded in wakening their landlord by pounding on the door. He stuck his head out of an upper window and told them to go away and let him sleep.

"I don't want no guests who set up after 12," he proclaimed, and the ultimatum was final. It was obligatory to find new quarters.

After a few hours' sleep Dr. Thomas and Mr. Ludlow got up and expressed their intention of visiting Jones's Beach and tracing the course pursued by Nocquet in his attempt to gain the mainland. They sent for Haff and Capt. Smith and started off at 10 o'clock to secure a boat. It was announced by Justice of the Peace Wells, before they left, after the Justice had been in communication with Coroner Savage, that that official would be over from Islip at noon and that the inquest would proceed without delay.

When the Coroner did arrive the body had been stripped and washed. While the outer garments were clean the undergarments were caked with mud, as was the overcoat, confirming the theory that the last fight Nocquet made was in the waters of Long Haul.

There was not a scratch from head to heel. Drs. Luce and Markham of Amityville, on the telephoned request of the Coroner, made an examination and gave it as their opinion that Nocquet had died of exposure and exhaustion.

A search of the pockets revealed the will that Nocquet, before making his fatal ascent, had prepared. The document, water soaked, was found in his inside waistcoat pocket. It read:

New York, April, 1906.

My name is Paul Nocquet, my address 55 East Fifty-ninth Street, my profession a sculptor. In case of death send for my good friend Guzon Borglun, Esq., solicitor, who lives at 166 East Thirty-eighth Street, New York.

He certainly will be so kind as to write to my brother-in-law, Mr. Albert Vanderkindere, 91 Rue des Palais, Bruxelles, Belgium, who will take all care possible to tell it to my beloved mother, who lives in Belgium. Her address is Mme. Nocquet, Place Communale, 5 Uccles Brabant, Belgium.

Everything that belongs to me is for my mother, or in case of death to my sister, Bertha Nocquet, who lives with her. If M. Borglun can do it he can make an auction of my works, bronze, terra cotta, plaster, which are in my studio or stored in Mr. James Loeb's stable, 153 East Thirty-eighth Street, opposite Borglun's studio.

My beloved friend, Raoul Morsier, No. 54 Rue Richer, Paris, can keep for him and until his death all the works he has from me; paintings which were stored at his home when I went to America. After his death they might go to my sister, Bertha Nocquet.

My money is deposited in the Madison Avenue Branch of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, Fifty-ninth Street, New York. This can be taken from there by my friend, Guzon Borglun. I do not care for my sculptures. I only want to remain in America. I took my first papers of American citizenship and intend to remain in America, a citizen, and consider that I am an American citizen.

(Signed) PAUL NOCQUET.

There was also a letter in this pocket which Nocquet must have carried for several weeks. It was dated from Egypt, early in February, and was written by a woman evidently an intimate friend. The letter spoke of another from Nocquet, "a very beautiful letter," it said. It told of Egypt, its color, and its sights.

"You are so 'cranky' and so much attached by the bizarre that you would revel in its temples, its Sphinx, and its pyramids," was one sentence.

From the pockets were also taken a brass-mounted pocket compass, a gun metal watch, a silver matchbox, a bunch of keys, a map of the territory contiguous to New York, a business letter, some bills, and $36. They were all sent to Mr. Borglum.

It was almost 2 o'clock when Dr. Thomas and Mr. Ludlow got back from the bay. They were muddy to their waists and had evidently had a hard trip. Then the inquest was called. It was held in the front room of the undertaker's shop.

First, Capt. Smith described at length the finding of the body. When he first saw it at 11 o'clock in the morning, he said, the slabs of the life-preserver looked in the sun like a barrel, so he paid no further attention to it till he heard from the life savers at the beach about the missing balloonist. Then he went back.

He told of the appearance at the island of Henry Purdy, the young fellow who heard Mocquet's cries for assistance while he was struggling toward Amityville on Tuesday night. He described the staking of the body and the midnight expedition to recover it.

"From my experience on the Bay," he said, "an' what I saw, I take it that the man died of cold and exhaustion. I don't see how any man could have covered the territory he did in the night. No wonder it killed him. He must have just struggled his heart out. I don't think he was dead when he laid down, but that he laid down to die."

Purdy testified to hearing the cries. "As nearly as I can judge," he said, "it was between 9 and 9:20 o'clock. They sounded far off, and I thought it was somebody out ducking, and paid no attention. About an hour later I went out on the deck of my boathouse to get some coal, and heard the cries again. They sounded like a man hollerin' 'hel-l-oo-o.' I went to bed an' didn't hear any more. The next day the life savers came huntin' for the 'loonist and I told 'em what I'd heard. That evenin' I was goin' home and see Cap'n Smith beckonin' from Copp's Island. I went to him, an' then saw the body for the first time."

Out for a Record, Says Dr. Thomas.

Dr. Julian P. Thomas, fresh from following Nocquet's last course, testified that he assisted Nocquet in getting ready for his flight on Tuesday evening and watched him sail away from 138th Street. He expected to go north, but the winds carried him in a southeasterly direction.

"That was the wind he feared," said Dr. Thomas, "but after he got up in the air I think he made up his mind to go as far as possible. In other words, he tried to make a record. He did go as far as possible and he did make a record, and he did land just where he expected to land.

"The descent was made easily. It was the perfection of ballooning. After landing Nocquet moved the balloon back a hundred yards from the water. To do this it was necessary for him to pick his way to avoid damaging the balloon. I mention this to show that he was perfectly cool and collected, and in the possession of all his faculties.

"He knew that he had made a wonderful flight—one that would stand for all time—and he was anxious to notify his friends of his feat. Fresh from the upper elements, where the quiet breeds overconfidence, he made up his mind to leave the balloon, and head for the lights of Amityville. His tracks, which we followed for almost a mile and could have followed further, showed a straight course. The further he went the harder it was to make progress, but he kept on until he dropped.

And Fell Victim to His Ambition.

"I consider that he died a victim to his own courage and ambition. He had promised me, as well as others, to telegraph as soon as he landed and wanted to keep his word. The cause of his death, in my opinion, was heart failure, due to exposure and excessive mental and physical efforts."

Mr. Ludlow gave testimony along similar lines. He added that the difficulties overcome by Nocquet had been almost unbelievable. He, too, testified to the success of the flight and the perfection of the landing, acquiescing in Dr. Thomas's belief that the aeronaut overtaxed himself in trying to reach a point where he could communicate with New York.

Haff and other witnesses were examined and Dr. Savage then announced a verdict in accordance with the testimony. In the meantime an undertaker had arrived from New York who took charge of the body and brought it back to New York on the train which left Amityville at 5o'clock.

The funeral will take place this morning at 10:30 o'clock from the studio of Nocquet's friend, Gutzon Borglum. The members of the Aero Club will attend the services in a body.

Before starting for New York in his automobile Dr. Thomas was asked if he would be deterred from making further ascensions by Nocquet's fate.

"I must confess," he said, "that my enthusiasm has been a little dulled. I don't know how my wife feels on the subject, but we have contracted for a balloon to make an ascension together. I certainly propose to make other ascensions, but it would have the appearance of bravado if I did so within the next few days."

He expressed the belief that Nocquet's balloon had never reached the open sea. He expressed disbelief in the theory that he had been blown to sea and then brought back by a lower current of air.

His testimony on that point and that of Mr. Ludlow regarding the removal of the balloon to a place of safety after Nocquet had made his landing was not confirmed by what the life savers on Jones's Beach said nor by the direction of the wind, as officially recorded at the life-saving station.

There was an informal discussion yesterday among the sculptors in the city, with all of whom Nocquet enjoyed the friendliest relations, about providing for some fitting memorial to his memory. There was a strong desire that something of this nature should be done, and the plan will be talked over more definitely within a few days.

Mr. Borglum, immediately on being notified of the provisions of Nocquet's will, communicated with the Belgian Consul, and the latter notified the dead sculptor's mother in Brussels. No reply had been received last night.

Mr. Borglum, who was the young man's closest friend in this country, was busy from morning until late last night in making arrangements for the final services and in giving information to scores of Rocquet's friends who called at the studio. The shock and grief has affected him severely. He admitted that he had hardly slept the previous night. He looked absolutely worn out.

"I shall carry out the request made in the will as to disposing of my dead friend's effects to the best of my ability," said Mr. Borglum. "As to the probable value of his estate I can offer no conjecture. It ought to reach several thousand dollars, for he has a number of large pieces, and in his studio at 55 East Fifty-ninth Street are many fine pieces of artistic work. I think it probable that both the Belgian and French Governments may wish to secure some of the choicest pieces, and I will take steps within a few days to ascertain. Then I may hold an exhibition of his work in my studio, and in that way sell everything of value.

"I locked up his room in Fifty-ninth Street on Wednesday and have not been near them since. I looked over the papers in his desk at that time to see if he had left any word or messages for any one, but found nothing of value. It is a base insinuation to imagine for a moment that Paul Nocquet even thought of suicide. Why the very facts prove the contrary. If he had wished to make away with himself, would he not have leaped into the ocean instead of fighting blindly but heroically for his life for more than two hours in the morasses and streams of the Long Island coast?"

Mr. Borglum was asked what significance he could attach to the will so recently written which was found upon the dead sculptor.

"It has no special significance to me, more than the care that any man might show when undertaking anything that might appear in the least hazardous. But Paul Nocquet did dream of danger. He was not that kind of a man. But a friend of mine told me a singular story to-day in conection with this will. Nocquet had been making arrangements with a paper or magazine to write an account of his experiences and his theory of air currents. It seems that one day last week, as he was leaving the editorial rooms, the editor jokingly remarked:

"'Well, Nocquet, I suppose you have made your will.'

"'No,' was the prompt reply. 'I will not make a will for a safe balloon trip. If I were going off on an automobile trip, I might do it.'

"The very suggestion of the will, I believe," continued Mr. Borglum, "had its effect, for it is evident that he thought the matter over a few days, and then made the will."

On the back of the will were found three names and telephone numbers. One of these was the gas works at the foot of East 138th Street in the Bronx, where the ascension was made, and another was that of Lee Stevens, the aeronaut. When Mr. Stevens was informed of this yesterday he said that was not surprised because Nocquet had promised to telephone him at once when he landed.

"Paul Nocquet had arranged the ascension with me," said Mr. Stevens, "and I went up with him to the gas works to get his balloon in readiness. Charles Levee was also there and gave his assistance, but Mr. Nocquet told me especially that he did not want any one, even his friends, notified. He was very enthusiastic over the trip, and said repeatedly that he was going to surprise us.

"Just before the balloon was ready I telephoned, on my own responsibility, to Dr. Thomas, Augustus Post, and two or three other friends, but it was then so late that few arrived before the balloon went up. I advised Nocquet several times not to stay up too long. I told him to be satisfied with a trip of ten miles or so, and not to attempt a long journey until he had been up two or three times.

"The story that Nocquet told some boys at Garden City that he had lost his anchor is absolutely untrue, for he took no anchor with him. I put the things in the basket and know everything that went with him, and Levee, just before the ascension, inspected the ropes and the valve and found them all right.

"I believe that as Nocquet came down it was sufficently light for him to see the land beneath him, but from the height it would be easy to mistake the group of islands and grass topped morasses for solid land. It would be impossible to distinguish the surrounding water with clearness, and having seen what he believed to be firm landa little beyond him, he started for it as soon as he left the balloon on the shore. He wanted to reach his friends, and his death illustrates his loyalty to and thoughtfulness for them. It was one of Paul Nocquet's sterling characteristics."

New Brunswick & Millstone Stockholders Face Perplexing Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, April 5.—If the capital stock of the New Brunswick & Millstone Railroad Company is $100,000 and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has a claim of $159,464.20 against the company for money advanced, how long will it be before the Pennsylvania wipes out the New Brunswick & Millstone Railroad Company? This is the problem that the stockholders of the New Brunswick & Millstone Railroad Company are trying to figure out, and asking themselves what their holdings of stock are worth.

This state of affairs developed at the annual meeting held yesterday. The shareholders were taken on a special car to Millstone, where the meeting was held. Frank L. Sheppard, General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was a member of the party.

The report showed that the gross earnings of the company in the last year were $7,815.48. The total operating expenses for the year amounted to $20,382.98. The net income deficit for the year amounted to $13,724.06. In other words, the road was run last year at that loss. The road has not been paying for several years. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which leases it, has been paying this deficit, each year as to keep the road in operation, and the total deficit which the company now has charged up against the New Brunswick & Millstone is more than the total capital stock of the company.

MINE HERO IN PARIS.

Crowds Greet Nemy—No More Survivors Found at Courrieres.

PARIS, April 5.—Henri Némy, the leader of the rescued miners of Courrières, and his mine boy, Auguste Provost, arrived here at noon to-day and were driven in an automobile through the principal thoroughfares.

They were warmly received by the crowds in the streets, and afterward attended the special races at Auteuil arranged in aid of the victims of the mine disaster. President Fallières was among those present.

LENS, April 5.—The salvage work at Courrières continued to-day without the discovery of any more survivors.

A double line of gendarmes and dragoons surround the pit mouth, holding back the crowds of women, who continue to pelt the troops and denounce the engineers as murderers and bandits.

The salvage men coming up from the mine report that there are no traces of any living men. Many doctors have arrived here in the expectation of being of assistance in the case of further rescues of miners.

Auguste Berton, the miner who was rescued yesterday, is slightly feverish to-day. His hand was injured either by the explosion or by being gnawed by a rat during his entombment.

GOLUCHOWSKI VISITS STORER.

Emperor Francis Joseph to Receive the Retiring Ambassador.

VIENNA, April 5.—Count Goluchowski, the Foreign Minister, visited the retiring American Ambassador, Bellamy Storer, at the latter's residence this afternoon. The interview was arranged at the suggestion of the Foreign Minister, who expressed a desire to see Mr. Storer privately.

Count Goluchowski spent an hour with Mr. Storer. It is understood that the latter will be received by Emperor Francis Joseph in private audience after Easter. Afterward Mr. Storer will go to Versailles, obtain a house, and take up his residence there in May after revisiting Vienna.

It is reported that the Marquis de Reverseaux, the French Ambassador here, in reply to an inquiry from the French Government as to whether the report that he lent assistance to Mrs. Storer in her endeavors to further Catholic projects was correct, telegraphed to Paris that the statement was unfounded.

HOT WATER OUSTED BEAR.

Animal Had Taken Possession of a Locomotive Cab.

Special to The New York Times.

COMO, Col., April 5.—A big black bear took possesion of the cab of a Colorado & Southern locomotive near here yesterday, and fought fiercely rather than abandon its warm abode. It was finally routed out with hote water and a hose from another locomotive.

A snow plow, with five locomotives, had been gaged in clearing the tracks of snow, and during the night the string of engines was left on a side track, with fires banked and only one watchman. The next morning the bear was found in one of the cabs. None of the party was armed, and other means to dislodge him having failed the hose was used, and bruin took the mountains.

ROBBED OF $4,000 OF GEMS.

Mrs. Charles R. Clark of This City Loses Diamonds in Augusta.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 5.—Mrs. Charles R. Clark, a tourist of New York City, now stopping at the Hampton Terrace Hotel, in North Augusta, was robbed last night of diamond valued at $4,000. The gems were stolen from a small box on a dresser in her room, which she left unlocked when she went out early in the night.

Mrs. Clark has offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the thief or the recovery of the jewels.

TUSKEGEE RECEIVES ITS BALDWIN FUND

$150,000 Memorial to Railroad Man and Philanthropist.

SPEECH BY ANDREW CARNEGIE

Says Hampton and Tuskegee Are Solving the Negro Problem—Tilt Over Franchise Grant.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., April 5.—The third and final day of Tuskegee's silver jubilee was marked to-day by the continued attendance of an immense throng. The programme for the two sessions of the day and evening included several notable addresses, closing with that of Andrew Carnegie this evening.

The morning session was marked by a spirited issue between President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota and William Lloyd Garrison. The former speaker, in commenting on the work at Tuskegee, expressed his interest in the education of all the people of the South. He ended his remarks by saying:

"Outside of education there can be formed no solution for the race problem. I do not subscribe to the doctrine that the more ignorant a man is the more efficient he is as a worker." He expressed the opinion that the enfranchisement of the mass of the negro race at the close of the civil war was a colossal blunder.

Sharp issue was taken by Mr. Garrison in a daramtic ten-minute address. He contended that the way "to teach a man to vote is to put the ballot into his hand."

An incident of the day's proceedings was the formal delivery to Robert C. Ogden of the endowment fund of $150,000 raised to commemorate the life and services of the late W. H. Baldwin, Jr., President of the Long Island Railroad. The presentation was made by Oswald Garrison Villard, the Chairman of the Baldwin Memorial Fund, who said:

"It is my pleasant duty as Chairman of the committee organized in January, 1905, to raise a memorial fund to the late William Henry Baldwin, Jr., to present to you the proceeds of that enterprise. No less than 655 subscribers gave of their means to prove their faith in Baldwin the man, to testify their appreciation of his services to his fellow-men, and to attest the loss to this country which his premature death signified. From twenty-one States of this Union came contributions ranging from 25 cents to $12,500, and, in keeping with Mr. Baldwin's life, the donors represent every creed and every race.

"One graduate of this institute, Mr. John W. Robinson, sent $25 from Lome, Togo, West Africa. No one gift was more welcome than the joint subscription of $800 from the teachers, students, and graduates of Tuskegee, and there were many other graduates who contributed directly. I now hold in my hand a check for $140,000, and an order for $10,000 worth of 5 per cent. Mexican Coal and Coke bonds, which represents the total of the contributions after deducting $2,187.41 for the expenses due to printing, postage, and clerk hire, and reserving $1,200 for a permanent bronze memorial to be placed here, perhaps in this building.

"At one of its earliest meetings the committee decided that this memorial fund should go to Tuskegee Institute, although tempted to memorialize Mr. Baldwin's interest in the struggling poor of the great east side of New York City and his sympathy with a host of other civic movements to which he gave his time, ability, and strength. To those who knew him best it seemed, however, most fitting that the money should come here, since his heart and soul were in this great work, and with this decision his family was in most hearty accord.

"In keeping with his broad and catholic spirit in such matters, the committee donates this fund, with no other condition than that it be held perpetually as the William H. Baldwin, Jr., Endowment Fund of Tuskegee Institute, to be forever kept intact and separately accounted for in the annual printed statement of the institute. Its income is to be used for any purpose which the Trustees deem most vital to the work of the school.

"To you, Br. Ogden, as Chairman of the Trustees of Tuskegee Institute, I now deliver this fund, that it may help untold thousands of young colored men and women to fit themselves for worthy citizenship in this republic, and forever commemorate a stainless and beautiful life. For William H. Baldwin, Jr., was the name of a railroad President who was yet an ardent civic reformer; of the head of a great business who was never too busy to sympathize with and aid the man or woman who was down; of a man intensely patriotic, who nobly stood out against his country when he deemed it wrong; of an American who, best of all, in his human relations, knew neither race, nor caste, nor creed, nor color, and was therefore an ardent and a consistent follower of Christ.

"Singularly pure, singularly blessed as he was, may Tuskegee Institute ever hold him up to her students in the generations to come as a model to be emulated, an example to be followed, an inspiration to all who shall read or hear of him."

Andrew Carnegie in his address to-night said:

"It is impossible that educated Southern white people could find life agreeable or inspiring and fruitful, yielding all its sweet graces, surrounded by an inferior race sunk in ignorance and squalor. Human society is one great whole, and the degradation of one part injures and lowers the lives of the others.

"The immediate task in hand has hitherto been to demonstrate whether or not there lay in the colored race capacity for improvement. This should not have been matetr of much doubt since history shows from what unpromising material our own among other races of men has risen in the scale and slowly reached civilization, but it was naturally doubted by those who had known colored people onl yas slaves whether they could ever rise to the dignity of freemen.

"The teachers already produced ministers, lawyers, doctors, and members of all the other professions, the professors seen here and elsewhere in their colleges, the steady increase of taxable property owned by negroes, and what we see here to-day gives the convincing answer.

The negro, just like our own race, raises himself whenever he obtains freedom of action and education. The race develops qualities by the exercise of its inherent and hitherto latent powers. The question is no longer open. Hampton and Tuskegee and several similar institutions have settled it for all time.

"We are upon the right path, therefore, when we seek the educated and public-spirited members of Southern society to permit us to co-operate with them in expanding the influence of Tuskegee and her sister institutions and in elevating the colored race in every way, and we are also right in asking them to co-operate with us as citizens of the great republic now more closely united into one harmonious whole than was ever possible before, when the two antagonistic systems of freedom and slavery prevailed.

"There does not exist to-day a great nation so completely one in thought and feeling throughout all its wide domains as our own. May it ever so remain. Let us do what we can to increase the sense of brotherhood."

and proceeded to dictate the document to a crowd of newspaper men. When he had finished, Mr. Mitchell was asked:

"What's your next move? Are you going to call a meeting of the Scales Committee?"

"I don't know," he replied. "I haven't conferred with my associates yet."

Later in the day the operators gave out their statement. Here it is:

It should be observed that in the astutely drawn proposition of Mr. Mitchell and his committee, the operators are asked to submit to arbitration the qupestion of the closed shop, and the "check-off"—a scheme requiring, in the words of the miners' committee, "that each company shall collect from each employe such amounts as may be levied by their organization monthly, the amount thus collected at each colliery to be turned over to an authorized committee at the colliery," a plan which would make of every operator a collecting agency on behalf of the strike funds of the miners. In their letter of March 9 to the miners' committee, the operators said, concerning the "check-off": "As a matter of policy we would not make such an agreement as you request, and as a matter of law, we are not permitted to make it."

On these two subjects also the Anthracite Coal Commission of 1902, appointed by President Roosevelt, made the following vigorous declaration:

"The right to remain at work where others have ceased to work, or to engage anew in work which others have abandoned, is part of the personal liberty of a citizen that can never be surrendered, and every infringement thereof merits and should receive the stern denouncement of the law. All government implies restraint, and it is not less, but more, necessary in self-governed communities, than in others, to compel restraint of the passions of men which make for disorder and lawlessness. Our language is the language of a free people, and fails to furnish any form of speech by which the right of a citizen to work when he pleases, for whom he pleases, and on what terms he pleases, can be successfully denied. The common sense of our people as well as the common law, forbids that this right should be assailed with impunity. It is vain to say that the man who remains at work while others cease to work, or takes the place of one who has abandoned his work, helps to defeat the aspirations of men who seek to obtain better recompense for their labor and better conditions of life."

It should be observed that Mr. Mitchell's committee abandons the proposal for a one-year agreement and suggests an arbitration, the term of which would expire on April 1, 1908—a Presidential year, thus affording a new opportunity to make this great industry the football of politics. The operators had already offered, it will be remembered, to extend the findings of the Coal Commission until April 1, 1909.

In addition to this statement a revised edition of the pamphlet written by David Willcox, President of the Delaware & Hudson Company and a member of the operators' sub-committee, was circulated yesterday. It takes up in detail Mr. Mitchell's propositions.

"It seems scarcely conceivable," it says, "that any party to the award of the Strike Commission should seriously seek to renew or retry the very grave controversies which were fully heard by that distinguished tribunal, and were decided by it in pursuance of the President's injunction, 'to endeavor to establish the relations between the employers and the wage workers in the anthracite fields on a just and permanent basis and as far as possible to do away with any causes for the recurrence of such difficulties, as those which you have been called to settle.'"

It was also pointed out last night that the miners in asking for an eight-hour day are repeating the request that the Strike Commission in 1903 answered by reducing their hours from ten to nine a day, and, in seeking a 10 per cent. increase of pay, are reiterating their demand of 1902, when they asked an advance of 20 per cent. and got 10 per cent.

The Conciliation Board, to which the miners would submit their demands, consists of W. L. Connell, ex-Mayor of Scranton, Penn., and President of the Enterprise Coal Company; S. D. Warriner, General Manager of the Lehigh Coal Company; W. R. Richards, Superintendent of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal Co., representing the operators, and Thomas D. Nicholls, President of District No. 1; William H. Detterey, President of District No. 7, and John Fahy, President of District No. 9, representing the miners. In the last three disputes Dr. Charles P. Neil has been the Chairman and umpire, and before that the office was held by Carroll D. Wright.

In accordance with the award of the Strike Commission, they were appointed by Judge George Gray, Federal Judge of the Third Judicial District.

President Baer went to Philadelphia last night, but will return to the city in advance of the next meeting to confer with his colleagues on the operators' sub-committee.

The miners sent out telegrams last night to every district covered by their union asking that district meetings be held and reports sent of their opinions on the arbitration proposal. A meeting of the full Scales Commitee will be held some time to-day at the Ashland House.

LEHIGH VALLEY RETRENCHES.

Expenses Will Be Cut Until Coalfield Conditions Are Normal.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad, as a result of the present situation in the anthracite coal fields, has ordered a cessation of all improvement work which can safely be postponed, and in addition has taken steps to cut down in every way possible the expenses of the road until such time as normal operating conditions are resumed in the anthracite coal fields.

The road has taken this step in order to be prepared for a long-continued strike should negotiations between the miners and the operators fail to result in an agreement. Over half of the Lehigh Valley's earnings are derived from the mining and transportation of anthracite coal, and the closing down of the mines means, therefore, the loss of a very large part of the company's business.

The operating force of the company will be reduced in keeping with the decrease in the company's business. Similar orders were issued earlier in the week by the Reading Company, which is also largely dependent for its income upon the mining and transportation of anthracite coal.

We show about two hundred different forms of card and filing cabinets on our salesroom floor, and over nine thousand forms of cards and guides.

TO LAY OFF THOUSANDS.

Decline in Coal Traffic Causes New York Central Reductions in Force.

General Supt. J. H. Smith of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad confirmed yesterday a report of a lay-off of employes along the company's lines. It was due, he said, to the usual falling off in the heavy Winter freight traffic, which puts out of use for the time many engines and cars. The freight service, he said, will be alone affected. The men to be laid off, Supt. Smith said, are freight engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, and cleaners in the roundhouses.

The fact that coal shipments over the company's lines are being reduced also reduces the number of engines, cars, and men necessary. Mr. Smith would not give any estimate of the number to be laid off, but said it would run into the thousands.

FIELDS, BACK BY NIGHT, ILL AT COUNTRY HOME

Doctor Says Mutual's Supplies Agent Will Face Music.

JORDAN TO RETURN TO-DAY

Mr. Juilliard Arrives from England Bearing a Message from Mutual's British Policy Holders.

As quietly as he slipped away from his home in Dobbs Ferry seven months ago, just as the Armstrong Insurance Investigating Committee was getting ready for work, Andrew C. Fields, the legislative worker and manager of the supplies department of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, returned Tuesday night.

Fields had been lost to the world for the last seven months and efforts to trace him failed. His physician, Dr. C. H. Judson of Dobbs Ferry, said last night that he had been all the time in Los Angeles, Cal., for his health, and that he occupied a house there with his entire family all the time he had been so diligently sought after.

How Fields, who is a Deacon of the Methodist Church in Dobbs Ferry, a former President of the village and a political power of Westchester County, managed to reach his home without the knowledge of the villagers, Dr. Judson did not explain. He would not say whether Fields entered the village by train or by automobile, but says he met him on his arrival Tuesday night. The villagers themselves were astonished to learn yesterday that he was in his house on the hill overlooking the cluster of pretty cottages, the rambling streets of the community, and the wide stretch of river.

N. D. Golden, one of the former insurance man's close associates in the athletic club which he founded for the village, knew of his return and tried to get him to go to the club, but he refused because he feared the onslaught of reporters that might follow his appearance in public.

Says Fields Is Very Ill.

A TIMES reporter called at the house yesterday. The ring at the bell was not answered from the threshhold, but Clarence, the twenty-one-year-old son of Fields, suddenly appeared around the corner of the building, advanced, and said that his father was very ill and could see no one, nor could he send down any statement.

"What is your father's illness?" was asked.

"I don't know," he replied.

"When did he return home?"

"I can't say."

"Where has he been?"

"I don't know."

"Is he preparing any statement as to his absence during the insurance investigation?"

"No."

On the arrival of the first batch of reporters the little community was alive with interest. The pastor of the Methodist Church, which Mr. Fields helped to build, was away at conference in Newburg with Charles P. McClelland, former State Senator and later appointed by President Roosevelt General Appraiser in New York. Mr. McClelland and William J. Graney, former Assemblyman, were with Mr. Fields, the political triumvirate of power in Westchester. Louis Murray, a New York lawyer, also said to be close to Fields, was not at home, but his wife said that he was not at the home of Mr. Fields.

Dr. Judson Fields's physician was the only one of his intimates who would make a statement.

"I advised Mr. Fields," said he, "for the last four years to drop his business and take a rest."

"What is his ailment?" he was asked.

"I can't say."

"Is it nervous breakdown?"

"That aggravated his trouble."

"Is he very ill now?"

"He will be confined to his house for about three weeks. He was ill enough to take to his bed on his arrival."

"I advised him to take a trip to the South of France," he continued, "but Mrs. Fields would not make the ocean voyage. Last Spring I again advised him to leave his work and take a rest, but there was a longer session of the Legislature than usual. He would not leave Albany. He seemed to enjoy his work there. It may have been a question of salary, his refusal to go abroad."

"Did you advise him later as to his taking a rest; that is, between the time you advised him in the Spring and when he left suddenly in September?" was asked.

"I did not," the physician replied. "I take the responsibility for his departure as the advice of his physician, aside from insurance matters. I wanted him to go where he would not be in touch with business matters. He was always being called on the telephone here and always busy. I gave him a certificate of illness which was read in the Hughes investigation. He has a chronic complaint, which has been made worse by overwork. In Los Angeles he was under the care of a physician."

"Is he confined to his bed now?" he was asked.

"He was in bed yesterday, but up to-day," he answered.

"Do you believe it will be necessary for him to take another trip soon?"

"I do not. I believe he will be able to face any civil proceedure or criminal charge that may be brought. I know that he is not afraid to face anything that is brought against him. When he is better he will go to his home in Jersey and after that, whereever he may desire to go."

Asked if his patient was able to consult counsel, Dr. Judson said that there had been no occasion for a consultation with counsel as yet, and that there had been no consultation.

Young Mr. Fields repeated that his father was ill. When one of the reporters wanted to know whether Fields had been summoned before the Grand Jury or had been served with a warrant, young Fields hurried indoors. When he returned he said that this was all new to him, and that his father said that if Dr. Judson would go to the house and permit him to talk he would talk. Dr. Judson declined to allow his patient to grant an interview.

The physician again assured THE TIMES reporter that his patient would face whatever charges made against him, and that he would not again disappear.

Mr. Fields, despite all the efforts that have been made to find him since the records of the supplies department were lost and the question of how he expended the company's money in Albany came up before the Armstrong committee, has not been living the life of an exile, according to Dr. Judson. He occupied a comfortable house in Los Anugeles, and had with him Mrs. Fields, his son Clarence, his daughter Imogene, after whom his home in Dobb's Ferry is named "Genehurst"; his brother-in-law, P. F. Dutcher, and his niece, Addie Dutcher.

While Fields is in seclusion in his house his men are at work bedding his "kitchen garden," the awns, trimming the heldges, and filling in the saggy places of the roadways for Percy Rockefeller, who has rented the place every Summer for a number of years. Mr. Rockefeller is to take possession on May 1. On that date Fields will leave his home and go to New Jersey, unless he is detained in this State by legal process.

Officials of the Mutual Life Insurance Company said yesterday that they had no direct knowledge of the return of Andrew C. Fields, but it was learned that a representative of the company's Law Department had gone to Dobbs Ferry as soon as news was received of Fields's arrival.

President Peabody said late in the afternoon that he was not aware that any suit against Fields was ready for institution, inasmuch as the accountants had not completed their examination of the supply department, through which Fields's vouchers for Albany and other expenses were passed. It was gathered, therefore, that the Mutual's legal representative went to Dobbs Ferry looking for information, although it has been known ever since the Truesdale Committee rendered its last report that suits against Fields are included in the administration programme.

Mr. Juilliard Returns.

Augustus D. Juilliard, a member of the Finance Committee of the Mutual Life and of the sub-committee of the Finance Committee that fixed ex-President McCurdy's salary, arrived here on the Baltic yesterday. Mr. Juilliard went at once to his residence, 16 West Fifty-seventh Street, where he said last night that he was not going to do any talking just now on life insurance matters.

Mr. Juilliard bears a message from D. C. Haldeman, the Mutual's ex-manager in London, to the Trustees, embodying the ideas that British policy holders, whom Mr. Haldeman represents, would urge on the reorganizers of the company. This message will be laid before the Trustees at an early meeting.

The return of Mr. Juilliard has been awaited here with interest both on account of his relation to the present situation in England and because of references to him in the testimony taken by the Armstrong Investigating Committee after his departure for Europe last Fall. In addition to his share in fixing the salary of ex-President McCurdy, it was brought out in the investigation that Mr. Juilliard was one of the "inner circle" of Mutual Trustees to whom Mr. McCurdy frequently referred in his testimony as having most to do with the financial management of the company.

Toward the close of the Armstrong Committee's hearings, it was brought out that a large block of stock, a part of an increase in the stock of the Lawyers' Mortgage Company originally intended for the Mutual by Edwin M. Coggeshall, then President of the company, was split up between a group of Mutual Trustees, of whom Mr. Juilliard was one.

Offered Stock as an Investment.

George G. Haven and other members of the Mutual's "inner circle" testified that Mr. Juilliard offered the stock to them as a private investment, without reference to any prior offer to Mr. McCurdy on behalf of the company, and finally, Henry Morgenthau, who was a leading interest in the Lawyers' Mortgage matter, testified that the stock was really offered to Mr. Juilliard for distribution between members of the "inner circle" because Mr. Juilliard had represented to him that President McCurdy was very angry at having been left out of a similar increase by the Lawyers' Title Insurance Company.

In this somewhat indeterminate stage the question was left by the Armstrong investigators, Mr. Juilliard being then in Europe and Mr. McCurdy in Morristown.

Word came to this city yesterday that Thomas D. Jordan, former Controller of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, was on his way back here and would arrive at his Englewood home, which has been prepared for his coming, to-day. Mr. Jordan has been heard from at different points in the South and Southwest in the last six weeks, and has said invariably that he would come back whenever he got ready, and not before. He was one of the witnesses wanted by the Armstrong Committee to explain the "yellow-dog" payments through the various outside accounts the Equitable Life maintained in its subsidiary companies under the old régime.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Provident Savings Life Association yesterday the retiring Directors were re-elected, the Actuary of the company, N. M. Moir being chosen to the board to fill a vacancy.

EVICTED A WHOLE BLOCKFUL.

Marshal Lazarus Tempered the Wind and Dodged Missiles with Skill.

City Marshal Lazarus had one of the busiest days of his life yesterday, and after it was over he said he thought that as a dodger, with highly developed skill in evading brickbats and flatirons intended as passing expressions of disgust at some of the functions of his office, he deserved honorable mention.

Followed by forty big negroes the Marshal went into the block in Thirty-second Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, yesterday to evict 500 men, women, children, dogs, and cats, who have been living in the houses which are to be torn down to give space for the new Pennsylvania Railroad Station.

When the Marshal and his men started in they had to lay off for a few moments to give way to a wake. Patrick Flood, aged 84, who had just been served with a dispossess notice, had died, and his friends and relatives were doing honor to his memory. The Marshal ordered his men to stand by till the proceedings were ended. Then Lazarus started in.

"Get to work, men," he commanded. As he did so a crowd of small boys on a nearby roof dropped a shower of stones upon him.

"Don't stop, men; keep at it," he commanded. Then the boys dropped some more stones, spicing the shower with a few bricks. Despite the stoning the pavement in half an hour was littered with all sorts of household articles from cradles to cook stoves. There was an occasional cat or dog, faithful to his master, which stuck to its post, and the street was soon full of hysterical women and excited men.

Patrick Kiernan, a big teamster, stood on the sidewalk crying like a child.

"What's the matter, man?" asked the Marshal.

"I'm out of a job," moaned Kiernan, "an' me wife's sick, with the four children." The Marshal dug into his pocket and handed Kiernan something that shone in the sunlight. In another house Mrs. Riordan, an aged woman, was too ill to be moved.

"Let her stay, boys," ordered the Marshal. "We won't put her out now." At another place Lazarus found a woman who was screaming at the top of her voice.

"What's the trouble with you, now," asked the evictor.

"It'll cost me $8 to get another place to live," she cried, "an' I've only got $5 to me namo." The Marshal paid the difference from his own pocket. Pursuing the work, he found that distress among the evicted men and women was general. He started a subscription, and in a short time enough money was raised to house eight families. While he was working on this mission a woman leaned out of a second story window and cursed him.

"My good woman," he remonstrated, "I'm obliged by law to do this."

"Law, is it, ye divil?" she shouted, "an' take that fer yer law," hurling a water pitcher at him. The Marshal dodged.

Kong Wong, a laundryman, didn't understand the eviction proceedings, and started to fight.

"Robbee Chinaman," he screeched, as the negroes began to remove his effects. "Me no standee rob." He picked up a flatiron and began a lively argument, but was quickly subdued.

The Pennsylvania Railroad notified the tenants a year ago that it had decided on April 5 as moving day.

BOY KICKED HIS TEACHER.

Public School Pupil Arrested on the Charge of Assault.

Beatrice Dionian, a teacher in the public school at 169th Street and Audubon Avenue, had trouble yesterday with 13-year-old John Keiderling, a German, who lives at 456 West 167th Street.

"Go out of the room," she said to the boy.

"Ferget it," the youngster is said to have answered.

She started to put him out of the room, and he kicked her. The bruise was serious enough to demand the attention of a physician. She had the boy arrested. When he was taken to the Gerry Society on a charge of assault, he said:

"Aw, I didn't kick me teacher. She jes' fell over me foot. See?"

DOWIE PLANNED HAREM OF SEVEN NEW WIVES

Zion Officers Tell of Ex-First Apostle's Polygamous Project.

NUCLEUS OF MEXICO COLONY

Mrs. Dowie Tells of Threat of Physical Violence When She Declined to be Divorced.

Special to The New York Times.

ZION CITY, Ill., April 5.—At a meeting of the officers of the Christian Catholic Church here to-day, it was revealed that John Alexander Dowie, the deposed First Apostle of Zion, had planned a harem of seven wives. He had gone so far as to select the women who were to demonstrate to the world the secret polygamous teaching. Dowie had selected all of them. To five of them he had proposed, and had been accepted.

Dowie and his harem were to have been the nucleus around which it was proposed to found Paraside Colony in East Central Mexico. Dowie outlined this plan of a polygamous colony to his overseers. At the same time he asked them to help him divorce his present wife on the grounds of incompatability. The proposition was made to the leaders of the church about a week before Dowie was stricken with paralysis.

Mrs. Dowie attended the meeting to-night. With a voice trembling with emotion and with tears streaming down her face, she told the overseers, the deacons, and deaconesses, the evangelists, and the Elders Dowie's proposals to put her away that he might espouse seven younger women. She told how he had threatened her with violence because she revolted. Her son, Gladstone, added his testimony.

One by one the elders who had been apprised of Dowie's polygamous plans by himself told how he had argued with them, and the violent rage that had followed their rejection of his proposals. He was held up to scorn as a man who had not only robbed his trusting followers of the product of their toil, but who had shattered every sacred tradition of the home.

This arraignment of the former head of the Church took place at a meeting that began at 10 o'clock in the morning and lasted until 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. More than 200 officers, men and women, were assembled in Room 103 at Zion College, the stately pile that represents more than $200,000 of the money of a frugal community. The keynote of the meeting was no compromise.

"It is a fight to the finish," Deputy Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva said. "No compromise is possible."

This statement was called forth partly by a statement that had been given out in the afternoon by Fielding H. Wilhite, Secretary of the Zion Paradise Plantation of Mexico and Dowie's only adherent in Zion City. Wilhite had been selected by Dowie to succeed Voliva as his attorney. Although Wilhite declined to serve in that capacity, after legal advice that his position would be untenable, his sympathies are with Dowie. For that reason he was not allowed to attend the officers' meeting.

Mrs. Dowie was one of the first speakers. Althoug in a conition of semi-prostration and arising from a sick bed, she related how Dowie, soon after his assuming the title and robe of First Apostle, broached the subject of polygamy to her. This was soon after Miss Ruth Hofer, the Swiss heiress had taken up her residence in the annex built for her reception on the dwelling of Deacon R. W. Ely, adjoining Dowie's residence.

"I bitterly opposed this teaching," Mrs. Dowie said, in trembling tones.

"Every instinct of my womanhood revolted at such a dreadful proposition. I had been a faithful wife for many years, in sickness and in health, in prosperity and adversity, and now I found that I was to be replaced. This marked the beginning of our differences and they grew to such a degree that it was impossible to live with Dr. Dowie."

Mrs. Dowie told how Dowie had threatened her with volence. One of these occasions was last May, on Dowie's birthday, when he wished to signalize the event by a proclamation of his intentions to found a polygamous colony. Mrs. Dowie and he had angry words. Dowie threatened her with a chair and it became necessary for the servants to go to the assistance of the terrified woman. Other evidence was introduced showing that Mrs. Dowie had been in such fear of her husband's violence at times that his valet had locked the raging First Apostle in his own apartments.

Wadsworth, Sr., Confers with Higgins.

ALBANY, April 5.—Congressman James W. Wadsworth was in Albany to-day, and this afternoon called on Gov. Higgins. The Governor was asked subsequently if Congressman Wadsworth had talked with him on any phase of the situation in the Republican Party in this State, and he replied that he did not care to discuss the matters about which they had talked.

Land of the Cabby in Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—It is a peculiarity of Paris, which every visitor who knows enough French to tell one dialect from another must have noticed, that nearly all Paris cabmen come from the same part of the country. The same thing is true of coal merchants and of dealers in roasted chestnuts, who come from the Auvergne; of the goatherds, who hawk their milk about the streets, and who are Breton peasants; and of many other trades.

But Cabdrivers' Land is probably little known to Englishmen. It is down in the Aveyron, and Rodez is its capital, a tiny village, where the worst language and the best hearts in all France are to be found. The eldest of each family in Rodes takes the land and the paternal cottage. The old folks live with him until their death, and the younger sons go to Paris and drive cabs. For years they drive about in all weathers, scraping together sou by sou until they have garnered enough to go home and pay for their board and lodging for the remainder of their days. They go with the elder brother to a notary on the first day of their return home, and sign a deed by which he is bound to keep them for the remainder of their days in idleness in return for their savings.

There is an old priest in Rodes who thoroughly understands his flock. He never asks them to enter the church, but chats with them outside it, and preaches informal sermons as he thinks fit. A few days ago a deputation of the men took him a plaster statuette of St. Fiacre, (falsely believed to be the cabmen's patron saint,) whose rake—for St. Fiacre was really a gardener—they had cut away, and substituted a tiny cabman's whip.—London Standard.

WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Amateurs Meet in Rough Bouts for Metropolitan Titles.

Amateur wrestlers met last night in the preliminary bouts of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Union championship. The tournament, which was held in the Boys' Club, Tenth Street and Avenue A, was in seven classes, under the direction of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. As every pair came to the mat there was the fiercest sort of competition. Because of the manner in which the wrestlers went at each other there was more than the usual amount of blood flowing. Several times contestants were thrown clear out of the ring, receiving cuts from the rough edges of the improvised stage.

The first bout showed the mettle of the wrestlers, when T. Lee, of the St. George's Athletic Club, threw George Chadwick of the Boys' Club, out of the ring, and took along with him John Steil, who was acting as referee. All were bruised and cut. Chadwick fell underneath, and when Lee got him back into the ring again he had little difficulty in scoring a fall by a half Nelson in 12 seconds. The summary:

Bantam Weight, 105-Pound Class.—T. Lee, St. George's Athletic Club, defeated George Chadwick, Boys' Club, by half Nelson. Time—0:12. M. M. MAX CHALLENGED HIM.

Bernhardt's Leading Man to Fight Fred Mayer in France, Perhaps.

William F. Connor, who, with the Shuberts, has managed the tour of Mme. Bernhardt this season, verified yesterday the report that a duel had been arranged between M. Max, leading man of Mme. Bernhardt's company, and Fred Mayer, the star's recent representative. Mr. Max issued the challenge.

Mr. Connor said that under other circumstances he would not care to talk of happenings in the company, but as the unpleasantness had become public he wished to state that Mr. Mayer had been discharged from the employ of Mme. Bernhardt. He wouldn't tell what it was all about. The duel is scheduled to take place as soon as M. Max gets back to France.

"THIRD" GARDEN OF EUROPE.

New Villa of Austrian Emperor—A Rothschild Property.

VIENNA, Feb. 26.—According to gossip in Court circles, the Emperor has just bought the Hohe Warte villa and gardens of the late Baron Nathaniel Rothschild for his favorite granddaughter, the Princess Elisabeth Windischgraetz.

The property is situated on a hill overlooking the city, and within the municipal boundaries. The villa is a commodious and handsome building, but the great glory of the place is its gardens, which rank among the first three or four in Europe. Potsdam and the grounds of one of the French Rothschilds are possibly finer, but the Hohe Warte is said to be a good third. Here one sees in a sense the triumph of man over nature. For the late Baron Rothschild could scarcely have selected a more bleak and barren hillside for the creation of such a garden. It is in the Italian style, and laid out with charming terraces and cunningly devised archways, through which one obtains most picturesque glimpses of the great City of Vienna and the distant Danube. But even more wonderful than the grounds is the array of conservatories and hothouses, which furnish strawberries and the choicest fruits in profusion almost throughout the year.

The greatest treasure under glass, however, is a giant Bougainvillea, possibly the finest specimen in the world. It completely covers the spanroof of a greenhouse, which has twice been lengthened to permit its continued growth, and its masses of purple bloom compel the admiration of every visitor. And visitors were many in the late owner's time, for the gardens were open to the public for three months every Spring, upon payment of a small fee, which was given to the Vienna Ambulance Society.

Princess Elisabeth and her husband, Prince Otto Windischgraetz, have just been on a visit to the Emperor at Schoenbrunn. They are living now at Prague, and have no Vienna residence. The Emperor will doubtless be glad to have the only child of his only son with her two babies in a home where he can see them more frequently.—London Pall Mall Gazette.

TWO WOMEN IN A RUNAWAY.

Said They Had Borrowed Brougham from Adrian Iselin.

Henry Goodwin of 108 West Fifty-sixth Street was thinking deeply on some subject yesterday afternoon as he drove a brougham down Sixth Avenue. The reins fell to the street trailing along by the side of the brougham. Presently they caught on the hub of a front wheel, and then they were rolled up so fast that the horses were suddenly yanked backward on their haunches. They plunged and reared until they broke the reins, and then they went racing down the avenue.

Two women in the brougham began to scream. The horses had run only a block when at Thirty-eighth Street Policeman Charles Dennison of the Tenderloin station jumped at their heads, but missed them. They ran into a Long Island Express wagon at Thirty-seventh Street, broke the pole of the brougham, and were thrown to the ground. Dennison, who had picked himself up and followed, prevented their further flight.

The two women jumped out of the brougham, and, saying excitedly, "Oh, it's not our rig; we borrowed it from Adrian Iselin," they hurried away. Goodwin, who had stuck to his box in all the excitement, wasn't hurt.

THEFTS STIR UP ELMHURST.

Police Denounced for Not Stopping the Burglaries There.

The members of the Elmhurst Club in Queens will hold a meeting to-night in their clubhouse to denounce the police for not capturing the burglars that have robbed nearly every house in or near Elmhurst.

The thives have visited on an average of six houses every night they have operated in Elmhurst, and the total of property stolen would capitalize a small bank, according to statements by those who profess to know.

The Elmhurst Club holds a euchre party once a week, and every night the club has met during the Fall and Winter some of the members have returned to their homes to find that they had been robbed.

There is some talk of forming a vigilance committee to patrol the streets at night, and ex-District Attorney Gregg is talked of as the head of such an organization.

Stolen Yacht Found Abandoned.

A thirty-foot yacht that was stolen from Jersey City on Wednesday was found abondoned early yesterday morning in the East River about 200 feet out from the North Sixth Street dock in Williamsburg. The boat was drifting helplessly about with mainsail and jib set. The name Puritan was on the boat's stern, and on the cabin door was written in pencil: "Frederick Petersen, Jersey City." REPUBLIC OIL CO. QUITS.

Standard Oil Will Get Its Business in Three Western States.

Dispatches from the West yesterday stated that the Republic Oil Company had disposed of all its interests in the States of Indiana, Nebraska, and Iowa, and had withdrawn wholly from those States. The company filed a notice with the Secretary of State in each State, stating that its offices had been closed and the company's agents withdrawn.

It was proved by Attorney General Hadley of Missouri, during the recent Standard Oil hearing here, that the Standard controlled the Republic Oil Company absolutely.

A person of authority in the Standard Oil Company stated last night that the withdrawal of the Republic Oil Company from the territory covered by the dispatches from the West simply meant that the business of that section would be handled by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and other subsidiary companies of the Standard Oil Company. He added that the determination to cease doing business through the Republic Oil Company had been arrived at some time ago independently of the litigation in Missouri.

JEROME CHARGES FRAUD IN HEARST'S PETITION

Says Many Signatures of Nominators Were Forged.

REGISTERS' CLERK ARRESTED

Affidavits Charge That Goldberger Directed the Work of Copying Names from City Record.

Facts throwing doubt on the validity of the petition nominating William R. Hearst for Mayor as an independent candidate in the last campaign were brought out yesterday in the Tombs Court, when Benjamin M. Goldberger, a clerk in the Register's office and a Commissioner of Deeds, was arraigned before Magistrate Moss on a charge of forgery in the third degree. This charge will be changed to violation of Section 41 G of the Penal Code, which makes it a felony to "make and file false certificates."

District Attorney Jerome appeared in person against the prisoner, and told the Magistrate that Goldberger was employed last Fall to prepare the petition nominating Mr. Hearst, as well as John Ford and James G. Phelps Stokes, candidates for Controller and President of the Board of Aldermen, respectively. Mr. Jerome said in open court:

"It has already been proved that from 30 to 40 per cent. of the names attached to the petition were forged, and the end is not yet. The forgeries were made under the directions of this man."

Other officials in the District Attorney's office who have been concerned in the investigation leading up to the arrest of Goldberger, said that of the total number of 6,500 names attached to the petition not less than 2,000 have already been discovered to be forgeries.

Copied Names from a List.

The warrant for Goldberger, who lives at 780 East 146th Street, and works in the Register's office, at 116 Nassau Street, was issued by the Magistrate on the presentation by Mr. Jerome of two affidavits. One of these was signed by William Von Allen, who alleges that, with several other employes of an advertising concern, he was hired by Goldberger to write signatures on the Hearst petition from the list of registered voters printed in The City Record before election.

The other affidavit was made by Joseph G. Klein, a Commissioner of Deeds, who was arrested last year, charged with making false certificates, and who now says that he signed the certificates of acknowledgment that led to his arrest at the direction of Goldberger. It was said last night that the District Attorney has other witnesses who have furnished similar testimony.

After bail for Goldberger had been fixed at $3,000 the prisoner had a long talk with Mr. Jerome. Afterward the Magistrate consented to parole Goldberger over night in the custody of the District Attorney. He was then taken to the office of Assistant District Attorney Whiteside and remained there for hours talking with Mr. Jerome, Mr. Whiteside, and Assistant District Attorney Krotel. It was rumored that Goldberger had made a detailed statement, shifting a part of the responsibility for the alleged crime to other shoulders and that more arrests are probable.

It was reported last night on good authority that several politicians in this city, including some Republican district leaders and some of Mr. Hearst's political lieutenants, may be called on to explain some peculiar circumstances, such as, for instance, that a large part of the false certificates were made out and acknowledged in the rooms at 464 Grand Street, occupied by the club of which Jacob Neustadt, the district leader, is the leading spirit.

Prisoners Supplied Information.

The first inkling of the character of parts of the Hearst petition came to the District Attorney through the arrest of Joseph G. Klein, Henry Melrose, Louis Levine, and George A. Hyne, all Commissioners of Deeds, who were accused by the Attorney General of filing forged nomination petitions in an uptown Assembly district. They were held for trial in Special Sessions, and there the cases against them are still pending. In the meantime it is understood that they have furnished to the District Attorney much of the information which enabled him to carry the investigation higher up. And it was said yesterday that more than a score of men may be arrested for offenses similar to those attributed to the four men awaiting trial.

As far as could be learned last night, Goldberger made a contract to furnish names for the Hearst petition. For this purpose he is said to have used Von Allen and the other clerks. They spent several days at the Grand Street clubrooms, working from morning till night.

Each man, it is charged, would write five or six of the twenty-five signatures for which there was room on each petition blank. They had orders to write the names several lines apart, and then pass on the partly filled out petition to the next man. In this way, it was said yesterday, the petition appeared to be made up of names written in many different hands.

About 6,500 Names on Blanks.

At night Goldberger, it was said, would bring around three or four notaries, to affix their signatures to the bottom of the blanks that had been filled out. The petition was made up in the last moment, and even by hard work it was not possible to get it ready until a few hours before the time for filing it expired. The total number of names on the blanks was about 6,500.

While the evidence collected so far affects only the petition nominating Hearst, Ford, and Stokes, the District Attorney has also scrutinized the separate petitions filed for the nomination of borough and county officers and Assemblymen. Three-fourths of those petitions have been cursorily examined, and it is said that not one of them has been found free from taint. It was impossible to learn last night what effect these disclosures may have on the standing of the Hearst men who won out at the polls. Borough President Coler ranks foremost in the group.

The petitions on which the present investigation by the District Attorney throws doubt were all drawn in New York County. There is reason to believe, however, it was said last night, that the methods used in Manhattan and the Bronx were duplicated in other boroughs. On the other hand, doubt was expressed last night by lawyers familiar with the election law that the courts would unseat an otherwise regularly elected officer on the ground of taint attaching to the petition nominating him unless it could be proved that he was cognizant of the fraud.

FOOD

DAVID HARUM'S HAUNTS

Where the Winters Are Cold and the Snows Deep.

Writing from the vicinity David Harum made famous, a man says that he was an habitual coffee drinker, and, although he knew it was doing him harm, was too obstinate to give it up, till all at once he went to pieces with nervousness and insomnia, loss of appetite, weakness, and a generally used-up feeling, which practically unfitted him for his arduous occupation, and kept him on a couch at home when his duty did not call him out.

"While in this condition Grape-Nuts food was suggested to me, and, abandoning coffee, I began to use it. Although it was in the middle of Winter and the thermometer was often below zero, my entire living for about six weeks of severe exposure was Grape-Nuts with a little bread and butter and a cup of hot water, till I was wise enough to make Postum Food Coffee my table beverage.

"After the first two weeks I began to feel better, and during the whole Winter I never lost a trip on my mail route, frequently being on the road 7 or 8 hours at a time. The constant marvel to me was how a person could do the amount of work and endure the fatigue and hardship as I did, on so small an amount of food. But I found my new rations so perfectly satisfactory that I have continued them—using both Postum and Grape-Nuts at every meal, and often they comprise my entire meal. All my nervousness, irritability and insomnia have disappeared and healthy, natural sleep has come back to me.

"But what has been perhaps the greatest surprise to me is the fact that with the benefit to my general health has come a remarkable improvement in my eyesight.

"If a good appetite, good digestion, good eyesight, strong nerves, and an active brain are to be desired, I can say from my own experience that Grape-Nuts and Postum will supply them." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

ANOTHER DOMINGAN REVOLT.

At Samana—American Warship There and Others at Monte Cristi.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—More trouble is reported from Santo Domingo.

A cablegram received at the Navy Department to-day from Commander Southerland of the Yankee, dated at Santo Domingo City, says:

"A revolution has broken out at Samana. The Paducah is there. The Dubuque is at Monte Cristi. American interests are not involved."

In a second dispatch, dated Monte Cristi, Commander Southerland says that the American gunboat Don Juan de Austria is en route there.

Mr. Joubert, the Santo Domingan Minister, called at the State Department today to see Secretary Root, but had no information of his own respecting the latest uprising. He said in an interview afterward:

"I do not attach much importance to the revolutionary movement at Samana. My Government has not seen fit to advise me of it, and if the situation were not well under control I think I would have been notified. The revolutionists have no money, and any movement they start cannot last long. They are without ammunition and arms, and the lack of roads and means of communication makes it hard for a revolution to grow to any size unless it has ships at its disposal.

"The schooner Livonia, which sailed from Philadelphia for Santo Domingo, and was suspected of carrying armsm and ammunition for revolutionists, arrived at Santo Domingo City on March 24, but the report that she carried supplies for revolutionists was unfounded."

Wos Y Gil, the ex-President, who has been prominently identified with Domingan political upheavals, is no win Cuba, and Jiminez, who has been equally prominent in revolutions, is now in Porto Rico. So far as Mr. Joubert knows there is no disaffected leader of prominence in the vicinity of Samana.

CABMAN FOUND HIS $2,700.

How Sir Algernon Charles Coote Got Back Pocketbook He Dropped.

Sir Algernon Charles Coote, Ireland's premier Baronet, who returned here a few days ago from Nashville, Tenn., where he had been attending the fifth annual international convention of the student volunteer movement, has a high appreciation of the honesty of our cabmen. Yesterday morning, just before leaving for Canada, Sir Charles drove in a hansom from his hotel, the Prince George, to Baring, Magoun & Co., in Wall Street, to cash a draft.

He put the money in a pocketbook and put the book in an outside pocket of his topcoat, which he carried over his arm. He drove back to the hotel immediately on leaving the bank, and while passing through the corridor to take the elevator he suddenly missed his pocketbook.

Just as he turned to retrace his steps the cabman who had driven him to and from the bank came hurrying up with the pocketbook in his hand. He had found it lying on the seat of his cab.

The wallet contained $2,700 in bills, mostly of large denominations.

Sir Charles gave the cabman $20 and a cigar.

McADOO TALKS OF HIS BOOK.

It's About Police Conditions and Constructive, Not Destructive.

Ex-Police Commissioner McAdoo has written a book dealing with police conditions in New York. It is in the hands of publishers, whose names Mr. McAdoo will not tell. Mr. McAdoo says the book will soon be for sale to all those who want to read his views on police conditions. He says the work is constructive rather than destructive, and that while it attacks no one in particular, it points out how, in his estimation, the force and system could be improved.

"It was Job who said, 'Oh, that mine enemy had written a book,'" said Mr. McAdoo last night, with a smile, "and I suppose that the supplication will be applied to me. But, at any rate, I have written it, and it will be out soon.

"The aim of the book is to lift the system rather than to crush it. There is nothing sensational about the work, and it contains nothing but the truth as applied to actual conditions."

Mr. McAdoo is still confined to his home, at 205 West Fifty-seventh Street, by the effect of a fall in Central Park a few weeks ago, when he strained his right ankle.

RAPID TRANSIT BOARD MAY SUE INTERBOROUGH

Company Would Use Subway Conduits for Trolley System.

CONTROLLER'S SUBWAY IDEA

He'd Build One Under the River to Replace the Eleventh Avenue Tracks.

Legal proceedings are likely to be employed by the Rapid Transit Commission to settle a dispute which has arisen between that body and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company over the latter's proposal to connect the feed wires of the Subway and those of the surface roads of the Interborough trolley system in the Bronx.

The matter was brought to the attention of the board at yesterday's meeting by George L. Rives, the board's counsel. He declared that the city had spent more than $1,500,000 for the construction of the conduits running along the walls of the Subway, and that the company's proposal involved using city property to run its trolleys.

Mr. Rives, in his communication to the board, said the company wanted to make the connections at Broadway and 181st Street, Broadway and 201st Street, Broadway and 230th Street, Lenox Avenue and 145th Street, Mott Avenue and 149th Street, Boston Road and 177th Street, and at Westchester Avenue and 149th Street.

Chief Engineer Rice informed the board that complications would result from the making of such connections, and he declared the company had already reversed its position in the matter. When the proposal first came to his attention, he said, he had consulted the company and it had been agreed that the company should make a formal application to make the connections. Then the official with whom he had consulted found that this course did not meet the approval of his superiors, and it next was announced by the company that it intended to go ahead and make the connections, so that it could use its present Subway power house to furnish the power for its allied surface lines.

"The company takes the position," said Mr. Rice, "that its power house produces a surplus of power, and that the ducts have more space than is needed for the subway service. Therefore they contend that the connection can be made strictly within their rights. The officials hold that the Bronx trolley lines are feeders to the Subway, and that by making these connections they will add to the comfort of passengers, and will increase the city revenues by adding to the Subway traffic."

When the matter was under discussion in the board it was suggested that injunction proceedings be brought at once to test the rights of the city and the road, but it was finally decided to refer the entire matter to Chief Engineer Rice, who will report at the next meeting as to the physical conditions involved. Then the attorneys for the board will take up the legal aspect of the case, and recommend action. The Interborough plan, it was pointed out, would relieve the company in the Bronx from the expense of constructing and maintaining a power house or feed wires.

When the conduits were constructed in the Subway the city received bills for more than $1,500,000 from the construction company for the work. Controller Grout held up the bills, contending the work to be part of the equipment, and therefore to be paid by the operating company. The company contended that the work was part of the construction contract, and the courts sustained its contention, compelling the city to pay the bills.

Mr. Rives sent another communication to the board yesterday, calling its attention to the new law compelling the removal of the New York Central tracks from Eleventh Avenue. He said the board must act within a year, as the railroad must be condemned and the compensation paid in that time. Chief Engineer Rice was instructed to put some of his engineers at work immediately, so that surveys could be made and a basis of action evolved. President Orr was requested to communicate at once with President Newman of the New York Central, so that the proceedings could be hastened.

Commissioner Charles Stewart Smith wanted to know if the proposed subway for the Eleventh Avenue tracks could not be made to accommodate passenger trains as well as the Central's freight trains. Chief Engineer Rice said this could be done if patent devices were used for platform connections with the trains.

Controller Metz caused no little amusement by inquiring if the subway could not be built under the Hudson River outside the pier line.

"That would save tearing up the streets," he declared. "You would not have to tear up the water, and the subway could be made waterproof. Then we could build a belt line around the island. We've got to come to it some day. Why not begin now?"

Chief Engineer Rice brought up his report for a system of automatic valves for the ventilation of the subway, and it was practically agreed to allow him $300,000 for installing the system. Counsel for the board will prepare the formal resolutions for adoption at the next meeting so the work can be pushed at once.

CROWD SEES BROADWAY FIRE.

Cars Blocked and Streets Packed in the Theatre District.

At just about the time the latest of theatregoers should have been taking their seats in the several playhouses within six blocks of Broadway and Thirty-second Street last night a furnace in the basement of the building 1,257 Broadway set fire to the place. A fire alarm from that section of the city at night brings out many pieces of apparatus and many people to see them work. Throngs stopped on their way to the theatres and flocked out from the Imperial Hotel and the New Grand Hotel, just across the street.

In a few minutes Broadway was black with humanity. All the reserves were hurried over from the Tenderloin station to hold back the crowds, so that the firemen could get at the five-hundred-dollar blaze. For nearly thirty minutes street-car traffic was held up. Street cars were banked from Forty-second to Twenty-third Street.

On the first floor of the building is a Western Union office and a postcard company. Some 200 messenger boxes in the neighborhood were put out of commission. Miss Elisabeth Moreland of 138 Fourteenth Street, Brooklyn, cashier of the Rotograph Company, ran out into the street with the cashbox in her arms. With that safely held, she looked serenely on at the fire and its fighters.

On the second floor of the building is the manicure shop. Some eight or ten female manicurists rushed out into Broadway with finger instruments in their hands and their aprons fluttering in the wind. The crowd cheered them heartily as they begged the firemen to bring down their hats and cloaks right away.

A fireman found an excited manicurist running around the building turning out lights.

"Hold on," he yelled, "that's not the kind of fire we want to put out. It's the other kind."

The blaze was confined to the basement, though water did some damage on the first floor. The thick black smoke from the burning rubber insulation of the wires in the basement chased the operators and the messenger boys out of the place in a hurry, but they gathered up the telegrams received and those waiting to be sent and handled them from a near-by office.

CANAL ZONE HEALTHFUL.

Not One Case of Yellow Fever in February—Death Rate Small.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Dr. W. C. Gorgas, chief sanitary officer of the Canal Zone, has submitted a report to the Canal Commission for February, which shows a sick rate of 20 for each 1,000 of the 23,000 canal employes. In the opinion of Dr. Gorgas, this is an excellent state of health. There were 56 deaths among canal employes, and of these, 49 were negroes. The death rate among employes shows an annual rate of 30 to each 1,000 persons.

The death rate among non-employes was 42 per 1,000. Pneumonia and malarial fever were the chief causes of death. There were no yellow fever cases on the Isthmus in spite of its presence in Pacific ports south of Panama and in Caribbean ports both north and south of Colon.

Bill to Save Tucker's Life Defeated.

BOSTON, April 5.—The bill providing for life imprisonment for murder instead of death in cases where conviction is by circumstantial evidence was defeated in the Massachusetts House to-day. The bill was brought into the House with an adverse committee report, and its supporters sought to substitute the bill for the report. It had been planned that the passage of the act would save Charles L. Tucker, under sentence of death for murdering Mabel Page.

Slightly Used Pianos at Far Less Than Half Original Cost.

The difference between our "disposal sales" of pianos taken in trade and the ordinary sale of "used" pianos is just this:

We sell only such pianos as have come to us in our regular business, and we sell them for JUST WHAT THEY STAND US, plus the cost of putting them in good order. We ask no profit from this branch of our piano business. We do NOT buy up piano wrecks and sell them at a profit to whomsoever can be deceived by new varnish.

And We Will Sell These Good Pianos at Their Cost to Us on Easy Terms of Payment if Desired.

Note the famous makes included in the following list. Every one of these instruments has been put into good condition. Think of getting a Steinway Grand for $200 or a thousand-dollar Erard for $575!

"Model" and "Leader" Refrigerators.

We have no hesitation in saying the "Model" and the "Leader" are the two best refrigerators on the market.

The MODEL is made of first class material, and all lumber is thoroughly kiln dried; it is strongly built, and the space between the outer and inner walls is filled with charcoal—so well constructed that the charcoal cannot settle. The cold air circulation is so regulated that pure chilled air is always in the provision chamber. The side walls in the ice chamber, as well as the waste pipes, are removable. Golden oak finish, highly polished. The shelves are galvanized iron, and the lining throughout is of zinc.

The LEADER is the same with one exception—it is not charcoal filled. But it has the charcoal sheathing.

CONGRESS KINDERGARTEN FOR THE STAND-PATTERS

Rainey Tells How Watch Trust Profits by the Tariff.

PHOTOGRAPH IN ILLUSTRATION

Timepieces Reimported from England to Undersell the Market Here—Contract Signed by Retailers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—For an hour and a half this afternoon Representative Rainey of Illinois roasted the stand-pat Republicans of the House in a fashion that was not at all to their liking, but that filled his fellow-Democrats with glee. As he himself put it, he was conducting a kindergarten for stand-patters, and he used an illustration that made the most confirmed of them all, even Sereno E. Payne, sit up and take notice.

It was a practical object lesson, on a single schedule of the Dingley tariff, that on watches; and before he had talked for five minutes Mr. Rainey had so clearly shown that he was loaded with the hottest kind of hot shot for any stand-patter who attempted to interrupt that they seldom dared try it.

Mr. Rainey got his time on the debate on the Post Office Appropriation bill. He began at once to talk about the two prices established by the protected industries, that for export and that for home consumption.

"We have built a tariff wall," he said, "and on this side of it the protected industries make their price for their goods; but on the other side, out in the open, they meet the competition of the world, and there, where the law of supply and demand still obtains, they make another and lower price."

All the protection gladiators of the Republicans were in their places on the floor, but they had heard this sort of talk so much that it had no more interest for them. Occasionally they languidly examined a large photograph which Mr. Rainey had had set up on an easel in front of the Speaker's desk. But there seemed to be nothing to compel their attention. The photograph was of the front of the store of a New York City jeweler, who furnished Mr. Rainey with the material for his object lesson, and it showed the huge sign which advertises a "Great protection sale. Waltham and Elgin watches bought in England cheaper than in America and brought back to uedersell this market."

But when Mr. Rainey began to talk about watches a change came over the attitude of the stand-patters. They swung around in their chairs and began to listen as if they realized that the message was to them, and from that time on until adjournment the whole House gave an exhibition of quiet, close attention very seldom seen in the usually turbulent, disorderly chamber.

"I propose to talk about watches," said Mr. Rainey, "not because they furnish any exception to the general rule, but for the reason that at the present time, on account of the energy and ability of one American who does business in the City of New York the fallacy of the protective system has been fully and completely demonstrated. We produce in this country from $14,000,000 to $18,000,000 worth of watches every year; we import into this country less than $2,000,000 worth of watches annually, nearly all of the imported watches coming from Switzerland. The Dingley law fixes a tariff of 25 per cent. ad valorem upon watch movements, and in addition a specific tax, varying according to the number of jewels. The tariff on watch cases, parts of watches, &c., is fixed at 40 per cent. ad valorem. The specific and ad valorom duties on watches and watch cases amount to nearly 50 per cent. of their value."

Then Mr. Rainey described how the New York jeweler had been buying American-made watches in the foreign markets for two or three years, until he had accumulated a large stock of them. He reimported them, free of duty, as American manufactures, and is now selling them at less than the protected trust's prices.

"Until the Dingley tariff went into effect we had one price for American-made watches at home, and the same price prevailed abroad. Soon after that time the American Watch Trust was formed. What is known as the Big Four in the watch business are the American Waltham Watch Company of Waltham, Mass.; the Crescent Watch Case Company of Philadelphia, the Elgin National Watch Company of Elgin, Ill., and the Keystone Watch Case Company of Newark, N. J. The Waltham Compaany makes movements only. It exports them in Crescent cases. The Elgin Company makes movements only, and sells them to the Keystone Company for export. The New York Standard Watch Company of Jersey City, the Philadelphia Watch Company of Riverside, N. J., and the Howard Watch Company of Boston are controlled by the same capital that controls the Keystone Company, and the Howard watches are now made in the Waltham factory."

Mr. Rainey went on to charge that the Waltham and Elgin Companies require retail dealers to enter into a contract not to sell watches below certain prices fixed by the trust.

"Why don't you ask me how I know that?" he shouted. "Don't you want to know? Well, whether you do or not I am going to tell you. I have obtained copies of the contracts, and I am going to have them put in The Record."

With that he sent to the desk a bill which had been lent to him by a jeweler, whose name he said he was not at liberty to reveal. At the bottom of the bill this contract was printed, which the Clerk read:

Then Mr. Rainey began to give specific illustrations of the effect the contracts have upon the price of watches in this country.

"Under these contracts," he said, "an Elgin 'Veritas' movement cannot be sold for a less price than $85. The enterprising New York dealer in question sells it for $25.38. No American dealer is permitted under his ironclad contract with the Waltham Company to sell the Riverside Maximus movement for less than $60. This New York dealer sells it at $42.30. A 240 Elgin Raymond can be sold by no other dealer in the United States at less than $24; he sells it for $16.39. The Crescent St. 21 jewels, Waltham movement, can be purchased from him for $18.98; no dealer is permitted under his contract to sell it for less than $26.

"He simply buys American watches abroad, upon which a jobber in some capital of Europe has made a profit and perhaps a retailer has also made a profit. He buys watches upon which the freight has been paid across the Atlantic, and pays freight on them back to New York. With all the items added he is able to sell the watches he brings back from 25 to 50 per cent. cheaper than the American retailer who buys from the trust can possibly sell them.

"I'll satisfy every Republican on this floor before I'm through, and if I don't succeed in satisfying you I shall at least satisfy your constituents, and when the Sixtieth Congress is elected there'll be many of you—and I'll not regret it—relegated to private walks of life."

It was then 5 o'clock, and as Mr. Rainey needed more than an hour to finish his object lesson, he decided to conclude to-morrow, and the House adjourned.

MR. KOOPMAN'S PAINTINGS.

Objection by the Artist and Others to Recent Comments.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The "inspired" article that appeared in your to-day's issue on my paintings now at Fishel, Adler & Schwartz's Galleries demands an answer; and, in a spirit of justice, I beg you to insert this letter in your next issue.

THE TIMES received an invitation from the galleries the day of the opening, March 19. The exhibition has been on for over two weeks. THE TIMES has not noticed the existence of my exhibition until to-day.

A letter written by me appeared in last Sunday's edition of The New York Herald, denouncing bogus old-master sales. THE TIMES then wrote on my pictures.

However much THE TIMES may twist its criticism, it should not twist the facts. It was the "Two Forces" which received the honors THE TIMES raves against—not "Hoisting Sail." This was only honored by being placed finely at the International Exhibition in London in 1904—and where Rodin pointed it out as a work of art.

But THE TIMES, with its "shudders" and pitying of juries and critics, has placed itself on the obelisk of superior wisdom in art knowledge over the poor, deluded judgments of an International jury of the Paris Exposition, the London International jurors, the American juries of the Buffalo Exposition, St. Louis, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, and the National Academy and Society of American Artists here.

Let me add, I have not been in Paris for six years more than twice, and for only a few days at a time. I quitted the schools in 1890, and had an exhibition in 1892 at the American Art Association and at Keppel's in 1899, here in New York. AUGUSTUS KOOPMAN.

New York, April 4, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An article on the painting by Augustus Koopman in to-day's issue seems to me so malicious in its attack and so astonishing in its utter lack of all artistic sensibility or comprehension that I am moved to protest, as an artist, against such treatment of honest endeavor and accomplishment.

The astonishing manner in which your contributor sweeps away the decisions of international juries is, to say the least, humorous.

GILBERT WHITE.

New York, April 4, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As the policy of THE TIMES has heretofore been especially noteworthy for its unbiased treatment of all subjects, from poetry to politics, it is a source of satisfaction that such an article as that dignified by the title of "Paintings By Koopman" should be given space in your edition of to-day.

The sub-heading reads "Singular Results of An Art Education Pursued in Modern France." It should have been worded "Singular Results of Art Criticism as Pursued in Modern America," for the vituperation which follows it is a commentary upon the manners of the critic rather than upon the work of the artist. The latter may indeed have failed to demonstrate his ability to use the brush, but the former has unquestionably proven his inability to wield the pen. The pen should be used to write and not to sling ink or to stab.

It is easy to understand that among Philistines, the admirer of Bougereau may not be in sympathy with Millet; that the lover of Millais may not understand Israels; that devotion to Monticelli should preclude interest in Meissonnier; that a great and sincere reverence for the bogus masters of Fifth Avenue should blind a man to the beauties of Whistler. The true critic, however, is able to discriminate wisely and to appreciate all of these artists in all of their manners and in all of their moods; for he is sufficiently broad-minded, intelligent, and interesting to look upon each and every work of art from the point of view of the artist and creator.

Criticism in its true essence does not possess "noisy and pretentious" qualities any more than the canvases which your critic ridicules.

PROF. ADLER THINKS SOCIAL LINES DANGEROUS

Tells the University Settlement to Strive Against "Classes."

WOULD ABOLISH THE SLUMS

Prof. Adler Says That Labor and Capital Should Be Brought Closer Together.

Prof. Felix Adler, the chief speaker at the annual meeting of the University Settlement Society yesterday afternoon at Sherry's, said that the gap which existed between the classes and the masses threatened to result in two different dialects. He believed, he said, that to fill this gap is one of the principal functions of the society.

Prof. Adler said he looked forward to the time when there would be no slums and when New York would be fringed with suburbs where the laborers could rub elbows in neighborly fashion with well-to-do merchants and professional men. Continuing, Prof. Adler said, in part:

> An Englishman has said that this country is one of great contrasts. A German said that it possesses boundless possibilities, but it seems to me that it is a Nation of marvelous transformations. The sudden growth of its institutions and universities is wonderful. Thirty-five years ago the labor question, which to-day fills public opinion with its noise and clamor, was little thought of. And one morning we woke up and found saddled upon us an empire in the Orient. The Kingdom of the Philippines stole upon us like a thief in the night, and I am one who wishes that there had been a guard to keep the burglar out.
> This society has also had a wonderful growth, and I have marveled at the multiplication of similar agencies that have been organized since its inception. The original inspiration of the movement arose from the crying out of the organic life of society against inorganic positions. The gap between the head and the body must be united. There is even danger of different dialects resulting from the separation.

Dr. Thomas Darlington, President of the Health Board, made a short address, in which he urged the co-operation of the society with the Tenement and Health Departments in educating poor people to be clean and to improve sanitary conditions.

Ex-Judge Henry E. Howland said that the society had exerted a great influence in educating the vast number of foreigners who remain in this city. He expressed the belief that most of the evils of the day could be obviated by the enlightenment of the poor people.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia presided over the meeting. These members of the council for three years were elected: Dr. John H. Finley, Henry P. Wertheim, William V. King, Stephen H. Olin, and Charles P. Howland.

GOULD SEEKS TRADE IN ASIA.

Western Pacific Road Arranges for a Trans-Pacific Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—It was announced here yesterday that the Western Pacific Railroad Company, the new Gould line that is extending to the Pacific, had concluded arrangements for a trans-Pacific steamship service. Negotiations have been entered into with the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-American Lines, and both have been found willing to enter into an agreement to run steamers to the Orient in connection with the road.

It is said that preference will be given to the North German Lloyd, and that a tentative agreement has already been entered into with that company.

At the office of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company it was said yesterday that nothing had been heard of negotiations with the Western Pacific. Mr. Boas, American agent of the Hamburg-American Line, said that such a deal as the San Francisco dispatch indicated might be carried on through the American offices. He refused to say whether there had been any such negotiations through his office.

MORAN FOUND NO RECORD.

Tried to Trace Bestgen Contribution to Campaign Fund.

BOSTON, April 5.—Officers of the Republican State Committee and John G. Bestgen of Quincy were examined by the Grand Jury late to-day in connection with charges brought by Mr. Bestgen against Robert G. Proctor, private secretary to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge. Mr. Bestgen has declared that he gave $225 to Mr. Proctor as a contribution to the campaign fund in October, 1904, and that there is no record of what became of the money.

District Attorney Moran said to-day that he had examined an itemized list of contributions on records of the Republican State Committee, and also the sworn records on file at the State House, but had found no mention of contributions credited to either Proctor or Bestgen.

The District Attorney sent a telegram to-day to James B. Reynolds, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury at Washington, who was formerly Secretary of the Republican State Committee, requesting his presence here as a witness in the case.

Pinault Looter to be Taken to Minneapolis—More Plunder Found.

ALBANY, April 5.—Gov. Higgins granted to-day the requisition of the Governor of Minnesota for the extradition of Albert W. Bartlett, alias Thomas J. Wainwright, who is wanted in Minneapolis on charges of having stolen jewelry and other valuables from the home of Nicholas J. Pinault of that city.

Bartlett was caretaker at the house, and it is charged that he stole property to the value of $4,600. He is under arrest in New York City.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 5.—Detectives to-day found two trunks here containing booty alleged to have been stolen from Dr. Nicholas J. Pinault of Minneapolis, Minn., by Albert W. Bartlett. The trunks arrived here Monday, consigned to Edward H. Bartlett of Bridgeport, Conn., a brother of the New York prisoner.

TEARS AT WOMEN'S COUNCIL.

Due to Rejection of Report Attacking Catholicism—Spirited Debate.

TOLEDO, Ohio, April 5.—The unanimous rejection of a resolution presented by Mrs. L. C. Manchester, delegate to the National Association of Loyal Women of American Liberty, protesting against the appropriation of any money by Congress for the support of sectarian schools, and some of the delegates retiring weeping from the convention hall, caused a stir at to-day's session of the National Council of Women.

Following this, Mrs. Kate Brownlee Sherwood, in an impassioned defense of the Catholic Church, presented a resolution to prevent any report from being made in public if it contained anything inimical to any creed or political belief. This received the unanimous approval of the council.

"In the name of 100,000 Catholic women, I thank Mrs. Sherwood," said Mrs. Elizabeth McGowan, President of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Society.

"In the name of 50,000 women of the Mormon Church, I thank Mrs. Sherwood," said Mrs. Clarissa Williams of the National Women's Relief Society of the Mormon Church.

Mrs. Manchester retired to the next room, and several of the National officers tried in vain to comfort her. Many tears were shed. The adoption of Mrs. Sherwood's resolution prevents Mrs. Manchester's report being read before it is passed upon by the Executive Committee, and she declared that unless she is allowed to read it in full she will withdraw her association from the council.

It became known yesterday that Mrs. Manchester's report contained charges against the Catholic Church, that the threatened war on France by Germany was in revenge for the action of the French Government toward the Vatican and that the Pope is using Emperor William as a catspaw. The report also charged that the Jesuits were responsible for eight of the wars that have involved so many nations in recent years.

The motto of the National Council is the Golden Rule, and in the discussion this morning there was a unanimous defense of this policy.

ATTEMPT TO VOTE WAS FATAL

Aged Inventor Overexerted Himself in Effort to Get to Polls.

CHICAGO, April 5.—Major Moses W. Jenks of Evanston, Ill., 86 years old, died yesterday as a direct result of his efforts to go to the polls on Tuesday. It was his boast that he had not failed to vote at elections in the past twenty years. Three times he tried to make his way to a carriage, but was too feeble. His exertions caused him to grow weaker, and he took to his bed, the end coming yesterday.

He was born at Providence, R. I., and attended Brown University. He invented and patented twenty-six mechanical devices, including a rubber clothes wringer. One of his latest inventions was a street-car fender, which was patented a year ago.

BUELOW COLLAPSES IN THE REICHSTAG

Faints After Delivering a Speech on Morocco.

STRAIN CAUSES BREAKDOWN

The Quarrel with France and the Struggle with Herr Holstein Have Taxed the Chancellor's Strength.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

BERLIN, April 5.—Prince Bülow, the Imperial Chancellor, after delivering a speech on the results of the Morocco Conference in the Reichstag to-day, fainted and was carried to a sitting room. It was at first feared that he was suffering from paralysis, but the physicians later announced that his indisposition was the result of an attack of influenza. There is no doubt, however, that it was the strain under which he had been laboring for the last three months that caused the Chancellor to break down.

Prince Bülow, after sleeping for some time in the President's room of the Reichstag, was able to go home. He has been advised to take a month's rest.

The Chancellor was overcome while Herr Bebel, the Socialist leader, was attacking Germany's policy in regard to Morocco. The contests between the Chancellor and Herr Bebel are always listened to with much interest, and Prince Bülow, during Herr Bebel's fiercest tirades, is in the habit of lying back in his chair with his eyes closed. He was doing this to-day when he was overcome, and for this reason his condition was not at first observed. It was only when his paleness and the fact that he was almost falling to the floor were noticed that he was removed.

Prince Bülow's illness was not caused by the Morocco crisis only, but also by the tremendous fight between himself and Herr von Holstein for supremacy in the guiding of Germany's foreign policy. Even now few people in Germany know who Holstein is, but he was a powerful official of the Foreign Office even in Bismarck's time, and his influence has been continually increasing. I am told that frequently during the régime of the late Foreign Secretary von Richthofen Ambassadors would confer on important matters with Holstein in preference to Richthofen. It is also said that Richthofen's death was due partly to the fight on behalf of Bülow that he made against Holstein.

Herr von Holstein was a bitter opponent of Prince Bülow's plan to call a Morocco Conference. He is also an enemy of Ambassador van Radowitz, whose success at Algeciras he did not desire to see. Holstein is the leader of the party in the Foreign Office opposed to France and Russia and friendly to Great Britain. It was he who proposed the exchange of Helgoland for Zanzibar.

BERLIN, April 5.—After Prince Bülow fainted to-day the sitting of the Reichstag was suspended for a quarter of an hour. At the end of that time Herr Bebel, who had been speaking when the Chancellor was taken ill, instead of continuing his speech, ended his remarks abruptly.

Various members then expressed their regret at the Chancellor's illness.

Business was continued because it was thought that an adjournment of the House would alarm the public, which was not advisable, as the physicians' reports of the Chancellor's condition were reassuring. But the voices of the speakers who followed Herr Bebel were pitched in a low tone, as though they thought they might disturb the sleeping Chancellor, as word was passed around from time to time that he still slept.

After Prince Bülow fainted, telephone messages were sent to Princess Bülow and to the Emperor. The Princess reached her husband in a few minutes. The Emperor was at luncheon when the intelligence was conveyed to him, and he immediately arose, recalled all his engagements for the afternoon, and ordered a carriage to go to the Reichstag. The Chancellor was sleeping when he arrived, and the Emperor did not disturb him.

The Empress also called at the Reichstag to inquire about the Chancellor's health.

Prof. Renvers, at 5:30 P. M., issued the following bulletin:

"His Highness Prince Bülow suffered from a fainting fit, from which he has now recovered."

In the Reichstag to-day, previous to his collapse, Prince Bülow said he wished to make a limited expression of the Government's Moroccan policy. He weighed his words, because the conference had not formally completed its work, and because the question had not been discussed by other Parliaments. Besides, he did not wish to risk disturbing the agreement arrived at after so long a struggle.

Continuing, the Chancellor said:

"There have been weeks when the minds of the people were disturbed by thoughts of war. Why was this the case? Are our interests in Morocco vital enough for us to believe that German interests were so menaced as to oblige us to consider the possibility of war? No! The Government did not consider the possibility of war. We have no direct political interests in Morocco, no political aspirations, no historical rights, like France and Spain. But we have commercial interests that have a future. We were a partner in the international convention which held that all the powers were entitled to the most favored nation rights.

"It was a question of the dignity and prestige of the German Empire, and we could not give way. It was not our intention to gain a footing in Morocco. This would have weakened instead of strengthened our position. We did not want to oppose the old historical and political rights of France and Spain so long as the interests of German trade were respected. We did not want to irritate England because she had drawn closer to France. We wanted to give significance to the fact that Germany was not a negligable quantity, to show that the text and basis of an international treaty could not be changed without the consent of the signatory powers and that the door for free foreign competition must be kept open in important territories near two of the world's trade routes.

"An international conference was, we thought, the best means peacefully to attain these aims. So great was our confidence in our firm basis of right that we entered the conference knowing that three great powers were tied to France by special agreements and that a fourth was her ally. We had to press our desires against the majority of the great powers, and I desire to acknowledge the firmness and tenacity with which the German delegates held to our just demands.

"France has been as conciliatory as Germany in striving to find a solution of the police question, and in future we can go forward quietly, as the result of the conference is as satisfactory to Germany as to France and all civilized lands."

Parliament adjourned to-day until the 22d of April.

THE GILBERT MEMORIAL.

Mr. Pittman Again Says Non-Theatrical Friends Will Erect One.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter from Daniel Frohman concerning the Mrs. Gilbert Memorial, which you publish, is so mistaken in its several statements that, much against my will, I am impelled to answer it lest the public get a wrong view of the situation. Had Mr. Frohman been even slightly informed as to the intentions of this association, he perhaps would not have made the "preposterous" statement that it was the purpose to erect a statue of Mrs. Gilbert in Central Park.

The legally appointed Municipal Art Commission of the City of New York decides where a statue shall be placed, and as the work is not yet completed, the invitation to so decide could not be given. But it is the intention to erect a proper and fitting memorial in some suitable and appropriate place to commemorate the purity of her personal life, lived under trying conditions, and to emphasize the Christian virtues of that life, that it may serve as an object lesson and an encouragement to the very many young girls and women who are destined to follow the same profession in the years to come. And it is this latter phase of the work that has aroused so much antagonism in certain quarters. But we again repeat that Mr. Frohman, or no other set or coterie, has the sole right to commemorate Mrs. Gilbert. Her memory belongs to the public which so splendidly supported her during life; and it is not necessary that one should be at the head of a trust or of great corporations, or even have his name blazoned forth to the world every day of the week in order to be a constituent part of that public.

Permission was never asked of Mrs. Gilbert to make her statue, but it was asked and given to make a statuette of her which some of her friends intended placing in a club or society to which Mrs. Gilbert belonged.

We again say what we have repeatedly said before that toward Mr. Frohman's plan, representing the theatrical profession, to erect a window in a church to Mrs. Gilbert's memory, we have only the kindliest thought. We are glad to see him so liberal minded, and do not share the opinions so abundantly expressed by others as to the motives which actuate him in so doing. The memorial which our committee will erect will be a tribute from the non-theatrical people of our city, who at the same time desire to extol the lesson Mrs. Gilbert's life teaches for the benefit of others. And they will stand on their rights to express their love and admiration as they have professed for the "grand old woman" of the stage in the manner and for the purpose they deem best.

The project is alive and vigorous, it has appealed strongly to the people of this city and they have given it their support, and should it become necessary to make another appeal for financial support the committee will not hesitate to do so. The tribute of the people, the first memorial planned, will be erected.

THOMAS W. PITTMAN,
President Mrs. Gilbert Memorial Association.

SQUADRON AFTER DERELICT.

British Cruisers Ordered to Search for the Dunmore.

LONDON, April 5.—Orders were issued by the Admiralty to-day to the commander of the fourth cruiser squadron (which comprises the North Atlantic and West Indies and particular service squadron) to take his ships on a cruise in search of the derelict British steamer Dunmore.

Since Jan. 19, when the Dunmore, an iron vesel of 2,383 tons, bound from Cardiff for Newport News, was abandoned in a leaky condition and with her engines disabled, she has drifted directly in the track of transatlantic liners, a serious menace to navigation. The British fourth cruiser squadron, commanded by Admiral Bosanquet, is believed to be at Bermuda.

The Viceroy has placed the best detectives at the disposal of Mr. Stock's friends in an effort to find the murderers. When Mr. Stock disappeared he had $10,000 with him.

Russian Government Behind the Scheme, Says Eugene Bournonville—A Ten-Year Job.

The story of a plan for a wonderful canal to connect the Baltic and Black Seas was told yesterday by Eugene Bournonville, a Director and chief engineer of the Commercial Acetylene Company, of which E. C. Benedict is President.

The canal is to be 1,000 miles long, and the estimated cost is $100,000,000. M. Bournonville said it would be completed in ten years, and would open up a vast area in Central Russia to commercial enterprise.

The project, it seems, is not a new one, but has been the subject of investigation and computation for fourteen years. It is to be built by private capital, the engineer says, but will have the sanction and assistance of the Russian Government, for the reason, says M. Bournonville, that it is necessary to distract the attention of the people from internal turmoil and the shadow of the recent war.

"The study of this project," said M. Bournonville, "has been made under the Russian Government. The man who has represented the Government as chief engineer, and has supervised the most elaborate and painstaking investigation for fourteen years, is Gustave C. Defosse, a distinguished engineer and a member of the Academy of Sciences. He had a contract with the late Czar Alexander. After the latter's death, M. Defosse had the contract renewed with the present Czar and the Grand Duke Sergius.

"The canal will run through a country which has hardly been explored except for the purposes of the contemplated feat of engineering; a country which is entirely lacking in transportation facilities. It will be 1,600 kilometers in length, 65 meters wide at the top, 35 meters at the bottom, and 8½ meters, or 30 feet, deep. The course has been studied, foot by foot, and the cost has been most carefully computed. There will be no locks in the canal. It is estimated that the greatest speed of the flow in the canal will be eighty feet a minute, which is a very low rate.

"Although it is to be a private enterprise, an agreement is to be made with the Government that nothing but Russian labor is to be employed in the construction. Russian machinery is to be used with the exception of dredgers, unless it is certain that cheaper machinery can be obtained elsewhere.

"The Russian Government formerly did as it pleased, and imposed the most stringent measures on the people. It is now in a conciliatory mood, as a result of the internal strife which has developed since the war and as a result of the war. The Government would turn the eyes of the people in another direction, and point with pride to a great work of engineering, saying: 'How strong we are!'

"The Government is now ready and anxious to help those who wish to go ahead with the work. M. Defosse, from whom I heard yesterday, informs me that two-thirds of the $100,000,000 required to finance the project can be raised readily in Europe. He wants a leader, however, preferably from this country, although he is indifferent as to whether the proposed leader shall contribute any capital or not. I am going to look for such a leader. The Russian Government now spends $3,500,000 annually on the rivers that drain the territory through which the canal is to run. The canal would close these rivers, so far as commercial purposes are concerned, and the Government has promised to pay the amount spent on the rivers to the company.

"The country through which the canal will pass abounds in coal, timber, limestone, and clay for bricks. A strip on either side of the canal will be ceded to the company, and large industries will be developed in the centre of Russia. The canal will be finished in ten years."

M. Bournonville was asked how a canal of such length could be constructed for $100,000,000. He replied that six workmen could be hired for the price of one American laborer, and exhibited a chart indicating that much of the territory would be easy to cut through.

M. Bournonville said he had been familiar with the project for a year through his friend M. Defosse, but that the plan had not been canvassed until the Russian Government evinced a desire to see the construction begun and offered its assistance.

HUNGARIAN CRISIS ENDED.

Coalition Leaders Reach Agreement—Two of Them to See the King.

BUDAPEST, April 5.—As the result of a conference of leaders of the Coalition Party under the Presidency of Francis Kossuth, a complete understanding has been reached which may be expected to end the legislative deadlock. Herr Kossuth and Count Andrassy started to-night for Vienna, where they will have an audience of Emperor Francis Joseph to-morrow.

Premier Fejervary at his interview with M. Kossuth here yesterday is reported to have suggested summoning the lower house of the Hungarian Parliament to discuss the Electoral Reform bill and the subsequent issue of writs for new elections under the proposed law providing for universal suffrage. The scheme is said to have been approved by the Emperor-King and a portion of the Coalition Party, but it is understood that the followers of Count Andrassy, the ex-Premier, and the Clericals were opposed to the suggestion.

Kleigels Stricken with Apoplexy.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 5.—Gen. Kleigels, who as Prefect of St. Petersburg, and later as Governor General of Kieff became one of the best-detested men in Russia, has suffered a stroke of apoplexy at his home here. His condition is serious. He introduced the use of Cossack whips to break up demonstrations, and was one of the first provincial officials to fall when Count Witte came into power.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR APRIL

There are twenty-four separate contributions exclusive of the regular departments in the April number of Harper's Magazine. The articles cover many varied fields of interest. There is nothing "timely," nothing controversial, nothing concerning politics, graft or crime.

8 Complete Short Stories

No two of these stories are alike. Each is the best of its type. There is a story of love and war in mediæval times, a weird, supernatural story of Pennsylvania country folk, a story of college settlement life in New York, a story of simple love with a charming heroine, one of Alice Brown's most charming middle aged love stories and others, all differing and all interesting.

Special Articles

In the articles of this number there is almost a richer variety than in the short stories. Two friends of Herbert Spencer who lived with him in his later years write of a hitherto entirely unknown side of the great thinker's life—of his one little love story, of how he painted his carpet with red ink when it grew dim, and a dozen other intimate tales of his home.

Then there is a remarkable scientific article by Professor Robert Kennedy Duncan, which tells how the German scientists have assured the continuance of the world's food supply by their remarkable discoveries.

Professor Lounsbury of Yale has some interesting things to say of the pedantic use of the English language—he says it is all right to say "to-morrow is Sunday," instead of "to-morrow will be Sunday," as the purists insist. Clifford Ashley, the artist, who made a trip in an old-fashioned whaler for Harpers, tells of and pictures his adventures, and Deshler Welsh has a valuable paper of literary interest containing a number of hitherto unpublished letters of Charles Dickens.

W. D. Howells writes of "Glimpses of the English Washington Country," and Agnes Laut tells a stirring narrative of the wild adventures between the early French explorers and the English of the Hudson Bay Company.

These are only a few of the things in the April number of Harper's Magazine—a book of 165 pages illustrated beautifully in color, tint and black and white.

In addition to these features there is Margaret Deland's wonderful serial novel "The Awakening of Helena Richie," a tremendous story of the unfolding of a woman's soul.

TRANSIT BOARD FAILS; ELSBERG BILL STANDS

Measure, with Grady Amendment, Reported to the Assembly.

BELMONT MAKES A PROTEST

He and Transit Commissioners Object to Short-Lease Clause—Fifty-Year Leases Favored.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 5.—The Assembly Cities Committee to-night reported that the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill is in identically the form that it passed the Senate, Grady amendment and all. The friends of the measure, though far from satisfied with it as it now stands, were glad enough to have it progressed with all its defects rather than endanger its passage at so late a stage in the session by trying to eliminate some of them. An amendment now would put the bill in the Senate again.

John Ford, representing the Independence League, and George L. Rives, representing the Rapid Transit Commission, both appeared before the committee to-night, the former to urge the bill reported as it stood, the other to ask that the bill be reported only after several amendments were incorporated, the object of al being to conserve to the commission some of the power that the bill as now drawn takes away.

Senator Elsberg, at the close of the session to-day, introduced a bill amending the rapid transit act whereby the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad would have a perpetual right of entry into New York City whether operated by steam or electricity. Several other trunk roads already have this right. It was originally intended to place the provisions of the bill introduced to-day into the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill, just reported out by the Cities Committee of the House, but it was feared that an amendment thereto would not only spoil all possibility of legislation for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, but probably kill the Elsberg bill as well.

TRANSIT BOARD SPEAKS OUT.

Protests Against Present Form of Elsberg Bill—Wants Home Rule.

Opposition to the passage of the Elsberg bill in its present form was voiced by the Rapid Transit Commission at its regular meeting yesterday, and a memorandum of opposition was approved to be sent to the Legislature. George L. Rives, counsel for the board, was in Albany at the time, appearing before the Senate and Assembly committees, and he was notified by telegraph of the board's action so he could file the brief at once.

Albert B. Boardman, Mr. Rives's associate counsel, explained to the commission the objections outlined in the brief and got unanimous approval of its provisions. Mr. Boardman declared that the interference of the up-State members of the Legislature in affairs concerning the city and its rapid transit problem solely was unwarranted and ridiculous.

Mr. Boardman said that if the Elsberg bill became a law the hands of the city would be tied in regard to all future subways. He said he did not oppose the amendment providing for the appointment of the members of the commission by the Mayor instead of by the board itself. Nor did the board. He said that he favored the provision which allowed the board to contract for separate contracts for construction and for operation. In substance the objection against the bill was the twenty-year lease feature. The Legislature, he said, ought not to legislate on matters already settled. The twenty-year lease provision would, he said, be so short that in the opinion of the board no contract could be made with any bidder to construct and operate an independent line. Much better terms would be secured under a provision for a lease of fifty years. He believed that the law should be left as it is in regard to the terms of leases and renewals. If the city was to get reasonable terms from bidders it must be in the position to offer as liberal terms as those already granted to the Interborough Company.

"We can't have the gentlemen from Podunk and Cohoes come down here and dictate to us," Mr. Boardman added. "The bill as it now exists cannot be passed. We want the good features of the Elsberg bill.

"The Elsberg bill as amended is very much improved over the original measure, especially by the addition of Section 34-E, which in effect converts the bill into a permissive instead of a mandatory measure. There are still, however, serious defects in the bill, which, in the judgment of the commission, would probably result in preventing any extensive building of rapid transit railroads for many years to come, and would effectually put an end to the possibility of anybody but the Interborough-Metropolitan Company becoming a bidder, and thus tie up the city to the alternative either of allowing that corporation to extend its lines or to resort to municipal operation.

"The only reason that can be given for changing the present Rapid Transit act must be either a desire to force the city into municipal operation, or a belief that the city authorities having charge of the matter, namely, the Rapid Transit Commission and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, cannot be trusted to make a proper lease. These reasons, it is believed, will not appeal to the Legislature upon reflection as valid grounds for changing the existing law.

"If the city is to get favorable terms for building new railroads, or is ever to get competition with the new Interborough-Metropolitan Company, it must be in a position to offer to other bidders terms which are at least comparable with those heretofore offered. To deny the city the right to offer a reasonably attractive lease is simply to intrench the present monopoly."

BELMONT SCENTS M. O. PLOT.

Letter to Lawmakers Objects to Limiting Leasehold Period.

President August Belmont of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company has forwarded to Chairman Jean L. Burnett of the Assembly Committee on Railroads a letter objecting to the passage of the Elsberg bill in its present form. He declares the measure is intended to force the bringing about of municipal operation. The chief objection is raised against limiting the leases of future subway operating contracts to twenty years, with a renewal for a like period. Mr. Belmont's letter says in part:

"The most objectionable restrictions of the Elsberg bill are those upon the duration of leases of subways hereafter to be built. The maximum lease of a subway which is to be constructed, equipped, and operated by the same contractor is twenty years, with a renewal not to exceed twenty years, upon such terms as may be imposed upon the expiration of the original lease. Inasmuch as the sinking fund required to retire 4 per cent. bonds in twenty years is about 8½ per cent., it is manifest that private capital cannot safely be invested in the equipment, much less the construction of subways in this city under twenty-year leases.

"In the case of subways constructed and equipped by the city leases are limited to ten years with renewal not exceeding ten years. If these provisions become law they will in my judgment so discourage the investment of private capital in subway enterprises that none are likely to become operative.

"It seems to me that it is more desirable from the point of view of the city to leave the subject of the duration of leases to the wise discretion of the commission, instead of fixing by statute a limit by which private capital is likely to be excluded altogether.

"If you ask why the company over which I have the honor to preside should object to the exclusion of all competition from private capital, my answer is that it is not to the interest of the company, nor acceptable to its managers as citizens, that the city should be deprived of the advantages which it enjoys under the present law, and that it is better for all concerned that a situation should exist where the city will be able to enlist competition in the development of new subways.

"The limitations in respect to the duration of leases which I have pointed out, and other restrictions imposed by the Elsberg bill, are of such a character that no one familiar with the rapid transit situation can doubt that it is the purpose of the advocates of this measure, by reducing to a minimum the possibility of co-operation of private capital with the city in the development of further rapid transit lines, to force municipal operation on the city."

THEFTS STIR UP ELMHURST.

Police Denounced for Not Stopping the Burglaries There.

The members of the Elmhurst Club in Queens will hold a meeting to-night in their clubhouse to denounce the police for not capturing the burglars that have robbed nearly every house in or near Elmhurst.

The thieves have visited on an average of six houses every night they have operated in Elmhurst, and the total of property stolen would capitalize a small bank, according to statements by those who profess to know.

The Elmhurst Club holds a euchre party once a week, and every night the club has met during the Fall and Winter some of the members have returned to their homes to find that they had been robbed.

There is some talk of forming a vigilance committee to patrol the streets at night, and ex-District Attorney Gregg is talked of as the head of such an organization.

RAPID TRANSIT BOARD MAY SUE INTERBOROUGH

Company Would Use Subway Conduits for Trolley System.

CONTROLLER'S SUBWAY IDEA

He'd Build One Under the River to Replace the Eleventh Avenue Tracks.

Legal proceedings are likely to be employed by the Rapid Transit Commission to settle a dispute which has arisen between that body and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company over the latter's proposal to connect the feed wires of the Subway and those of the surface roads of the Interborough trolley system in the Bronx.

The matter was brought to the attention of the board at yesterday's meeting by George L. Rives, the board's counsel. He declared that the city had spent more than $1,500,000 for the construction of the conduits running along the walls of the Subway, and that the company's proposal involved using city property to run its trolleys.

Mr. Rives, in his communication to the board, said the company wanted to make the connections at Broadway and 181st Street, Broadway and 201st Street, Broadway and 230th Street, Lenox Avenue and 145th Street, Mott Avenue and 149th Street, Boston Road and 177th Street, and at Westchester Avenue and 149th Street.

Chief Engineer Rice informed the board that complications would result from the making of such connections, and he declared the company had already reversed its position in the matter. When the proposal first came to his attention, he said, he had consulted the company and it had been agreed that the company should make a formal application to make the connections. Then the official with whom he had consulted found that this course did not meet the approval of his superiors, and it next was announced by the company that it intended to go ahead and make the connections, so that it could use its present Subway power house to furnish the power for its allied surface lines.

"The company takes the position," said Mr. Rice, "that its power house produces a surplus of power, and that the ducts have more space than is needed for the subway service. Therefore they contend that the connection can be made strictly within their rights. The officials hold that the Bronx trolley lines are feeders to the Subway, and that by making these connections they will add to the comfort of passengers, and will increase the city revenues by adding to the Subway traffic."

When the matter was under discussion in the board it was suggested that injunction proceedings be brought at once to test the rights of the city and the road, but it was finally decided to refer the entire matter to Chief Engineer Rice, who will report at the next meeting as to the physical conditions involved. Then the attorneys for the board will take up the legal aspect of the case, and recommend action. The Interborough plan, it was pointed out, would relieve the company in the Bronx from the expense of constructing and maintaining a power house or feed wires.

When the conduits were constructed in the Subway the city received bills for more than $1,500,000 from the construction company for the work. Controller Grout held up the bills, contending the work to be part of the equipment, and therefore to be paid by the operating company. The company contended that the work was part of the construction contract, and the courts sustained its contention, compelling the city to pay the bills.

Mr. Rives sent another communication to the board yesterday, calling its attention to the new law compelling the removal of the New York Central tracks from Eleventh Avenue. He said the board must act within a year, as the railroad must be condemned and the compensation paid in that time. Chief Engineer Rice was instructed to put some of his engineers at work immediately, so that surveys could be made and a basis of action evolved. President Orr was requested to communicate at once with President Newman of the New York Central, so that the proceedings could be hastened.

Commissioner Charles Stewart Smith wanted to know if the proposed subway for the Eleventh Avenue tracks could not be made to accommodate passenger trains as well as the Central's freight trains. Chief Engineer Rice said this could be done if patent devices were used for platform connections with the trains.

Controller Metz caused no little amusement by inquiring if the subway could not be built under the Hudson River outside the pier line.

"That would save tearing up the streets," he declared. "You would not have to tear up the water, and the subway could be made waterproof. Then we could build a belt line around the island. We've got to come to it some day. Why not begin now?"

Chief Engineer Rice brought up his report for a system of automatic valves for the ventilation of the subway, and it was practically agreed to allow him $300,000 for installing the system. Counsel for the board will prepare the formal resolutions for adoption at the next meeting so the work can be pushed at once.

FLOODED BY A BROKEN MAIN.

Water Plays Havoc with Dr. Baruch's Furniture.

A water main near the excavation of the Empire City Subway Company at Lexington Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, burst soon after 8 o'clock last night and created some excitement in the neighborhood and particularly in the house of Dr. S. Baruch on the southwest corner. The stream rose like a geyser to the level of the roof of Dr. Baruch's three-story house, and then swerved and shot through an open window. The water played into the physician's drawing room for some time before the window could be closed.

The break caused a small river to flow through the open ditch on the west side of the avenue for some time. It is not known how the main was broken.

INVALIDS AGREE TO DIE; ONE ENDS HIS LIFE

Klein, Consumptive Painter, a Suicide at His Home.

COMRADE WAITS HIS CHANCE

Hoff Is Watched to Prevent Self-Destruction—Klein in Letter Attacked Landlords and Health Officials.

Otto Klein, a consumptive painter, who had been unable to work for two years, and who was known as a radical Socialist, shot and killed himself in his home, 429 East Eighty-first Street, yesterday morning, while his family was away. He left a letter addressed to Coroner Julius Harburger, in which he blamed landlords and the Board of Health for conditions in tenement houses which foster disease. Coroner Harburger made the letter public as soon as he received it. A letter addressed "To the Newspaper Reporters" was taken charge of by the police, who refused to divulge its contents. A third letter was addressed to "My Wife Margaret."

It was believed at first that the man had taken his life solely because of despondency induced by the disease and the fact that his wife was obliged to support the family by hard work.

It was discovered later, however, that on Monday last, Klein made a solemn agreement with Charles Hoff of First Avenue and Eighty-first Street, who is also a victim of consumption, by which they agreed to end their lives yesterday. Klein confided the secret to the janitress of the building in which he lived early in the week. Haff, who is now ill in bed, was asked about it yesterday afternoon.

"It is true," he said; "but I did not get a chance to-day to kill myself. We had a little celebration on Monday afternoon and drank two pints of beer. Life held out no hopes for us. We knew that we had not many years to live, and we thought it best to die by our own hands."

Haff is being closely watched by his wife. He and Klein had been intimate friends for years.

Klein, who was 43 years old, lived with his wife and four children, and his mother, who is 77 years old. The eldest child is Lucy, who is 14. Mrs. Klein supported the family by going out to do washing. Before starting out to work yesterday morning she got the three younger children ready for school. Lucy stayed home because a man had promised to give her employment, and was to call. Later Lucy and her grandmother went shopping. When they returned they found Klein dead in a chair, a bullet hole in his right temple. A revolver lay at his feet. The letters were found on the table wrapped in a paper, on which was written:

"To the police: See that these letters are handed to the proper persons."

The history of a tenement house and the movement of the Health Department I find very corrupt. They make a big cry in the papers what tenants or sick people should do, but the Inspectors don't come to see the tenants, they go to and see the landlords, and a five-dollar or a ten-dollar bill will cover or blind all the smoke, and the landlord raises the rent.

The law is good in the State of New York, but our Christian people have no more say over American law, only that when we start like Russia, then we will be the people again.

I am consumptive for the last two years. I can't live any longer in the smoke and the corrupt people, so I say good-bye.

Chief Clerk Clark of the Department of Health was unable to find any records of complaint against the house in which Klein lived. He said there was nothing in Klein's accusations against the Health Board Inspectors. He said that many complaints were made by persons who refused to stand by them in court.

SCARED BY VANDERBILT AUTO.

Driver Badly Hurt in a Runaway Down a Yonkers Hill.

An automobile carrying Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Reginald Rives, and three men whose names were not ascertained frightened a horse in Main Street, at Dobbs Ferry, yesterday afternoon, causing the animal to run away. The horse was attached to a delivery wagon from the Yonkers branch of the National Biscuit Company. The driver was inside a grocery store and left the animal unattended.

The automobile containing the Vanderbilt party had run from New York to the Ardsley Club, making arrangements for the inauguration of the Pioneer's coaching season. Although it was proceeding at a moderate rate, the machine scared the horse, which bolted down the street.

Down hill the animal turned and hit an empty lumber wagon. The crash sent Driver Frederick Hallock to the ground, and the wheels of his own wagon passed over his body. He was sent to the Dobbs Ferry Hospital. His face was bruised and he sustained internal injuries. He is in a serious condition.

The impact upset the biscuit wagon, and this frightened the lumber wagon's horses. The horses, three abreast, dragging the two vehicles, the wheels of which had become interlocked, continued down the hill, across the viaduct, and over the railroad tracks to the foot of the incline, where they stopped. The wagons were smashed.

Mr. Vanderbilt and his party followed to the top of the hill, took a hasty glance at the result of the runaway, and then proceeded. Persons who saw the affair say that the auto party is not to be blamed.

A Public Duty and Its Performance

If you personally owned the entire equipment and personally controlled the entire organization of the American Cigar Co.—

And if you used this equipment and knowledge to produce cigars exclusively for your own smoking—

You could make no better cigars nor make them more carefully than we are now making them for you.

We believe that the possession of the largest equipment, organization, resources and business ever known in the cigar industry, binds us to a public duty to give the public the best cigar possible to make. Furthermore,

It is Good Business Policy

We are good enough judges of human nature to appreciate the fact that meritorious service is the best and most permanent foundation for commercial success.

If we give better cigars at lower cost than can be given by any other manufacturer, we shall secure, by perfectly logical and common-sense methods, what is virtually a franchise from the public to supply it with its cigars.

A franchise based upon public preference is stronger and more enduring than any that can be secured by legislative enactment, and it is this sort of franchise, obtained in this way, that we are after.

Gaining Success by Deserving It

Cigar smokers know what they want. Taste is constantly improving, demanding better goods all the time. There is no way of forcing people to purchase any brand of cigar which does not appeal to them on its own merits.

From the beginning, we have devoted the entire force of this organization and equipment to the problem of improving cigar quality and lowering cigar cost.

THE "TRIANGLE A"

MERIT A MARK

Stands for Honest Cigar Values

An "All-Around" Production

The products of our various factories include every variety of cigars—from the little cigar such as the "Royal Bengals" to the highest type of "Seed and Havana."

An important advantage in this comprehensiveness of output lies in the power it gives us to grade our tobacco very accurately. This assures unvarying uniformity—a feature much appreciated by the discriminating smoker.

The tremendous improvement in quality, due to our new and exclusive processes of curing, blending and ripening American grown leaf, extends through our entire line.

These processes are performed in our own gigantic "stemmeries." They have superseded the old, crude haphazard methods which have been followed with blind devotion since the days of Sir Walter Raleigh.

These scientific processes have improved the domestic cigar at least 100 per cent., giving a "mellowness," mildness, freedom from bitterness and a developed fragrance to our 5c. cigars, for example, which were by no means common even in the 10c. cigar a few years ago.

An Unbroken Line of Successes

This improvement has been demonstrated to the smoking public with ever-increasing emphasis by the appearance of brand after brand of cigars selling at 5c. possessing a superiority which has made them instantly popular and permanently successful. These are of different brand-names and different characteristics, but are all marked with our "A" (Triangle A) merit-mark and possess the fundamental qualities of fragrance and "ripeness" for which the "A" (Triangle A) stands unerringly.

This "A" merit-mark appears on the front of every box containing such cigars, and may be accepted implicitly as a guarantee of mellowness, "smoothness," quality, fragrance and uniformity of character.

The NEW Cremo
Victoria Size—5¢

The latest "A" (Triangle A) production is "The New Cremo" in Victoria size at 5c. which, perhaps better than all that have preceded it, exemplifies the immense improvement that has been effected by our experiments and equipment.

Our purpose is that our organization and resources shall always be used to the increasing betterment of cigar quality and to the lowering of cigar cost.

DR. SCHULMAN ANSWERS JUDGE COHEN'S ATTACK

Every Charge Against Jews Untrue, as Made, Rabbi Says.

RESENTS GRATUITOUS INSULT

Sin of Bearing False Witness Laid to the Judge, Who Spoke on Racial Faults.

In the course of a sermon preached last Sunday on the Ninth Commandment, the Rev. Dr. S. Schulman of the Temple Beth-El took occasion to refer to the criticism made upon Jews by ex-Judge William N. Cohen.

"The sin of bearing false witness against one's neighbor is one to which humanity is peculiarly liable," said Dr. Schulman. "When the conversation in the drawing room lacks intellectual brilliancy it is usually made spicy by the dissection of the neighbor's character. When a speech lacks thought it very often makes the speaker's task easy by becoming an appeal to prejudice. A character may be injured by malicious gossip; it may be assassinated by the general indictment of a people. The reputation of the individual is sacrificed to the unjust prejudice which prevails against a presumed type.

"No people on earth has been made the victim of calumny to the extent to which the Jew has suffered. We are the victims of the world's literature, of its prevailing creed and the popular judgment. The greatest master in the world's literature, seeking a type that on account of peculiar conditions and circumstances could stand for cruel hatred and implacable revenge, deliberately changed the contents of a story and made Shylock the Jew the embodiment of inhuman revenge. The poet must have felt that if ever in a human soul there could arise such unyielding hate as he desired to portray, it might, in a sense, be justified in one whose heart rankled with the memories of ages of persecution and unjust hatred to which his race had been subjected.

"Here was one, the poet seemed to say, who could well execute the villainies he had been taught. He therefore produced a character dramatically consistent, but at the same time he did an everlasting injury to the Jew because he produced a character altogether historically untrue; the Jew is anything but vindictive; he forgets injuries readily, that is why he is so optimistic; he has a horror of shedding blood, and whatever vices the Jew may be capable of the one of ferocious cruelty cannot be saddled upon him. Nevertheless, the word Shylock has become in English speech synonymous with everything that is bad. This injustice in literature will persist until some great genius possessing the broad mindedness of a Lessing and the dramatic power of a Shakespeare shall arise among English-speaking people and create an English Nathan the Wise.

"The western world's creed centres in an event which, strictly speaking, belongs to the same category as that of the killing of Socrates, the burning of Giordano Bruno, and of Servetus. Thus classic Greek, Catholic, and Protestant were all equally guilty of sacrificing the best of their time. The progress of mankind has, sad to say, often been purchased by the martyrdom of some of the noblest men that walked on earth. Yet it is the Jewish people that have been singled out to be held up to the world as Deicides, and every child at the time when the soul is most receptive is inoculated with an antipathy against every living Jew because of an event that took place 1900 years ago.

"It is therefore no wonder that the world is prejudiced against the Jew. The tendency of the popular judgment is to magnify his faults and minimize his virtues. He is, in plain words, the victim of a traditional violation of the Ninth Commandment. He has to prove that he is good; the assumption always is that he is bad. To such an extent is the thought and feeling of the average man pervaded by this prejudice against the Jew that it even poisons the minds of many Jews themselves who have not given serious thought to Jew and Judaism.

"We have had a remarkable example of bearing false witness against one's neighbor recently given us by a gentleman who was invited to take part in a symposium on the subject, 'The Function of the Synagogue in America.' He admitted, in his opening sentence, he knew nothing about the question; he might have modestly declined the invitation, instead of which he seized the opportunity to deliver an arraignment of Jews which was a large catalogue of their supposed vices. He painted us in unrelieved black; not one gleam of light was given either in the way of emphasizing Jewish virtues or treating tenderly Jewish shortcomings. Every one of the charges made is untrue, as made, and, were they true, they would become a falsehood because of the peculiar emphasis of Christian superiority which the gentleman felt impelled to make.

"He said the synagogue is inhospitable; this is not true. Christians visit this synagogue, some are here this morning; they are always made welcome, they are offered good seats with the utmost courtesy. Whether or not any fashionable Christian church is more hospitable, we do not know. We do know, however, that some persons might resent as officiousness the being handed a card by some one in the church which he is visiting. A person that comes to a church in New York does not expect to be entertained by the pewholders; what he expects is ordinary courtesy. This, I can assure the Judge, is shown him in every synagogue with which I am acquainted.

"He told us that the club under whose auspices he was speaking might become an agency for teaching the Jews manners. This was certainly a gratuitous insult flung at his audience. Jews need no special institution for instruction in manners. My knowledge of them is as extensive as the speaker's, and I know that a Jew has the manners that are in accordance with the degree of culture he possesses and the environment in which he lives and has his being. He told us we are feeders of the stomach and not of the brain. Till this remarkable discovery was made it was the universal opinion that the world rather thought that the Jew was doing anything but neglecting his brain development. I hold no brief for Jewish millionaires; I do, however, know some, and I have in my mind's eye men and women who, aside from surrounding themselves with fine things which wealth naturally buys, are leading genuinely simple lives; they are not realizing all their ambitions at their well-laden tables; they devote their leisure and recreation to noble service on behalf of their less-favored brethren.

"He told us that our richmen are all vain about their charities and think they should be glorified for them by God and His people. Too few men give in accordance with their means; let us not pooh-pooh those who take pride in charitable work. It is fair to say that when a rich Jew dies he leaves to charity sums which will certainly bear favorable comparison with those left by Christians of equal wealth.

"We are told that the synagogue is narrow; so proud are we of our race and religion that we see no good in other people. The gentleman admitted that he knows nothing of the synagogue. If he visited a synagogue and listened to a sermon of a Jewish minister, he would find how unjust is his charge; the discourse from a modern pulpit is permeated both with the Jewish spirit and with what is best in the thoughts of the non-Jewish world.

"In a word, Mr. Cohen made us out to be a very bad people. He practically told us that we were sensual, loud, shoddy, and vulgar. I do not consider it the duty of the Jewish people to emphasize the fact that we condemn shoddiness and vulgarity; this is a matter of course, and no race, creed, or nationality has a monopoly of these things. The speaker, therefore, was guilty of a gross injustice to his co-religionists.

"Were these charges, however, based on truth, which they are not, they would become a falsehood and a calumny because of the peculiar manner in which he made them. All through his speech he contrasted Jewish shortcomings with Christian superiority. This is entirely unjustified. It is true the world has a right to ask from a people that calls itself a priest people that it be better than others. I resent the accusation that we are worse than others. Jewish preachers also preach the ideal of the simple life; we also recognize that the modern world has many types of materialism, sensuality, and decadence.

"When Pastor Wagner wrote that charming book 'The Simple Life' I am not aware that he aimed it specially at Jews. He wished to point out to this bustling, money-worshipping, luxury-loving society of the Western world that there were other things to live for than those which are the idols of fin de siecle men of Europe and America. What right has Mr. Cohen to single out the Jews and make it appear that they contrast in their sesuality and materialism with the simplicity and refinement of their Christian neighbors?

"When recently Mr. Henry Watterson gave a brilliant and caustic criticism of American fashionable life—a criticism into whose justice I will not enter—he certainly did not speak to the Four Hundred as Christians or Episcopalians; he simply spoke to them as men and women. What right had the speaker to take the name Jew, which connotes loyalty to Judaism, to the teachings and ideals of the synagogue, and make it stand for everything that is degenerate in our modern life? The speaker, therefore, was guilty of slandering Jew and Judaism.

"What made such a performance possible? It would be exceedingly interesting to seek a psychological explanation. How could any man invited to help do a constructive work in launching a club in which are to be discussed serious, religious, ethical, and civic questions, permit himself so to abuse hospitality as to give the catalogue of insults that he unfolded before us? He made himself the spokesman of the prejudice of the world. Knowing nothing of the synagogue and its aspirations, as he himself confessed, he became the echo of street talk against Jewish peccadilloes. If the consequence of a man's conduct may throw some light upon the mechanism of his mind, we might be tempted to say that he was perhaps dimly conscious of doing a popular thing. Certainly the newspapers seem to have pounced upon his speech as a delicious morsel. They gave it altogether too much space.

"And in this connection it must be said that while the press on the whole is the greatest power for good that we have, inasmuch as it unmasks evil, brings light to bear upon the hidden recesses of vice and crime, is no respector of persons, and seeks to establish justice, it nevertheless, true to its primary character of a newspaper, is often tempted to sacrifice truth to interesting and sensational matter. It thus, in quite a subtle way, transgresses the commandment 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.' Had it published at greater length portions of the admirable speech made by the distinguished son of the synagogue, Oscar S. Straus—had it paid a little more attention to the reply made the very night of the meeting by the rabbi of the synagogue in which this indictment of the Jews was made—it would not have given color to the presumption that it welcomed the calumny against the Jews uttered by the speaker. It is the easiest thing in the world, alas! to obtain conspicuous notice when you make an attack on Jews.

"The lesson from this unfortunate occurrence is, of course, simple. Let us be circumspect and very jealous with respect to the truth of what we say about our neighbors. Let us not judge hastily, rather let us not judge at all. It is always unkind and uncharitable to make even the well-authenticated faults of our fellow-men the spice of our discourse. Let us beware of sweeping generalizations; every generalization about a group carries the possibility of the assassination of the character of any individual in the group. Let, above all, the honor of our fellow-men be as dear to us as our own. We confess, in sadness, the Jewish people are not yet perfect; there are some Jews who have bad manners; this the distinguished speaker made quite evident. To soil one's own vest is never a graceful and well-bred performance."

SEERY'S AUTO KILLS A BOY.

Victim's Bicycle Swerved Before Motor Car Which Was Moving Slowly.

Harry Wire, 12 years old, who lives with his parents at 100 Mount Prospect Avenue, Newark, was mortally injured in that city by an automobile driven by Peter J. Seery yesterday afternoon. The lad's skull was fractured and he died soon after being admitted to the City Hospital. Blakely Harvey, 11 years old, of 136 Fourth Avenue, was also injured.

The boys were riding a bicycle along Broad Street when the accident happened. The bicycle belonged to young Wire and his companion was perched upon the handle bars. When the boys were within a short distance of the automobile, which was going slowly, the bicycle swerved and was struck by the motor car.

The automobile was driven by Mr. Seery, who was returning to his home at 63 Broad Street alone. He stopped the car and after placing the boys on the sidewalk went for a physician. By the time he returned the injured lads had been taken to the hospital. He then surrendered himself to the police and was paroled until to-day.

Mr. Seery is the President of the New Jersey Tube Company of Harrison, N. J.

"The accident was entirely unavoidable on my part," he told a reporter. "When the boys were within a few feet of the automobile the bicycle swerved without warning and they both fell to the street directly in front of the machine, which ran over them before I could stop it."

GRADY FAILS TO BLOCK THE 6 INSURANCE BILLS

All Advanced in Senate After an Eight-Hour Debate.

McCARREN REFORMER NOW

He Will Vote to Stop Political Contributions—Armstrong Has Situation Well in Hand.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 5.—After eight hours of skirmish firing in the Senate to-day over the insurance bills, the Armstrong measures retired from the firing line without even being scorched by the oratorical smoke that had enveloped them from 11 in the morning until 7 in the evening. All of the six bills were advanced to third reading, and the only amendment that was made to any of them was the addition of one word to the act amending the penal code relative to perjury.

Minority Leader Grady led the opposition to the measures, and for eight hours he and Senator Armstrong were in almost continual debate. Grady had objections of some sort to every bill, but made no progress. All suggestions in the way of amendments were referred to Senator Armstrong. If any of the proposed amendments prevail, the bills in amended form will have to be passed again by the Assembly, so that it may be several weeks before they go to the Governor. The opinion prevails here to-night, however, that the demand for new legislation and the force of public opinion behind the bills is so strong and insistent that the objecting Senators may see that it would not be good politics to be too persistent.

The first bill up was the one which prohibits corporations from contributing money in aid of political parties or for any political purpose whatever. It provides that any agent or Director who participates in the offense shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for a year. Senator McCarren created much interest in the attitude he assumed.

"I take it that there is no opposition to this bill," Senator McCarren said. "One of the most cheerful duties of my long, active career is to vote for this bill. As I understand this bill, it will prohibit campaign funds from all sources except individuals. The people should have the opportunity to go to the polls once at least and choose the officers they want without the consideration of money."

Senator Brackett moved to amend the bill by inserting "joint stock companies and voluntary associations" as prohibited from making political contributions, and also wanted the provision added that any foreign corporation which contributed to political parties should have its right to do business in this State revoked. He said: "I want the unspeakable situation in which the heads of companies have been giving away funds of the company done away with, so that Mr. McCurdy or any other man shall not give away the funds of everybody, except himself, to save the honor of the Nation, as was done in 1896."

"There's an element of humor in the sudden discovery of the Republican members of the committee that corporations have been contributing to campaign funds," said Mr. Grady. "The angels and saints of 1906 winked at it, and encouraged it in 1896 and 1900. Even our President, when charged with receiving campaign funds form corporations, replied that he didn't think he was getting more than the Democrats from other corporations. I'm glad to see the change."

Armstrong carried his point to have the proposed amendments withdrawn and made to him as suggestions.

The bill to amend the Penal Code relative to perjury precipitated a debate of two hours. Grady, Marks, Elsberg, Malby, and Brackett opposed it in form. Senator Armstrong said that the reports of insurance companies had been found to contain false statements. The bill, he said, shifted the burden of proof and compelled the defendants to prove that false statements were not wrongfully made. He said it would not affect any honest man. Grady wanted the bill thrown out entirely. "Why is it," he asked, "that no other State has ever passed such a piece of legislation as this? Why by this bill the only thing needed to be proved on a perjury trial is made presumptive evidence of guilt. You make a man a witness against himself. The Insurance Committee has no right to propose such a law."

The bill was progressed, and the bill to amend the general corporation law relative to the acquisition of real property by life insurance companies went to a third reading without objection, but the lobbying bill caused another hot debate. With a fine show of scorn Grady called attention to the exemptions which did not call on any lawyer to make a report of what he received for drafting bills, advising clients or rendering opinions on legislative matters. He wanted that provision stricken out. He said he did not see why the respectable lobbyist who did the lobbying from his office in New York should be exempt.

"Everybody knows that the big money paid for legislation never comes nearer than 143 miles from Albany," said Grady. "It is paid under the guise of defraying bills and rendering opinions on legislation. I would like to know what moved the committee to exempt the big lobbyist." Grady finally yielded after giving notice that he would insist on a change in the bill when it came up on third reading.

The bill relating to rebates allowed by life insurance companies went through without comment. When the bill to amend the Penal Code relating to the misconduct of officials and employes of corporations was reached Brackett asked about the "Yellow Dog Fund."

"I don't want to talk about 'yellow dogs,'" said Grady. "The poor cur was received with open arms once by some men who take great pleasure kicking at it since it got a lame leg."

Grady said that the provision making it a misdemeanor for any officer or employe of a corporation to "omit any statement required by law to be contained in a report" was the "limit." The word "knowingly" was inserted in the bill before the words quoted above.

On the big bill, which amended the insurance law generally and contains all the provisions over which there has been so much debate at the hearings, there were many objections. Grady moved to have stricken from the clause relating to investments the exemptions permitting the companies to hold what they now had of collateral trust bonds. He wanted to know why the provision to make the companies get rid of them had been stricken out.

Senator Armstrong explained that the committee had taken disinterested advice and had come to the conclusion that it might work serious hardship to make the companies dispose of their collateral trust bonds.

Senator Malby said he would rather have the companies hold gilt-edged stock like New York Central than collateral trust bonds, and said he would stand with Grady for the reinsertion in the bill of the prohibitions concerning that class of securities.

The bill was then advanced, and the hardest day the Senate has had this session came to an end.

Factory Gives Way to Tunnel Work.

In order to afford room for the machinery plant necessary in building the Long Island City end of the Belmont tunnel, the factory of Emil Calman & Co., at West Avenue and Fourth Street, Long Island City, has been purchased and is being torn down. The property cost the tunnel company $100,000.

A WOMAN'S NEAR-POOLROOM.

Detectives Feared They Were Mistaken, but Rudeness Saved Them.

When Detectives Raynes and Farley of the Tenderloin Station sauntered into the big room on the third floor of a building in Sixth Avenue, near Twenty-fifth Street, yesterday afternoon, the lone man among the fifteen women, ranging from 20 to 70 years old, who were sitting about little tables drinking tea, jumped to his feet and gave forth the clarion cry of his boyhood:

"Cheese it! De Cops!"

The women did not fly at once. They only held down their heads. For they guessed rightly that the detectives did not quite know what they were doing. The intruders had suspicions of a poolroom, but they could see no wall cards, no telephones, none of the usual signs. The room was richly furnished; it seemed to be just a meeting place for women to talk and drink tea.

Raynes and Farley began to get a little frightened. They had noticed carriages draw up at the place day after day, and had found out that the women had gone to the big upstairs room, which had no sign on its door. Raynes looked over the shoulder of one of the tea drinkers. He saw in her hand a little Benning racing card. He investigated, and saw that all the women had the same little cards. Then it was that the tea drinkers lost their nerve and besought the detectives to "please not arrest" them because they "would be disgraced forever."

One of them made a full confession, the detectives said, admitting that they had been gathering in the room to send out bets by the lone man to a nearby poolroom. He brought back their winnings—when there were any. He wasn't overworked.

The lone man was arrested on the charge of aiding and abetting gambling. He said he was Patrick Clark of 465 Sixth Avenue. The women were lined up, and the names they made up with much ado were solemnly written down. As they passed out an old woman of 70 snapped back at Raynes:

"You impolite thing! Nobody but a boor would look over a lady's shoulder."

Fagan Charges Partly True.

Post Office Inspectors have finished their investigation of the charges made by Mayor Mark M. Fagan of Jersey City against five Postmasters of the county, whom he accused of "pernicious political activity" in seeking to defeat his nomination and election. Mayor Fagan's charges are held to be true in some particulars, but are said to have been exaggerated by those who furnished evidence to him.

Boy Slid Once Too Often.

When Engine Company No. 23 left its quarters at 233 West Fifty-eighth Street, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a crowd of boys, among whom was Harry Cudmore, of 1,780 Broadway, went into the engine house and began sliding down the pole. Harry slid safely a few times, and then fell a distance of about forty feet. At Roosevelt Hospital it was said that the lad had a concussion of the brain and that his condition was serious.

FOOD. FOOD. FOOD.

Rise Liars,

And Salute Your Queen

Ho, All Ye Faithful Followers of Ananias

GIVE EAR!

A Young Girl said to a Cooking School Teacher in New York; "If You make One Statement as False as That, All You have said about Foods is Absolutely Unreliable."

This burst of true American girl indignation was caused by the teacher saying that Grape-Nuts, the popular pre-digested food, was made of stale bread shipped in and sweetened.

The teacher colored up and changed the subject.

There is quite an assortment of traveling and stay-at-home members of the tribe of Ananias who tell their falsehoods for a variety of reasons.

In the spring it is the custom on a cattle ranch to have a "round-up," and brand the cattle, so we are going to have a "round-up," and brand these cattle and place them in their proper pasture.

FIRST PASTURE.

Cooking school teachers—this includes "teachers" who have applied to us for a weekly pay if they would say "something nice" about Grape-Nuts and Postum, and when we have declined to hire them to do this they get waspy and show their true colors.

This also includes "demonstrators" and "lecturers" sent out by a certain Sanitarium to sell foods made there, and these people instructed by the small be-whiskered doctor—the head of the institution—to tell these prevarications (you can speak the stronger word if you like.) This same little doctor conducts a small magazine in which there is a department of "answers to correspondents," many of the questions as well as the answers being written by the aforesaid doctor.

In this column some time ago appeared the statement: "No, we cannot recommend the use of Grape-Nuts, for it is nothing but bread with glucose poured over it." Right then he showed his badge as a member of the tribe of Ananias. He may have been a member for some time before, and so he has caused these "lecturers" to descend into the ways of the tribe wherever they go.

When the young lady in New York put the "iron on" to this "teacher" and branded her right we sent $10.00 to the girl for her pluck and bravery.

SECOND PASTURE.

Editors of "Trade" papers known as grocers' papers.

Remember, we don't put the brand on all, by any means. Only those that require it. These members of the tribe have demanded that we carry advertising in their papers and when we do not consider it advisable they institute a campaign of vituperation and slander, printing from time to time manufactured slurs on Postum or Grape-Nuts. When they go far enough we set our legal force at work and hale them to the judge to answer. If the pace has been hot enough to throw some of these "cattle" over on their backs, feet tied and "bellowing," do you think we should be blamed? They gambol around with tails held high and jump stiff-legged with a very "cocky" air while they have full range, but when the rope is thrown over them "it's different."

Should we unite them because they bleat soft and low? Or should we put the iron on, so that people will know the brand?

Let's keep them in this pasture, anyhow.

THIRD PASTURE.

Now we come to a frisky lot, the "Labor Union" editors. You know down in Texas a weed called "Loco" is sometimes eaten by a steer and produces a derangement of the brain that makes the steer "batty" or crazy. Many of these editors are "Locoed" from hate of any one who will not instantly obey the "demands" of a labor union, and it is the universal habit of such writers to go straight into a system of personal vilification, manufacturing any sort of falsehood through which to vent their spleen. We assert that the common citizen has a right to live and breathe air without asking permission of the labor trust and this has brought down on us the hate of these editors. When they go far enough with their libels, is it harsh for us to get judgment against them and have our lawyers watch for a chance to attach money due them from others? (For they are usually irresponsible.)

Keep your eye out for the "Locoed" editor.

Now let all these choice specimens take notice:

We will deposit one thousand or fifty thousand dollars to be covered by a like amount from them, or any one of them, and if there was ever one ounce of old bread or any other ingredient different than our selected wheat and barley with a little salt and yeast used in the making of Grape-Nuts, we will lose the money.

Our pure food factories are open at all times to visitors, and thousands pass through each month, inspecting every department and every process. Our factories are so clean that one could, with good relish, eat a meal from the floors.

The work people, both men and women, are of the highest grade in the State of Michigan, and according to the State labor reports are the highest paid in the State for similar work.

Let us tell you exactly what you will see when you inspect the manufacture of Grape-Nuts. You will find tremendous elevators containing the choicest wheat and barley possible to buy. These grains are carried through long conveyers to grinding mills, and there converted into flour. Then the machines make selection of the proper quantities of this flour in the proper proportion, and these parts are blended into a general flour which passes over to the big dough mixing machines, there water, salt and a little yeast are added and the dough kneaded the proper length of time.

Remember that previous to the barley having been ground it was passed through about one hundred hours of soaking in water, then placed on warm floors and slightly sprouted, developing the distaste in the barley, which changes the starch in the grain into a form of sugar.

Now after we have passed it into dough and it has been kneaded long enough, it is molded by machinery into loaves about 18 inches long and 5 or 6 inches in diameter. It is put into this shape for convenience in second cooking.

These great loaves are sliced by machinery and the slices placed on wire trays, these trays, in turn, placed on great steel trucks, and rolled into the secondary ovens, each perhaps 75 or 80 feet long. There the food is subjected to a long low heat and the starch, which has not been heretofore transformed, is turned into a form of sugar generally known as Post Sugar. It can be seen glistening on the granules of Grape-Nuts if held toward the light, and this sugar is not poured over or put on the food as these prevaricators ignorantly assert. On the contrary the sugar exudes from the interior of each little granule during the process of manufacture, and reminds one of the little white particles of sugar that come out on the end of a hickory log after it has been sawed off and allowed to stand for a length of time.

This Post Sugar is the most digestible food known for human use. It is so perfect in its adaptability that mothers with very young infants will pour a little warm milk over two or three spoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, thus washing the sugar off from the granules and carrying it with the milk to the bottom of the dish. Then this milk charged with Post Sugar is fed to the infants, producing the most satisfactory results, for the baby has food that it can digest quickly and will go off to sleep well fed and contented.

When baby gets two or three months old it is the custom of some mothers to allow the Grape-Nuts to soak in the milk a little longer and become mushy, whereupon a little of the food can be fed in addition to the milk containing the washed off sugar.

It is by no means manufactured for a baby food, but these facts are stated as an illustration of a perfectly digestible food.

It furnishes the energy and strength for the great athletes. It is in common use by physicians in their own families and among their patients, and can be seen on the table of every first-class college in the land.

We quote from the London Lancet analysis as follows:

"The basis of nomenclature of this preparation is evidently an American pleasantry, since 'Grape-Nuts' is derived solely from cereals. The preparatory process undoubtedly converts the food constituents into a much more digestible condition than in the raw cereal. This is evident from the remarkable solubility of the preparation, no less than one-half of it being soluble in cold water. The soluble part contains chiefly dextrin and no starch. In appearance 'Grape-Nuts' resembles fried bread-crumbs. The grains are brown and crisp, with a pleasant taste not unlike slightly burnt malt. According to our analysis the following is the composition of 'Grape-Nuts': Moisture, 6.02 per cent.; mineral matter, 2.01 per cent.; fat, 1.60 per cent.; proteids, 15.00 per cent.; soluble carbohydrates, &c., 49.40 per cent., and unaltered carbohydrates, (insoluble,) 25.97 per cent. The features worthy of note in this analysis are the excellent proportion of protid, mineral matters, and soluble carbohydrates per cent. The mineral matter was rich in phosphoric acid. 'Grape-Nuts' is described as a brain and nerve food, whatever that may be. Our analysis, at any rate, shows that it is a nutritive of a high order, since it contains the constituents of a complete food in very satisfactory and rich proportion and in an easily assimilable state."

An analysis made by the Canadian Government some time ago shows that Grape-Nuts contains nearly ten times the digestible elements contained in ordinary cereals and foods, and nearly twice the amount contained in any other food analyzed.

The analysis is familiar to practically every successful physician in America and London.

We print this statement in order that the public may know the exact facts upon which we stake our honor and will back it with any amount of money that any person or corporation will put up.

We propose to follow some of these choice specimens of the tribe of Ananias.

When you hear a cooking school teacher or any other person assert that either Postum or Grape-Nuts are made of any other ingredients than those printed on the packages and as we say they are made, send us the name and address, also name of two or three witnesses, and if the evidence is clear enough to get a judgment, we will right that wrong quickly.

Our business has always been conducted on as high a grade of human intelligence as we are capable of, and we propose to clear the deck of these prevaricators and liars whenever and wherever they can be found.

Attention is again called to the general and broad invitation to visitors to go through our works, where they will be shown the most minute process and device in order that they may understand how pure and clean and wholesome Grape-Nuts and Postum are.

There is an old saying among business men that there is some chance to train a fool, but there is no room for a liar, for you never can tell where you are, and we hereby serve notice on all the members of this ancient tribe of Ananias that they may follow their calling in other lines, but when they put forth their lies about Grape-Nuts and Postum, we propose to give them an opportunity to answer to the proper authorities.

The New York girl wisely said that if a person would lie about one item, it brands the whole discourse as absolutely unreliable.

Keep your iron ready and brand these "mavericks" whenever you find them running loose.

"OWNERSHIP" AND "OPERATION."

It is distinctly untrue that, as one of our contemporaries puts it, Chicago has "discriminated" between municipal ownership and municipal operation of street railways to the detriment of the latter. The fact is that 10,000 more votes were cast for municipal operation in a total vote 14,000 larger than were cast for municipal ownership and for the issue of the bonds required to effect it. The figures are: For municipal ownership, (Mueller certificates,) 110,000; against, 106,669; majority, 3,339. For municipal operation, 120,911; against, 110,260; majority, 10,651. It is only the conservative provision of the State law requiring 60 per cent. of the votes to be cast for municipal operation before municipal operation can take effect that prevented the success of a project opposed by almost the whole press of Chicago. But for this provision municipal operation would have had a majority of some seven thousand more than municipal ownership. So that the "discrimination" disappears, or, rather, appears on the other side.

And yet it is highly desirable that discrimination should be exercised. It is equally desirable in such a discussion as this that we should begin by defining our terms, a preliminary that in this case has been generally neglected. We suppose that very few people would deny that the municipality should retain control of all those franchises which depend for their value upon the general welfare of the community, especially upon its growth in population and the consequent increase of pressure upon its means of communication. It should not so alienate these as to estop itself from periodically intervening to reappraise their value, so as to make sure that the municipality was getting a fair return for its property. Of course this right should be so exercised as to enable the grantee of the franchise to get, in his turn, a fair return upon the value of his investment, and to sell to the city, in case of its re-entry, what of his plant of operation may be left at a fair valuation. Leases from year to year would scarcely attract the desirable bidders. On the other hand, leases for long terms at a rate fixed by the value of the franchise at the beginning of the term would, in the case of a growing community, be improvident and extravagant. All that is to be considered with reference to the circumstances of each particular case. But so long as the city retains what may be called the fee of the franchise and reserves the right of periodical revaluation and of possible re-entry, "municipal ownership of public utilities" exists, and we are not aware of any respectable body of opinion in favor of divesting municipalities of their ownership.

Municipal operation is an entirely different matter. It is necessarily more costly than private operation, more costly to the point of wastefulness, even if not to that of corruption. There is no incentive in public work to the introduction of economies and the stoppage of waste to which in private work self-interest supplies an adequate incentive always in operation. To take away this incentive is to block progress. That is true of all enterprises, and will remain true so long as human nature remains what it is. Moreover, under municipal operation and local pressure, enterprises are sure to be undertaken for which there is no remunerative demand, and which private operation would reject. It is certain that in any American community the change of urban communication from private to municipal operation would result in an immediate increase of operating expenses. It would be almost equally sure to result in a diminution of income. With the street railways of Chicago under municipal operation, does anybody doubt that the wages of the men employed upon them would be fixed on some other basis than that of their market value as compared with private employment? And does anybody suppose that a popular demand for a three-cent instead of a five-cent fare, for instance, would not command as large a vote as that which was cast for municipal operation, which would have been effective but for the restriction of the law?

Of course such proceedings would entail a heavy deficit to be paid out of taxation. But a conclusive showing to that effect would be unlikely to diminish the majority. It is demonstrable and has often been demonstrated that it is in the last analysis the wage worker who pays the expense of such operations. The bill even for "bread and circuses" is ultimately sent to him. But the trouble is that he has no "realizing sense" that this is the case, and insists upon considering that it is his agent, the landlord, who advances the money to the tax collector, who really pays the tax. Moreover, he may reasonably doubt whether he would actually refund in taxes the four cents a day which he would save by the substitution of a three for a five cent fare. The method of stopping his agitation for municipal operation is to convince him that the arrangements made between the city as owner and its lessees as operators are equitably made and honestly enforced. And it may be doubted whether there is any way of making him believe them so, short of actually making them so. To make them so is at any rate the most effective way of combating the demand for "municipal operation." And the persons most of all concerned in convincing the public that they are so are the persons who find profit in the private operation of public utilities under public franchises.

BARGAIN FREELY: NO DURESS.

The coal conference has adjourned again, and again neither side has any communication for the public. The fiction that the negotiators are dealing with their private concerns has been maintained, and will be maintained until events rudely interrupt it. The insurance ring was in a much more secure position than either the coal trust or the labor trust, yet means were found to disarrange schemes which might have withstood any ordinary legal assault.

Before a breach in the negotiations it is well to serve notice that neither side will be allowed to use duress. The miners this time will not be allowed to use violence against those willing to take their places, or against those who would give employment upon terms acceptable to those willing to take it. Neither will the operators be allowed to close their mines without an attempt to work them simply because of a difference of opinion with their help. Nor will both together be able again to profit at the expense of the community at large. There is no objection to collective bargaining. It is a matter of comparative indifference that two trusts about equally offensive are dickering together. The dominant sentiment is not at the moment hostility to either party. The public is thinking of itself, and will not consent that the price of a necessity shall be made unreasonably high, whether by financial schemers or by labor manipulators. It behooves each equally to agree with the other, or to show cause for disagreement.

As the matter stands the operators occupy a superior place in public opinion, having advanced considerations which will stand until overthrown. It is the miners' turn to justify their demands. If the men wish to share the advantage in public esteem which the autocratic operators are wise enough not to despise they will order the resumption of work pending the adjustment. They prejudice their cause by not explaining their position, and by stopping work when their employers were listening to them. These remarks are addressed to the future rather than to the present situation, and are precautionary rather than prophetic. There is no definite breach at present, and a breach is so far from necessary that the party responsible for it will be inexcusable.

WATER FROM THE CATSKILLS.

The intimation at Albany that the Assembly Committee on Water Supply has decided to report the Yale bill abolishing the Mayor's Water Commission will give that excellent non-partisan body, we imagine, small cause for uneasiness. The passage of the bill would mean the substitution of a Board political and partisan in nature, to be reconstituted at each succeeding election, and removable at the discretion of a good or of a bad Mayor. We doubt whether the care of the scores of millions of money involved in the extension of the water system will be delegated in any such way.

The Saxe bill, however, repealing the prohibition imposed by the Legislature of 1903 on tapping the Dutchess County sources, deserves careful attention. The supporters of this measure argue that if the city will properly meter its system and obtain the Legislature's permission to draw upon the Wappinger and Fishkill watersheds for 250,000,000 gallons a day, it may safely abandon the costly and more distant Catskill project. J. T. SMITH, the author of the prohibitory law, heads a delegation in Albany of Dutchess property owners who favor the repeal bill because they believe the city would now grant them indirect damages, besides direct damages, for plants, property, and towns that would be destroyed or affected by the extension of the water system into their territory.

The Smith law ought assuredly to be repealed. New York will ultimately need and must have the nearer water supply. The output of 500,000,000 gallons daily from Ulster County would suffice for the city, even when adequately metered, only until 1925 or 1930. Gradually the intervening watered districts must come within the province of the expanding city. But there are reasons why an aqueduct should be first built to a completed Ashokan reservoir in the Catskills.

The Mayor is authority for the statement that the city would at present be compelled to pay larger indirect damages in Dutchess County than in Ulster. Competent engineers state that the time consumed in sinking shafts and tunneling eight miles through Fishkill Mountain to the Dutchess watersheds would more than suffice to penetrate and develop the vaster potentialities of the Ulster district. Moreover, the hard-water supply of the Wappinger and Fishkill Creeks, unmixed with the remarkably soft and pure waters of the Catskills, would prove peculiarly objectionable to consumers in this city.

Before Dutchess County was legally shut off, in fact, the Catskill Mountain sources had been approved and repeatedly recommended for the next extension of New York's water system, notably during the investigation conducted under the Chief Engineer of the Department of Water Supply in 1902. There seems to be no sufficient reason, therefore, for abandoning at this juncture a project upon which the tremendous machinery of the Water Commission is already concentrated and at work.

"DESERTING" THEIR HUSBANDS.

We published yesterday a bright letter from a woman, supporting the thesis of the subjection of American husbands which MARY MORTIMER MAXWELL is maintaining in THE SUNDAY TIMES. The fresh instance given by our correspondent of this subjection is that whereas, in the time of her parents and her grandparents, wives stayed with their husbands all the year round, only sending the children into the country for a change of a week or two in the heat of Summer, now wife and children "desert" the husband "from three to five months in the year."

"Desertion" is much too strong a word. In the time of our correspondent's grandparents travel was much slower and more tedious than it is now. If a family had migrated to a scene remote enough to afford a change of climate, it would have been too remote to be reached in a few hours and the family would have remained away, so long as it did remain, without seeing its head. Now, thanks to the beneficent institutions of the Saturday half holiday and the "week end," an entire change of scene may be had within a distance which enables the husband and father to spend every Sunday with his family, returning to town Sunday evening or early Monday morning in time for business. Most husbands and fathers, we think, by no means regard this as a grievance, but, on the contrary, find that the refreshment of the outing to themselves and the more healthful and enjoyable surroundings in which their families spend the Summer compensate them very fairly for their solitude during the four or five intervening days. In fact, if fashion confined the family to the city during the Summer as it did two generations ago, the husband and father would not be the last to repine and remonstrate at the change.

REPUBLICAN FINANCE.

After two years of Treasury deficit the Republican organs are rejoicing over the appearance of a moderate surplus. All will rejoice with them, but will remark that under our finances as the Republicans arrange them, whenever the Treasury is flush the money market is starved. The Treasury surplus is only $5,772,473, but as it is taken out of the meagre New York bank surplus, the money market acts as though something awful instead of something gratifying were happening. However, as the Republicans have only been in control a generation or so, it is hypercriticism to suggest that they have blundered in not arranging it so that Government collections might not come out of—and be kept out of—the funds upon which mercantile credits are based, and that currency might be issued where it is wanted, instead of being sent by railway freight from the spot where there is a deficiency of credit to where there is no use for credit, but a demand for pocket money.

It is just as well to put these happenings upon record when they are happening, so that hereafter when the predicted happens it may not be said that it was not foreseen, and that superhuman prevision was not to be expected of mere Republicans. It is not the Democrats who are seeing visions. It is Republican Secretaries of the Treasury, past and present, and Republican officials of leading banks. Yet the Republicans will only amend the currency and the tariff together.

I have always been ready to lend what assistance I could to the Anti-Smoke League or any organization that takes up the battle for the health of the residents of this city. * * * The men who compose the League are citizens who will not desist from this warfare on the perpetrators of the smoke nuisance, and I am happy to co-operate with them.—Health Commissioner DARLINGTON.

We have predicted that this body of influential citizens would materially assist Commissioner DARLINGTON in his campaign against illicit smoke-belching chimneys. Manhattan, Brooklyn, the surrounding magnificent water parks, and the sea-sky above them should be cleared forthwith of this clinging Pittsburgian horror.

Addressing the Passaic Board of Trade, Secretary SHAW spoke eloquently in behalf of fostering our foreign commerce. Every protected interest has flourished—therefore, what is needed for our infant industries is a higher tariff, and if goods are made too dear to sell abroad, then we should hire men to sell them at a loss, by paying the freight bills in the form of a subsidy. The idea that the way to foster trade is to cheapen production is absurd. If we only had adequate protection, the foreign trade of 80,000,000 Americans would easily exceed that of 40,000,000 free-trade Englishmen.

A special committee of the Post Office Department has reported on a new postal note designed for small sums only, to be issued at slight cost, and intended to obviate the awkward necessity of sending postage stamps and small coins through the mails. Many business houses doing a large mail order business depend almost wholly upon this form of conveyance, their receipts amounting annually to millions of dollars. The Postmaster General has signified his approval of the new note by causing a bill to be drafted making it legal.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Tragedy in the Darkness.

Comment on the death of PAUL NOCQUET deals with it, for the most part, as incidental to the young man's interest in ballooning and the last trip through the air that ended so disastrously. As a matter of fact, the "ascension," as such, was rather particularly successful and rather particularly fortunate, and it tended to prove, so far as it proved anything, that voyages of this kind are not apt to involve the taking of any very terrible chances. For it is evident that while in the air NOCQUET had not only retained his self-possession, but had controlled his unwieldy craft sufficiently to bring it down accurately and safely on the narrow sand bar beyond which rolled the open sea. He rose, he drifted, and he descended all right, and what happened afterward had nothing to do with ballooning. One can only imagine what those happenings were. He had only to remain where he was, and at worst pass a cold and uncomfortable night, from the hardships of which he had something more than moderately good protection. Some inexplicable desperation seems to have seized upon the man—a panic fear of the night and its loneliness. The theory that he apprehended the rise of the tide is hardly tenable, for all around him was conclusive evidence that the tide did not cover his island. He knew within fairly narrow limits where he was and that the morning would bring all the help he needed, and yet something forced him to struggle through the creeks and marshes toward the distant lights of Amityville, and he continued the struggle till he fell in utter exhaustion and died where he fell. Even this death, admitting that it occurred in just this way and for no other reason than exhaustion, is mysterious. Men do not often die so, for exhaustion usually comes in time to prevent a complete draining of the vital energies. One is almost tempted to say that the man died of being a Frenchman, and a peculiarly excitable one at that. The trouble with that explanation is that the excitability of Frenchmen is more a matter of tradition and misinterpretation than of reality—that they demonstrate emotion more than some other people, rather than that they have more emotion to demonstrate. Some lesion or weakness of the heart probably killed NOCQUET, as a result of violent exertion undertaken for an inadequate and unknown motive. It seems to have had nothing to do with the balloon or ballooning, except that it brought him to the island where he perished.

Automobilists and the Stanley Bill.

As the automobiling fraternity have divided into hostile camps over the merits of the Stanley bill establishing a State Commission to fix speed regulations and examine and license chauffeurs, the chances are that the general public will conclude that the automobilists against the bill are fighting against desirable restrictions, while the others are willing to endure those proposed in the pending measure rather than risk the formulation and enforcement of rules still more severe. This theory of the situation is probably inaccurate, and the fact that Mr. CHARLES T. TERRY, who has labored long and hard for the suppression of reckless and careless automobiling, is leading the opposition to the bill, is a good indication of its faultiness. Even Mr. TERRY, however, mournfully confessed that 10 per cent. of all automobolists were disdainful of the law and guilty of conduct which he described as "disgusting and reprehensible." This is a large proportion—quite large enough to account for whatever public antagonism and prejudice have been excited against the automobilists as a class. Some speakers at the Assembly hearing insisted that the percentage of wicked automobilists was not 10, but 40, and of course frequent references were made to the recent killing of two women at New Rochelle. That case will long come up on all occasions like this to trouble the automobile people and to lend weight to the arguments of their would-be repressors. It was indeed a terrible illustration of the very worst possibilities of automobiling, and the abandonment of the victims made the accident even more irritating than horrible. To say that the men who did this "lost their heads" is to say what is neither true nor exculpatory; they were composed enough to make sure that the women whom they had struck were very seriously injured, if not dead, and not everybody will believe that if the number of their car had not happened to be taken they ever would have assumed the responsibility for what they had done. Other automobilists, in similar circumstances, have not done so.

His Time Passed Quickly!

Even more amazing than that a living man should have been taken out of the Courrières mines twenty-five days after the explosion that killed so many of his fellows is the fact that he tried to keep account of the time as his long imprisonment continued and had supposed the number of days to be only eight. It would have been assumed with the utmost confidence that his mistake would have been the other way—that the hours would have dragged interminably in that hopeless darkness. The explanation is, presumably, that the man was asleep much longer than he supposed, and that when awake he was constantly occupied by the search for food and water. The chances are, too, that he was of an unusually stolid nature and did not excite himself to despair by thought of other things than his immediate necessities. With all allowances made, however, the mistaking of twenty-five days for eight is a most remarkable phenomenon, and if a novelist had dared to attribute it to an imagined miner he would have been mercilessly ridiculed by every critic—with the best of excuses.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The other day when the Senate was not in session Senator Spooner had occasion to visit the Senate Chamber. To his astonishment the pages—ten in number—were holding a stormy Senatorial session with a black-eyed little Ohioan in the Vice President's chair. Another page was clamoring for recognition, another was standing on a Senator's chair.

Senator Spooner smiled, and walked to his seat in the centre aisle. "Mr. President," he began dignifiedly. Quick as a flash came the answer, which nearly stunned the Wisconsin statesman:

"The Senator from Wisconsin," solemnly replied the page in the chair.

"Don't you think there is a good deal of confusion in the chamber, Mr. President," added the Senator from the Badger State, when he had recovered his equanimity. The page brought down Vice President Fairbank's gavel with a resounding whack. "There certainly is; the Senate must be in order—" and Spooner fled precipitately.

Senator Piles of Washington has been distributing among his colleagues a menu card he has received from a restaurant in Washington, on which every delicacy was designated in the Chinook language, which sounds partly like the splash-splash of the oar of a canoesman, and then sometimes like the sighing winds as they sway the pines on some mountain side. For instance, the menu revealed the coming with the first course of a relish called "Skookum Muck-a-Muck." One of the boiled meats announced was "Moos-a-Moos Yaka Wawa Wawa," with an entree bearing this euphonious title: "Siwash Lapool lapo co lup lup Pire Sapolel." A roast, with several others was called "Kalah-Kalah." The dinner wound up with "Kloshe Kahkwa Iktahs"—or toothpicks.

The junior Washington Senator has invited special attention of the Committee on Indian Affairs to consideration of this remarkable card. Senators Stone and Warner are both members of the committee, but up to the present time neither has underetaken to tell Senator Piles what the dinner really was.

MORALIZING IN THE DRAMA.

An Apology for George Bernard Shaw—His Preaching.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This is a late hour to take up a defense of George Bernard Shaw. But one grows weary of criticism that does the subject criticised a very evident wrong. After being cloyed with the superficial strictures of gentlemen supposedly learned in the art of the theatre, it remained for Prof. Adler to show us G. B. Shaw in a new light—the intellectual clown has become, forsooth, the stern moralist. What a striking metamorphosis! Is our understanding of the man and his works gone so far awry, or would we name him Touchstone? The latter would be doing him an injustice, while the former does not argue much for our understanding.

It was a matter of exceeding surprise to see that Prof. Adler, who is himself a foremost champion of intellectual freedom in the field of religion, denying the same imperative right to Shaw in the drama. Moralists, he is reported as saying, should keep their hands off the drama; it is bad art to preach. The trouble with Shaw's plays is that they preach.

Then the great masters of the drama, from Euripides to Ibsen, ought to have consigned to the four winds the keen and subtle analyses that they made of the life about them from fear that their contemporaries might regard their dramas as ill-timed homilies. We might as well contend that the trouble with matter is that it has extension, with time that it has succession, or with space that it has infinity. The ability to moralize, to draw the essence out of our experiences, and see them in their true significance, is a very decided characteristic of the creative imagination. One is the invariable concomitant of the other.

Wherefore the necessity or even the utility of hindering and fettering the creative impulses of the dramatists by saying: "Thus shalt thou do, and thus shalt thou not do." By all means let us avoid the attitude of the mother who always accompanied a stern look with the admonition, "Johnnie, keep your hands off the jam." The paternal manner is undoubtedly necessary in the home and kindergarten, but it has no place in dramatic criticism.

Freedom to express his intuitions of beauty and truth in his own way is what the true dramatist demands, and freedom we ought to grant him. Then with minds free from preconceived ideas we might do him justice and derive the spiritual stimulus that comes from contact with a great mind. LEONARD JUDSON.

New York, April 4, 1906.

A Judicial Cattle Pen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is not the City of New York rich enough to provide comfortable, respectable, and safe quarters for its courts? I ask because to-day when I had to visit the District Court at the corner of Third Avenue and 158th Street I found myself in a large, dirty room in which there was not a single table, chair, or bench for the accommodation of lawyers, clients, and witnesses, who were consequently obliged to stand during the whole time or squat on the not unsoiled floor. The judicial desk and two chairs for the Judge and his clerk were all that was left to remind one that therein was dispensed justice. But for these three articles the room might well have been mistaken for a cattle pen. I was told that the building had been condemned as unsafe, and that the absence of civilized furniture was to lighten the pressure of insecure walls threatening to collapse.

Now, Sir, this seems to me to be a case of criminal neglect that you cannot denounce too severely. To continue the use of such a building is gambling with human life, for who knows the hour or the moment when another of those awful calamities due to gross carelessness may occur through the collapse of the building and the death of scores of human beings. You will be doing a great public service by calling attention to this matter in your editorial columns, and from all I learn you cannot do it too soon. The authorities are apt to put off and put off until it's too late, and the only proper course to pursue is to insist upon the immediate sealing up of this unsafe building. Let the court go anywhere that is safe until proper quarters can be secured for it. A LAWYER.

A Change of Clothing.

From The Tucson Citizen.

Gustave Anderson, a prisoner in the Workhouse, died of pneumonia because of the rapid change to the prison suit from an enormous amount of clothing he wore when received. When told to disrobe he startled the guards by removing seven caps.

Then he added to their amazement by taking off six coats, two vests, five pairs of trousers, four shirts, and two undershirts. His shoes were stuffed with straw. Soon after he donned the Workhouse garb he was seized with pneumonia, which resulted in his death. He was sent to the Workhouse on the charge of vagrancy, and his home is not known.

Not Last or Least.

From The Washington Star.

"Are you in favor of free alcohol for use in the arts?"

"Yes," answered Col. Stilwell of Kentucky. "But to be perfectly candid and not mislead you, I ought to add that I consider a competent mixer of beverages an artist."

MUNICIPAL ICE.

A Chapter from Boston's Experience Suggests Caution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's issue you have a story that Alderman Peters wants a Municipal ice plant established. Has the Alderman ever, perchance, glanced at a history of those Boston municipal departments that were created under Mayor Josiah Quincy, especially the ice plant which was started by Water Commissioner John R. Murphy "for the purpose of furnishing the fountains with cheaper ice"? Mr. Murphy of Boston decided to fight the Ice Trust, as Alderman Peters wishes to.

Let us review Boston's laughable ice experiment. We quote from "Practical Politics" Jan. 21, 1905, which says of Mr. Murphy's attempt:

"He established his ice-cutting plant. He bought wagons, tools, and other equipment and hired more men. It was one of the most interesting propositions that the city ever tackled, but even Josiah Quincy had to abandon it. Ice cut by the city cost almost as much as radium, and the papers had more jokes over the ice-cutting industry than they had had in a long time. Nobody talks now of having a municipal ice-cutting equipment."

The ice plant was a failure, in fact.

Now, when the figures were given out in regard to this ice plant it was discovered that the ice was costing the city $60 a ton, and they could buy it of the terrible "trust" for from $2 to $3 a ton.

How can Mr. Peters be serious? We don't want to mention that ferry again, it is such a thorn in the side of the Commissioner already; but that ferry—the great Richmond Municipal ferry—was to save the city expenses and reduce fares and schedule time. Alas! it is now history, and fares, schedule time, expenses are all greater than before. The cost—ye gods! what is the excuse for such extravagance with a service not a whit improved and a large sum lost forever to our city. Enough!

The City of Boston is wiser in some things than New York—but they are a good pair in the follies of "Municipal Ownership." VERITAS.

Inspection of Gas Meters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter from Alan R. Fergusson in Monday's issue quite startled me, because it was a repetition of my own experience. He says that after his gas bill had been doubled he applied to the State Board for an inspection, paid a fee of 40 cents, and then the Consolidated Gas Company took away the meter, and after installing a new meter reported that the registration was correct.

For many years my gas bill had averaged $5 during the Winter months. Last Summer the Consolidated Gas Company, on a pretext that my bills were too low, and that the meter must register incorrectly, installed a new meter. Thereafter my bills jumped to about $10 through the Winter months. I applied to Mr. Jastrow Alexander, 1 Hanover Square, who is known as the State Inspector, and to whom the people are supposed to report when they are fooled by the meters. I was told that it would cost me 40 cents (in advance) to have the meter inspected. I paid the 40 cents, and the Inspector examined the meter, and left word that I would get a report in about eight days. A few days after the inspection the Consolidated Gas Company removed the meter, and put in a third meter. A few days thereafter I got a report from Mr. Alexander, stating that my meter registered correctly.

In both Mr. Fergusson's case and mine, and presumably in thousands of others, the Consolidated Gas Company removed the meter in the interval between the inspection and the report made to the consumer. Possibly if I complained of this third meter to the State Inspector, the Consolidated Gas Company would install a fourth meter. It is to be noted in these cases that the meter complained of is taken away by the company before the consumer gets his notice that it registered correctly, and thus it becomes impossible to disprove that statement. Name of Arkansas's Governor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial columns this morning reference is made to the demagogue whom the people of Arkansas, in their supreme wisdom, have decided to be a fit representative of that State in the United States Senate, "Jefferson Davis, in whose name only lingers the old flavor of Southern traditions." As I understand the fact to be, Gov. Davis's name is not Jefferson but Jeffries. You will recollect that it has usually, if not always, been printed as Jeff. I have seen the signature of the Governor to letters, on a hotel register, and attached to a Mayor's commission, and in no instance did he use a more extended form of the name than "Jeff Davis." The name, as printed in the body of the official document referred to, was also Jeff Davis.

There is no connection between the family of the Governor and that of the President of the Confederacy, although, of course, he has allowed a different impression to prevail. By abbreviating Jeffries to Jeff, the false implication is made that his full name is Jefferson, and this is exactly in accordance with his entire character. If the Governor were really Jefferson Davis he would certainly see to it that his name was written and printed as Jefferson, as that is a very important part of his stock in trade. EX-ARKANSAN.

Military Wireless Telegraphy.

From The London Standard.

PARIS, March 6.—For some time communication by wireless telegraphy has been possible between the Eiffel Tower and Belfort, on the eastern frontier. At present the engineers are trying to discover in what degree their wireless messages can be intercepted or falsified. An apparatus fitted in the grounds of the Military Aerostatic School at Meudon has been communicating with the office of a divisional commander on the eastern frontier, and at the same time messages have been exchanged between the Eiffel Tower and an apparatus fitted in a captive balloon flying over one of the frontier fortresses. The War Office will make no statement about the experiments, but I think we shall hear no more for some time about the demolition of the Eiffel Tower.

Domestic Servants in Paris.

From Le Petit Journal of Paris.

In a recent lawsuit attention was drawn to the question of responsibility of masters in regard to their domestic and especially female, servants. The court severely condemned the Parisian custom of relegating domestics to rooms under the roof, and pointed out that this "carelessness" is prejudicial to morality as well as disastrous to health.

A Special Make.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"What's this peculiar instrument?" inquired the visitor.

"That," replied the manufacturer, "is a table knife. We've just filled a large order for a Chicago firm."

"But what's the idea in the raised rim all around the blade?"

"That's to keep peas and things from rolling off."

A Parisian Paradox.

From Le Figaro of Paris.

A judgment has recently established the fact that to kiss a woman in the street without her consent, a crime qualified as an offense of "slight violence," is atoned for by a fine of 5 francs. That is not enormous. And if she consents to it? Oh, if she consents, it is much dearer.

Figurative.

From The Columbia State.

They are planning to build a ten-million-dollar battleship and name it Constitution. If a foe should hammer that member of our navy as heavily as Mr. Roosevelt and his party have hammered the spirit and letter of the Constitution of the United States it will quickly become a submarine.

MARK TWAIN ON J. W. FOLEY.

Says the "Schoolboy" Is a Public Pet and a Pioneer of Spelling Reform.

Mark Twain in Harper's Weekly.

A year and a quarter ago Mr. Foley began to do schoolboy poems in a fire-new and blood-curdling and criminal fashion of spelling which no self-respecting eye could endure at first. It was phonetics carried to the uttermost limit of exactness in the reproduction of sound-effects. The public felt deeply outraged, and there was a smell of insurrection in the air—a quite justifiable condition of things, too, for the poems looked like the alphabet hiccupping home in disorderly squads, a most painful and irritating spectacle—but I ask you, what has become of that insurrection? No man knows. It disappeared and left no sign. For the public had done the fatal thing; it kept on reading the poems in order to curse the spelling, and of course the natural thing happened; familiarity with the spelling modified the reader's hostility to it, then reconciled him to it, and at last made him fall in love with it; and now—well, now Mr. Foley's schoolboy is a pet.

NEW YORK MEN AND MANNERS.

A Word in Their Behalf by Another Southern Woman.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with interest last week the comments of a Southern woman upon the conduct of New York men, and I wish to speak a word in their behalf. I, too, am from the South, and I have not met with anything but courtesy and kindness in my residence in New York. I very often use the Subway trains in the "rush hours," and I have never yet had to swing on a strap. Men have arisen in the most courteous way and have offered me a seat, just as I have been accustomed to their doing in the Southern cities.

When I see the manner in which many women here accept this sacrifice of a chance to rest one's weary bones and to glance at the evening paper, I wonder that all the men do not weary of well-doing. A woman who conducts herself quietly and is considerate of the rights of others, will meet with consideration from American men of all classes.

I agree with Mary Mortimer Maxwell in many of her criticisms of us, and especially in her comments of New York flats and their lack of privacy. Is it economy on the part of the owners that denies us doors? And why will the architect put the principal bedroom next to the living room, with only a place for portières between? A VIRGINIAN.

Ocean Postage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The 'sea postage' clause in the agreement between Great Britain and the United States is being taken advantage of more and more by the passengers of English ships arriving at the Port of New York," said an officer of the Carmania as the Cunarder rode at anchor off Quarantine. Some of the most experienced ocean voyagers have only recently learned of and profited by this amicable understanding.

If a passenger brings his letters ashore and mails them in New York for England or Continental Europe he must use United States stamps and pay a tariff of five cents or twopence half-penny for each half ounce. But if he posts his letters on board, before he leaves the ship, he may use British stamps, and the tariff is only one penny for each half ounce.

The letters must, however, be put in the ship's letter box before she reaches United States waters. That means in the present case three nautical miles east of the Sandy Hook Light. Passengers from America, however, do not find the same privilege extended to them when approaching an English port. They cannot post letters for the United States on board their ship. They must post them ashore, use British stamps, and pay full postage, i. e., twopence half-penny for each half ounce. E. W. M.

For a National Sanitarium.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of the 25th inst., regarding the suggestion of removing the capital from Washington to the Ozark Mountains, suggests an idea that it might be well for the Government to consider it. It is unlikely that the capital will ever be removed, but still, who can perceive what a century or two might bring forth?

However, the suggestion has called attention to the salubrious climate of the Ozark regions. There is no doubt that section is the "Garden of the Gods," and a natural sanitarium. Looking into the future, why wouldn't it be well for the Government to reserve a large tract of land, which is already in its possession? Within a few miles of Springfield, deservedly known as the "Queen of the Ozarks"—a beautiful city of 40,000 inhabitants—are thousands of acres of Government land. Why wouldn't it be well for the Government to withdraw this from the market, and announce that no more would be sold? This land might be very valuable for use as a sanitarium, if not a capital, in the distant future. It would cost the Government nothing to take this action. Of course it would be necessary for a bill to be passed through Congress to make it effective.

Downtown Streets Impassable.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Cannot something be done to clear the sidewalks on some of the streets downtown, especially Cortlandt Street and Maiden Lane? Every day to and from the office I either have to hurdle the various obstacles which are spread all over the sidewalks, or join the horses in the middle of the muddy streets. There seems to be only one mounted policeman on any of the cross streets, and he is stationed on Maiden Lane, between William and Nassau Streets. This man does splendid work, and were it not for this fact one would be unable to get through unless in a balloon. If more mounted policemen like him were placed on the other streets pedestrians would then have a chance to get through by walking on the sidewalks. H. W. HAGUE.

BINGHAM WRITES CURTLY TO POLICE MIND-TESTERS

Says He Doesn't Approve Such Tomfoolery Tactics,

BUT THE SHOW GOES AHEAD

Although Under Board of Education Auspices It Proves Highly Diverting and Strange Answers Result.

There was a heap of fun last night in the High School of Commerce Building, in Sixty-fifth Street, and, although it was all under the auspices of the New York Board of Education, those who got reserved seats declared they had a very amusing evening. According to the printed programme, it was to be "a patrolman's mental test examination, together with a demonstration of the physical and mental work of the study class of the E. R. C.," which means the Evening Recreation Centre. The invitations sent out stated that the invited guests were Dr. Maxwell, Superintendent of Public Schools; Miss Evangeline E. Whitney, Superintendent of Special Schools; Dr. Haupt, Chairman of the Special Schools Committee, and Police Commissioner Bingham. However, the only one of the invited guests to appear was Miss Whitney, who stood in one of the aisles of the auditorium with her coat and hat on. The galleries, which had been reserved for the public, did not contain a single person. About 200 persons, mostly boys, gathered in the great hall and talked in whispers.

"Are dey goin' ter put on any skirt dancers?" inquired a young man in the second row. The youth who sat in front of him turned and said:

"Dis ain't no Bowery burlesque—it's a examination for de cops, an' any feller what passes ternight gits appointed Monday morning by Commissioner Binghampson."

That seemed to be the general impression among those in the hall. At 7:30 o'clock a young man who formerly taught a vacation school on the east side rapped for order. He announced that the school for patrolmen had been under cover for some time, but was now ready to come out of its shell. A list of typewritten questions was then handed to each person in the hall, and the mental examination was on.

The folks in the hall studied the questions intently, and Mr. Kirchner, the instructor, opened a letter which he had received from Police Commissioner Bingham. His face paled as he read it, and he handed it over to Miss Whitney, who seemed very indignant after reading it.

The Commissioner had written that he "would not stand for such tomfoolery tactics," and wanted it distinctly understood that he "did not approve of the police school fad." He said some other harsh things about it—in fact, so many that Miss Whitney walked up and down the aisle excitedly and would not make public the letter.

Then a whisper went about the hall that Police Commissioner Bingham felt hurt at being invited to attend the show. Although only three men in the hall got a glimpse of the letter, everybody seemed to know that Commissioner Bingham had written something peppery.

However, the examination went on. Some men who had received typewritten lists of questions before entering the hall took them out and proceeded to write answers. Picking up his list, a big, broad-shouldered longshoreman from Tenth Avenue got to work on this question:

In one year ten Germans drink 654,709,876 glasses of Wurzburg, thirty-one Irishmen 81 glasses, 10,000 Americans 111,000 glasses, 567 Frenchmen 450,548 glasses, 7,654 Hebrews 01010101 glasses, 876 Englishmen 9,101,765 glasses; what is the average number of glasses consumed by each man?

"One Irishman," wrote the man from Tenth Avenue, "can drink more whisky than any Jarman; but if ten Jarmans think, after drinking tin millions glasses of beer, that they kin lick one Irishman who drinks ten whiskies, let them come on."

Another answer was:

For vhy der Bord of Edgecation don't learn to spell Wurzburger. Und dot ain't somebody's business anahow how much beer a German can drink.

Still another answer read:

Ze Frenchman he drinks ze wine, not ze beer.

Another of the questions on this list read:

Multiply 4 by 11 by 44.

"That's the dead gig," wrote one young man; "but we don't play policy any more in Nint' Avener."

The first list included a question as to how public officials are elected. Most of the answers read: "By Tammany Hall," but one man wrote:

District Returning Jerome electioned hisself.

"What is the lowest court in the City of New York?" was the next question.

"Judge Pool's," was one of the answers.

"The lowest court is the one in which they take graft," wrote another candidate for police honors, and the same man in answering the question, "What is the highest court?" wrote as an answer: "The highest is the Criminal Court Building."

"How many members in the House of the State Congress?" was question No. 4.

"Ask the gas man," was one answer, and another was: "We got not any Congresses on New Jork—dem are in Washington."

"Locate the Street Cleaning Department," was next on the list, and several answered:

"That's what the people of the east side have been trying to do for a year."

"Locate Poverty Row," was the next question.

As there are sixty-seven rows of tenements in Manhattan known as Poverty Row, there were as many different answers. One of these was, "Across the way from Hell's Kitchen." Another, "Denny Sullivan's Flats," and a third, "Between Nigger Row and Casey's Alley."

After the mental examination was finished, Mr. Kirchner, like Johnny Dunn announcing a wrestling bout from the stage of the London Theatre, climbed on the stage and introduced "McMahon, the strong man," who did a dumbbell-lifting act, while the crowd shouted catcalls.

"When do de boxing bouts come on?" inquired a man up front.

They did not come on, for the Police Commissioner had been expected. But it certainly was a great show, although Gen. Bingham, the headliner, did stay away.

NEW BABY AT THE CIRCUS.

It is a Double-Humped Camel and Is Named Miss Mecca.

The zoological department of the Barnum & Bailey Circus rejoiced in the basement of Madison Square Garden yesterday. The animal men shook hands, the lions roared, the elephants trumpeted, and the Siberian camels chewed their cud and looked wise. The cause of the excitement was the birth of a double-humped camel. The little stranger arrived shortly after midnight, and was immediately named Miss Mecca.

The new-comer found it difficult to stand on its tottering and inexperienced legs yesterday, and lay down most of the time. It weights more than a hundred pounds. It is a fine, healthy specimen, and will afford unlimited amusement for circus patrons, especially the children.

At yesterday afternoon's performance Dan Manvelle, who, with two other clowns, gives a laughable performance in a trick cab, drawn by a donkey, made a miscalculation in one of his falls and struck on his head. He had to be assisted from the arena.

HEALER HELPED THE CAT.

But It Died, All the Same, When Christian Science Treatment Stopped.

Whether or not Christian Science scored a victory in the matter of Mrs. Marshall's cat is a matter of dispute. Mrs. Marshall says not, because the cat died after treatment.

Mrs. Marshall lives in West Ninety-eighth Street. Some time ago her Persian cat fell ill. She called in the family doctor, who when he saw the patient left the house in a rage.

The cat walked about the house in a hangcat fashion for days. Then Mrs. Marshall consulted the neighbors. She was advised to take the cat to a veterinary hospital. She did so, and was told that the cat's spine was slightly injured and that it would live or die according to what nature did for the cat and the cat for itself.

The cat was put on a diet of haddock done in cream. It got fat, and finally was content to stay in one place. Then a neighbor suggested a Christian Science healer. Mrs. Marshall did not understand at first, but when she had talked with a healer she understood—perfectly.

The healer came twice a day for a week. The first visit was like the rest. The healer took up the cat, stroked it gently, and, Mrs. Marshall says, whispered in its ear:

"Now, kitty, it will be all right in a few days. You know it will be all right in a few days. Just you believe that it will be all right."

The cat improved right away. It gave up eating such things as haddock done in cream, but gained strength. Mrs. Marshall says that for some time it showed a remarkable patience, even in its moments of suffering. But it gained strength and at the end of the week it was able to run about—not briskly, it is true.

Day before yesterday the healer was called out of town on another case. When the healer did not come, the patient mewed piteously. Mrs. Marshall tried to appease it, but it would not be comforted.

When the healer did not come again yesterday the cat ate another large portion of haddock done in cream, fell into a coma, and died at 7:15 last night.

THE MARUM QUARTET.

A Pleasant Concert of Chamber Music at Cooper Union.

An audience of fair proportions, but not half what it should have been, considering the appeal which the quality of the entertainment made to the appreciativeness of the vicinage, assembled in the large hall of the Cooper Union last night to hear the fifth and last concert of the first season of the Marum Quartet. It should be said at once, and loudly, that this new organization is making a bold bid for first place among our local chamber music organizations. In quality of music and in quality of performance, last night's concert left little, indeed, to be desired.

The programme was especially interesting, including not only the first of the piano quartets of Brahms, but also a virtual novelty in the shape of two movements of a string quartet by Ippolitoff-Iwanow and a rarity which must have been a novelty to most of its hearers in the shape of Mozart's clarinet quintet. This is one of the most noteworthy of all its author's "profuse strains of unpremeditated art," and is worthy of a far more frequent hearing than it receives.

In the quartet the players on stringed instruments had the co-operation of Mr. Epstein, and in the quintet of Mr. Levy, the first clarinet of the Russian Symphony Orchestra. At the outset of the Brahms number the pianist perhaps showed some tendency to exploit his instrument at the expense of the ensemble. But this speedily disappeared, and the noble music was played with proper balance, as well as with competent technique and with musical feeling on the part of all concerned.

Mr. Levy, who took the leading part, for such that of the clarinet is, in the Mozart number, displayed an adequate technical equipment and a very mellifluous tone. The only shortcoming was in the want of the dynamical variety wh is essential to prevent the mellifluousness of the instrument from lapsing into monotony. But for all that his performance was so highly enjoyable that it seems ungracious to quarrel with it.

The two movements of the quartet by Ippolitoff-Iwanow showed modern Russian chamber music at very nearly its best, being genuinely musical and without affectation or pretense. It was really a delightful occasion.

"THE GREAT BELL."

Big Audience Applauds Blumenthal's Comedy at the Irving Place.

"Die Grosse Glocke," (The Great Bell,) a comedy in four acts by Oskar Blumenthal, was the offering at the Irving Place Theatre last evening. Marie Reisenhofer was the star of the occasion, appearing as Erna von Solden.

The other leading parts were taken by Max Haenseler, Elisabeth Ariaans, Sophie Grosser, and Hedwig von Ostermann. The audience was large and liberal with its applause. The comedy will again be seen this evening and at to-morrow's performances.

TUSKEGEE RECEIVES ITS BALDWIN FUND

SPEECH BY ANDREW CARNEGIE

Says Hampton and Tuskegee Are Solving the Negro Problem—Tilt Over Franchise Grant.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., April 5.—The third and final day of Tuskegee's silver jubilee was marked to-day by the continued attendance of an immense throng. The programme for the two sessions of the day and evening included several notable addresses, closing with that of Andrew Carnegie this evening.

The morning session was marked by a spirited issue between President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota and William Lloyd Garrison. The former speaker, in commenting on the work at Tuskegee, expressed his interest in the education of all the people of the South. He ended his remarks by saying:

"Outside of education there can be formed no solution for the race problem. I do not subscribe to the doctrine that the more ignorant a man is the more efficient he is as a worker." He expressed the opinion that the enfranchisement of the mass of the negro race at the close of the civil war was a colossal blunder.

Sharp issue was taken by Mr. Garrison in a daramtic ten-minute address. He contended that the way "to teach a man to vote is to put the ballot into his hand."

An incident of the day's proceedings was the formal delivery to Robert C. Ogden of the endowment fund of $150,000 raised to commemorate the life and services of the late W. H. Baldwin, Jr., President of the Long Island Railroad. The presentation was made by Oswald Garrison Villard, the Chairman of the Baldwin Memorial Fund, who said:

"It is my pleasant duty as Chairman of the committee organized in January, 1905, to raise a memorial fund to the late William Henry Baldwin, Jr., to present to you the proceeds of that enterprise. No less than 655 subscribers gave of their means to prove their faith in Baldwin the man, to testify their appreciation of his services to his fellow-men, and to attest the loss to this country which his premature death signified. From twenty-one States of this Union came contributions ranging from 25 cents to $12,500, and, in keeping with Mr. Baldwin's life, the donors represent every creed and every race.

"One graduate of this institute, Mr. John W. Robinson, sent $25 from Lome, Togo, West Africa. No one gift was more welcome than the joint subscription of $800 from the teachers, students, and graduates of Tuskegee, and there were many other graduates who contributed directly. I now hold in my hand a check for $140,000, and an order for $10,000 worth of 5 per cent. Mexican Coal and Coke bonds, which represents the total of the contributions after deducting $2,187.41 for the expenses due to printing, postage, and clerk hire, and reserving $1,200 for a permanent bronze memorial to be placed here, perhaps in this building.

"At one of its earliest meetings the committee decided that this memorial fund should go to Tuskegee Institute, although tempted to memorialize Mr. Baldwin's interest in the struggling poor of the great east side of New York City and his sympathy with a host of other civic movements to which he gave his time, ability, and strength. To those who knew him best it seemed, however, most fitting that the money should come here, since his heart and soul were in this great work, and with this decision his family was in most hearty accord.

"In keeping with his broad and catholic spirit in such matters, the committee donates this fund, with no other condition than that it be held perpetually as the William H. Baldwin, Jr., Endowment Fund of Tuskegee Institute, to be forever kept intact and separately accounted for in the annual printed statement of the institute. Its income is to be used for any purpose which the Trustees deem most vital to the work of the school.

"To you, Br. Ogden, as Chairman of the Trustees of Tuskegee Institute, I now deliver this fund, that it may help untold thousands of young colored men and women to fit themselves for worthy citizenship in this republic, and forever commemorate a stainless and beautiful life. For William H. Baldwin, Jr., was the name of a railroad President who was yet an ardent civic reformer; of the head of a great business who was never too busy to sympathize with and aid the man or woman who was down; of a man intensely patriotic, who nobly stood out against his country when he deemed it wrong; of an American who, best of all, in his human relations, knew neither race, nor caste, nor creed, nor color, and was therefore an ardent and a consistent follower of Christ.

"Singularly pure, singularly blessed as he was, may Tuskegee Institute ever hold him up to her students in the generations to come as a model to be emulated, an example to be followed, an inspiration to all who shall read or hear of him."

Andrew Carnegie in his address to-night said:

"It is impossible that educated Southern white people could find life agreeable or inspiring and fruitful, yielding all its sweet graces, surrounded by an inferior race sunk in ignorance and squalor. Human society is one great whole, and the degradation of one part injures and lowers the lives of the others.

"The immediate task in hand has hitherto been to demonstrate whether cr not there lay in the colored race capacity for improvement. This should not have been matter of much doubt, since history shows from what unpromising material our own among other races of men has risen in the scale and slowly reached civilization, but it was naturally doubted by those who had known colored people only as slaves whether they could ever rise to the dignity of freemen.

"The teachers already produced, ministers, lawyers, doctors, and members of all the other professions, the professors seen here and elsewhere in their colleges, the steady increase of taxable property owned by negroes, and what we see here to-day gives the convincing answer.

"The negro, just like our own race, raises himself whenever he obtains freedom of action and education. The race develops qualities by the exercise of its inherent and hitherto latent powers. The question is no longer open. Hampton and Tuskegee and several similar institutions have settled it for all time.

"We are upon the right path, therefore, when we seek the educated and public-spirited members of Southern society to permit us to co-operate with them in expanding the influence of Tuskegee and her sister institutions and in elevating the colored race in every way, and we are also right in asking them to co-operate with us as citizens of the great republic now more closely united into one harmonious whole than was ever possible before, when the two antagonistic systems of freedom and slavery prevailed.

"There does not exist to-day a great nation so completely one in thought and feeling throughout all its wide domains as our own. May it ever so remain. Let us do what we can to increase the sense of brotherhood."

M. MAX CHALLENGED HIM.

Bernhardt's Leading Man to Fight Fred Mayer in France, Perhaps.

William F. Connor, who, with the Shuberts, has managed the tour of Mme. Bernhardt this season, verified yesterday the report that a duel had been arranged between M. Max, leading man of Mme. Bernhardt's company, and Fred Mayer, the star's recent representative. M. Max issued the challenge.

Mr. Connor said that under other circumstances he would not care to talk of happenings in the company, but as the unpleasantness had become public he wished to state that Mr. Mayer had been discharged from the employ of Mme. Bernhardt. He wouldn't tell what it was all about. The duel is scheduled to take place as soon as M. Max gets back to France.

EASTMAN JOHNSON DEAD.

The Artist Had Painted Portraits of Many Famous Men.

Eastman Johnson, the portrait painter, died last night at his home, 65 West Fifty-fifth Street.

Mr. Johnson had been complaining of feeling ill and feeble for a month. He was 82 years old, and when he showed signs of heart weakness some months ago he told his friends that the end was near, and that he was prepared. Last evening at about 6 o'clock he was stricken with a fainting spell, and, although medical attention was immediately given him, he was unable to rally, and died an hour later.

Mr. Johnson died in the presence of his wife, Elizabeth Buckley Johnson, and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Conkling.

Funeral arrangements were immediately made. Services will be held at St. George's Church in Stuyvesant Square on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The pallbearers, who have not yet been selected, will be men prominent in art circles.

Mr. Johnson was born in Maine in 1824. His father was for thirty years Secretary of State in Maine. The artist studied under no master in his youth, but, having a natural aptitude for art, began at an early age to develop his talents. Soon after attaining his majority he attended an art school in New York, and after showing marked talent for portrait painting went to Washington.

There he painted the portraits of John Quincy Adams and Dolly Madison, which hang in the White House to-day. Later he painted portraits of Daniel Webster and other men in public life.

After staying some months in Washington Mr. Johnston went to Boston, where he did portraits of Longfellow and his family, Nathaniel Hawthorne, President Felton of Harvard, Gov. Winthrop, and others. By this time his fame had spread throughout the East and Middle West.

Then he went to Holland and spent five years in that country in study and recreation. Returning to the United States he went to Lake Superior and studied the Indians of that district, returning in 1860 to this city.

Here Mr. Johnson opened a studio in the old University Building in Washington Square, and in that place did some of his best work. He occupied the studio for many years.

In 1869 he married Miss Elizabeth Buckley of Troy and some years later they moved to 65 West Fifty-fifth Street, where they continued to live.

When Mr. Johnson moved to the home in which he died he established his studio there and continued active in his art. Some of the most notable portraits he painted in that studio were those of Presidents Arthur, Cleveland, and Benjamin Harrison, and of William M. Evarts, Charles O'Connor, Daniel Manning, Jay Gould, John D. Rockefeller, John S. Kennedy, William B. Astor, President Barnard of Columbia, President Woolsey of Yale, Noah Palmer of Yale, President McCosh of Princeton, George M. Pullman, George A. Burden, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Sr., and Edwin Booth, and many others.

Mr. Johnson was a member of the Union League, the Century, and the Lotos Clubs. He was also a member of the Academy of Design, and at one time refused the Presidency of that institution. He was a member also of the Society of American Artists, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Municipal Art Society.

He had paintings in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Lenox Gallery, the Corcoran Gallery of Art, in Washington, and also exhibited in London and Paris. He had exhibits also in the World's Fairs at Chicago, Philadelphia, and St. Louis, and had received gold medals from all the expositions of consequence in the United States in the last thirty-five years.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

CHENEY—BACON.

Austin Cheney and Miss Ruth Bacon, a daughter of Dr. Gorham Bacon and Mrs. Bacon, were married yesterday afternoon in the Church of the New Jerusalem in East Thirty-fifth Street, the Rev. Julian Smythe officiating. The church was decorated with quantities of Southern smilax and yellow Spring flowers.

The bride, whose father gave her away, wore a white liberty satin robe flounced with lace and a long tulle veil; her ornaments were pearls and diamonds. Instead of a bouquet she carried a Prayerbook with a white tulip as a bookmark.

Mrs. Richard March Harper, a sister of the bride, whose own wedding took place in the same church a few weeks since, came on from Denver to be the matron of honor. She wore a coat costume of blue chiffon cloth and white lace and a blue hat. The bridesmaids, the Misses Annette Whipple, Kate de Forest Prentice, Marion Smyth, and Ruth Cheney, were in pale blue cloth gowns topped by cream straw hats trimmed with blue feathers, and carried blue parasols instead of bouquets. The two young flowers girls, the sister and cousin respectively of the bride, were Miss Elizabeth Bacon and Miss Faith Simpkins of Washington. They were in white Anglaise embroidery frocks with yellow sashes; their white hats were trimmed with yellow ribbon.

Frank Cheney was his brother's best man, and the ushers were college chums of the bridegroom, and included the Messrs. Greenleaf, Alsop, Martin, and Putnam. A reception at the residence of the bride's parents, 47 West Fifty-fourth Street, followed the ceremony.

TAYLOR—JOHNSON.

In the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, at 8:30 last evening there was celebrated the wedding of Wyatt Warner Taylor, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Taylor, and Miss May Valentine Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Johnson of Spuyten Duyvil, the church ceremony being followed by a reception at the Waldorf-Astoria. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a white satin gown trimmed with rose point and applique lace, and a tulle veil. The matron of honor, Mrs. H. J. HARPERS BOOKS

THE SPOILERS
By REX E. BEACH.
This is a story written by a strong man, of a strong man, for strong and grown up men to read. It is a tale such as is told by a man perhaps once in a lifetime—a tale of impetuous emotion, of brute strength and courage, of swift and passionate love and hate—a tale which tells itself without fine words—vigorous, forceful, mighty. There is no room for the violet conventions of society in that robust land where "Never a law of God or man runs north of Fifty-three."
The only law is the law of possession, of individual conscience, and of hunger—the hunger for gold digged out of the hills, and the blinding hunger of man for woman and for woman's love. It is a story of to-day, but it goes back to the root of things, and is true of all men and all real women since time began.

ORMONDALE THROWN OUT OF $150,000 IN STAKES

Futurity Winner Engagements Invalidated by Technicality.

FORFEIT RULE IS ENFORCED

Default of Another Owner for $100 Cost McDonough His Entries for Great Colt.

The ill-fortune which has attended the turf ventures of W. O'B. McDonough since he bought the $150,000 Ormonde ten years ago is again shown by a ruling of The Jockey Club, which has thrown Ormondale, the Futurity winner of last year, out of stake engagements worth in the aggregate about the sum that the Californian paid for the unbeaten English horse. It appears that Mr. McDonough through forgetfulness failed to pay forfeits of a nominal sum that through a technicality reverted to him and placed him on the forfeit list just at the period when Ormondale as a yearling was nominated for about all the big stakes for three-year-olds in 1906 that closed in 1904. The entries of Ormondale were sent in proper form, and supposedly were received and accepted, the owner, with the full knowledge that he had a horse of uncommon merit, engaging the colt through the entire schedule of big events, the biggest prizes for which he was nominated including the $20,000 Belmont, the $20,000 Tidal, the $20,000 Century Stakes, and the various Derby Stakes run in the East.

The nominations were made in forgetfulness of the fact that Mr. McDonough had been notified by The Jockey Club that he was responsible for the payment of forfeits amounting to about $100, due against the horse Prince Brutus, which he had sold with his stake engagements to Fisher, a Western owner and trainer.

The new owner assumed the liability for the engagements when he took the horse, but failed to pay, and the liability then reverted to the original nominator, putting Mr. McDonough in arrears for a sum which, while nominal, placed the Californian's name on the forfeit list. The owner of Ormondale delayed payment to give the real debtor time in which to settle, then seemingly forgot all about it, and the $100 remained unpaid through the period when the 1906 engagements for Ormondale, then a yearling, were made.

As a two-year-old Ormondale amply justified the expectations of his owner when he won the $42,000 Futurity, and finished last season in the first rank of the two-year-olds, rating, in the views of horsemen, with Burgomaster, Yankee Consul, and Mohawk II. He has trained on in splendid style, and now gives every promise of being one of the best of the three-year-olds, but through the ruling of The Jockey Club he is barred from about the richest of the great stakes in compliance with the rules of racing, which specifically provide that entries shall not be received from any person whose name is on the forfeit list.

As it has happended, Ormondale has one valuable engagement left, this being in the Lawrence Realization, for which he was nominated as a foal, a year before the default by the owner of Prince Brutus made Mr. McDonough liable for another's debt. Mr. McDonough has made the best of circumstances by entering Ormondale in a great number of the late closing stakes for three-year-olds, but the colt's engagements, aside from the Realization, are all in minor events. Mr. McDonough, in addition to paying $150,000 for Ormonde, the highest price at the time that ever had been paid for a horse, and bringing the great English stallion from South America to the United States, established an expensive breeding farm, known as Menlo Park, in California, and has spent a vast sum in the breeding of horses.

TRIALS FOR THE CARTER.

Horses in Season's Opening Handicap Work at Gravesend.

Half a dozen of the horses engaged in the Carter Handicap were out for work yesterday on the Brooklyn and Sheepshead Bay tracks; the trials of at least two of the number, Roseben and Jacquin, being uncommonly impressive. Roseben and Jacquin galloped with companions from the stable trained by Frank Weir, and four horses went in very nearly the same time, with only a fraction of a second between the slowest and fastest move. Roseben's trial was the fastest, the big sprinter covering six furlongs in 1:15¾, Jacquin in 1:16, Clark Griffith in 1:16¼, and Keator in 1:16¾. Roseben's showing was the most impressive, though the big horse seemed tiring when he finished. Whimsical and Green Room were two other Carter Handicap horses that galloped at Gravesend, Whimsical going three-quarters of a mile handily in 1:17 and Green Room finishing five furlongs cleverly in 1:02.

At Sheepshead Bay, Astronomer of the Carter Handicap entries had an easy gallop of five furlongs in 1:14, but as the horse has been getting a slow preparation it seems doubtful whether he will be a starter.

The greater part of the work by other horses yesterday was at the Gravesend track, where some fairly good moves were made, the fastest work being by the horses in Fred Burlew's string. Of the Burlew lot Edna Jackson galloped five furlongs in 1:03, Belmere went a mile in 1:47, and several of the two-year-olds breezed quarters about 0:25. Trainer Thomas Welsh worked the entries of his stable, sending Ormondale, Merry Lark, Duenna, and Inquisitor over the three-quarters course in time about 1:20 all around. Coy Maid breezed a half mile in 0:54 and Knight Errant had a six-furlongs gallop in 1:23.

Goodwin Shakes Up Columbia Crews.

Coach Goodwin made several important changes in the Columbia crews yesterday and brought up the average weight of the 'Varsity eight somewhat. Kendall was taken out of the bow seat and relegated to the second crew at 3. Helmrich, the football player, was placed in Tonnelle's position at 2 and the latter moved to bow.

The third 'Varsity was also treated to a shake-up. Kobbe, Wood, McLean, and Kitson were shifted about to distribute weight and power more effectively. The new combinations were:

First Varsity.—Bow, Tonnelle; 2, Helmrich; 3, Cheadle; 4, Roy; 5, Ferris; 6, Von Bernuth; 7, Boyle; stroke, O'Loughlin; coxswain, Spence.

Second 'Varsity.—Bow, Earle; 2, Snevily; 3, Kendall; 4, Osterhout; 5, Partine; 6, Short; 7, White; stroke, Mitchell; coxswain, Dorsey.

Third 'Varsity.—Bow, Young; 2, Dresser; 3, Tweedy; 4, Kitson; 5, Wood; 6, McLean; 7, Kobbe; stroke, Perry; coxswain, Hopping.

First Four.—Bow, Updike; 2, M. H. Miller; 3, Braun; stroke, Taylor.

Second Four.—Bow, Morris; 2, W. T. Miller; 3, Haight; stroke, Mackenzie.

Cadet Crew's Advantage in Weight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The intercollegiate rowing season will open Saturday when the Naval Academy and Georgetown crews meet in their annual race on the Severn River, at Annapolis.

The Blue and Gray squad, numbering nineteen men, in charge of Manager Frank Hayes and Coach P. A. Dempsey, will leave here to-morrow morning.

Both the Annapolis crews will have a marked advantage over Georgetown in the matter of weight. The average of the Middies' first is 164 pounds, which is about seven pounds to the man heavier than the Georgetown's first, while the Annapolis second has about the same advantage over Georgetown's second.

The ruling of the Georgetown Faculty which barred Barber, stroke; Neill, No. 7, and Canario, No. 6, followed by the resignation of Capt. Mudd, left the crew with but three members of the eight which finished third at Poughkeepsie last June.

CLOSE GOLF AT PINEHURST.

Wood Wins Championship Cup—Extra Hole to Decide Consolation.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 5.—W. K. Wood of the Homewood Club, Chicago, won the championship trophy in to-day's thirty-six-hole final round of the sixth annual united North and South amateur golf tournament, defeating C. L. Becker of the Woodland Club, Auburndale, Mass., by two up. The match was a brilliant exhibition of amateur golf. At the end of the morning round the Massachusetts player had the Western lad six down. Wood started the afternoon round in record form, taking the first five holes, and tieing the score on the eleventh hole. Becker gained a lead of one on the twelfth, but Wood evened the score on the thirteenth, gaining the lead on the fourteenth. The fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth holes were halved, and Wood won the eighteenth and the match.

Another hot contest was in the championship consolation final. L. E. Wardwell of the Megunticook Club, Camden, Me., defeated E. M. Barnes of Englewood by one up on the thirty-seventh green. The results of the cup rounds:

First Division.—W. K. Wood, Homewood, Chicago, beat C. L. Becker, Woodland, Mass., 2 up.

Consolation.—L. Wardwell, Megunticook, Me., beat E. M. Barnes, Englewood, 1 up. (37 holes.)

Second Division.—John Y. Boyd, Harrisburg, Penn., beat A. F. Southerland, Fox Hills, 2 up and 1 to play.

Consolation.—R. H. Dana, Oakley, beat C. E. Towne, Glenview, Chicago, 1 up.

Third Division.—R. Havemeyer, Seabright, N. J., beat A. P. H. James, London, England, 8 up and 7 to play.

Consolation.—R. L. Titus, New York, beat George Worthington, Mount Anthony Club, Vt., 2 up and 1 to play.

Fourth Division.—J. E. Kellogg, Alpine, Fitchburg, beat F. E. Rogers, St. Andrew's, New York, 6 up and 5 to play.

Consolation.—T. W. Weeks, Storm King, New York, beat G. L. Cutler, Springhaven, Penn., 4 up and 3 to play.

BETTIE LANDON; 100 TO 1, WON

Big Upset in Selling Race for Two-Year-Olds at Benning.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Sensational finishes marked the races to-day at Benning. The sport generally was the best of the meeting. Only one favorite finished in front, the other races being taken by four outsiders and a second choice. A big upset occurred in the second race, when Bettie Landon, at 100 to 1, gave the odds-on favorite, Al Powell, and Bathmaria a sound beating, winning in the fair time of 0:58 for the four and a half furlongs.

Chieftain and Lackey were made even favorites in the first event. Royal Window, Blue Coat, and Lackey made the running to the stretch, in the order named. Then Royal Window collapsed, and Sterling took up the running. He gradually overhauled the leader and nosed out Blue Coat in the last jump. Reidmore was an odds-on favorite for the third, but he got off badly and did not figure in the result. Nonsense came fast in the last furlong, and in a thrilling finish barely beat Parkville, which was almost neck and neck with Setauket. The Cameron Run Hunt Pink Coat Steeplechase was abandoned for lack of entries, and an overnight steeplechase substituted. Qui Vive, the favorite, easily won the fifth race, while the sixth was regarded as an open event, every one of the six starters being played generously. Bill Curtis led practically all the way, and breezed in at the finish. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; five and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Won by Sterling, 108 pounds, (Knapp,) 7 to 1 and 2½ to 1; Blue Coat, 104, (I. Smith,) 20 to 1 and 8 to 1, second; Lackey, 106, (J. Jones,) 3½ to 1, third. Time—1:10. Chieftain, D'Arkle, Tickle, Royal Window, Peter Paul, Warning, and Bettie Bouncer also ran.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The stake schedule of the Queens County Jockey Club's Spring meeting, the first of the season in New York, has been announced in the book programme of the meeting, with the Ozone Stakes, a half mile for two-year-olds, and the Carter Handicap, seven furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward, the features of the first day of the ten days that the meeting will run.

The lease of seven horses, including Whimsical, four of the number being two-year-olds, transferring the running qualities from A. N. Biddle to T. J. Gayner, has been registered with the Jockey Club.

The Westchester Racing Association has announced two additional stakes for the Spring racing on the Belmont Park course, the Meadow Brook Hunters' Steeplechase, two miles and a half, for qualified hunters, to close May 12, and the Amateur Cup, one mile selling, for horses ridden by amateur jockeys.

A programme of five races has been announced by the Country Club of Lakewood for the Lakewood meeting, to be held on April 27, the entries to close April 14. The races are two steeplechases, two events for ponies, and one for galloways.

The steeplechase course on the Aqueduct race track, though two years old, will be used for the first time at the coming Spring meeting, when four cross-country events are distributed through the ten days of the programme. The first steeplechase ever run at Aqueduct is set for the second day of the meeting.

To Revive Burgess "Forties."

Racing in the famous old Burgess forty-foot yachts is to be revived on the lower bay. Five of the boats are owned by the clubs in the Gravesend Bay Yacht Racing Association, and four of the five have been promised as regular starters in the season's races. Efforts will be made to get out the fifth.

The revival of the class is due to the influence of Vice Commodore David E. Austen of the Brooklyn Yacht Club more than to anything else. Col. Austen, having sold the Wayward, has gone in for small sloop racing, and has purchased two small boats, one the Burgess Ondawa. He has sought and been promised the aid of the other owners in racing. These are Ernest E. Malcolm, owner of Lotowana; William C. Tower, owner of Nymph, and A. G. Henges, owner of Choctaw. William R. Beal's Ara may also be gotten out.

AUTOISTS DISCUSS RACE WITH VANDERBILT, JR.

Cup Donor Tells of Foreign Conferences at A. A. A. Meeting.

NO ACTION ON PROTESTS

Automobile Club of America Offers $2,000 to Erect Proper Signboards —More State Associations.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., discussed racing matters in connection with the next Vanderbilt Cup race yesterday afternoon with the Directors of the American Automobile Association in an informal manner at the regular monthly meting, held in the rooms of the Automobile Club of America, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. Mr. Vanderbilt told of his conferences abroad with members of the Automobile Club of France, and outlined several probable changes in the conditions that will be formally acted upon at the first meeting of the new Racing Board, which Chairman Jefferson De Mont Thompson has called for Monday afternoon. Mr. Thompson met the Directors in the conference yesterday. Mr. Vanderbilt expects that there will be a large entry, not only of American, but also of foreign, cars for the big contest next October, which will be held over practically the same Long Island course as was used last year. Mr. Vanderbilt did not state the make of the car that he will enter. It had been rumored that it would be one of the new six-cylinder Mercedes cars, but he has denied this since returning home.

Mr. Vanderbilt told the Directors that the Automobile Club of France disclaimed all responsibility in the criticisms that arose shortly after the Vanderbilt Cup race regarding the conduct of that event and the discussion over the failure of the winning car to be equipped with a differential. No official action on the alleged complaints was taken in any form.

The protest that has just been lodged with the Automobile Association of America on behalf of the Automobile Club of Great Britan against allowing the Darracq racer to hold the records made at Ormond Beach was informally discussed, but no action will be taken until Monday. S. F. Edge, who entered the Napier racer, and W. Clifford Earp, its driver, have protested the records on the ground that the French car did not have a differential, and so failed to conform with the Automobile Association of America's rules, under which the races were conducted. It is generally considered unfortunate that the Englishmen should make this complaint at this late hour, and Mr. Thompson seemed to think there was little basis for any official action.

In the absence of President John Farson, Vice President Louis R. Speare of Boston presided at the Directors' meeting. An offer was received from the Automobile Club of America offering to give $2,000 in erecting proper sign boards along the chief highways from this city to Boston, and from New York to Philadelphia. Secretary Gorham was asked to submit a plan for a uniform sign, which might be used all over the country. The Ohio State Automobile Association has just made provision to erect similar signs in Ohio. Mr. Gorham said that he thought a dark-blue enamel sign, with white letters and an arrow, would meet the requirements.

The association evidently believes that the trouble with the Pennsylvania clubs, due to the recent withdrawal of the Philadelphia and Pittsburg Clubs from the A. A. A. is not very serious. The resignation of H. Bartol Brazier, the Philadelphia representative, was received, but was not accepted, which virtually places the A. A. A. in the unusual position of having on its Directorate a man who is not a member of the association.

The Macon Automobile Club of Georgia was elected to membership, and work has already been started in connection with this club to organize a State association in Georgia. The Savannah Club will probably join the A. A. A. at the next meeting. Efforts are also being made to form State associations in Minnesota, Missouri, Michigan, Iowa, and Indiana.

Judge William H. Hotchkiss of Buffalo sent his regrets at his inability to accept the Chairmanship of the Good Roads Committee, and a new Chairman will be named within a few days. Paul Deming, it was announced, has written to about twenty clubs asking that representatives be named to serve on the Touring Committee.

Beside Mr. Speare the others present were Secretary S. S. Gorham, A. R. Pardington, Long Island Club; Dave Hennen Morris, A. C. A.; S. L. Haynes, Rochester; J. H. Edwards, Hudson, N. Y.; George A. Post and George E. Farrington, New Jersey; W. T. White, Cleveland.

New Athletic Field for Girls.

Gen. George W. Wingate, President of the Public Schools Athletic League, yesterday applied to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to extend its lines in order to reach the field at Lefferts Street and Kingston Avenue, which Controller Metz donated for the use of Brooklyn's athletic schoolgirls. The field is not now directly on a trolley line, but by means of the proposed extension of the line running through a portion of Kingston Avenue it would be brought in communication with several important routes. By taking advantage of the recent order granting a transfer on a transfer it will be possible for a schoolgirl anywhere in Brooklyn to ride to the field for a five-cent fare. Several other connecting lines will connect the field directly with the Williamsburg district, to which it is especially desirable to furnish opportunities for fresh air and exercise afforded by the field.

HOPPE ENTERS BIG TOURNEY.

Billiard Champion Agrees to Terms of International Contest.

A conference held yesterday between representatives of William F. Hoppe and the promoters of the billiard tournament for the international championship to be held in the Concert Hall of Madison Square Garden next week, resulted in an agreement under which Hoppe, billiard champion at 18-inch balk line, one shot in, waived the claims he recently advanced and decided to compete in the tournament at 18-inch balk line, two shots in, under the articles accepted by the other players entered.

Hoppe's father and John Shaughnessy, who has backed Hoppe in all his recent matches, were present in behalf of the young champion, Mr. Shaughnessy, however, agreeing with the billiard table manufacturers who are promoting the tournament that Hoppe should meet all comers on even terms and without special inducements which other players could not enjoy. The promoters of the tournament declined to make any compromise with Hoppe in his request for a bonus or his claim for a share of the gate money and traveling expenses. After a long discussion of the matter Hoppe's father, who acts as the champion's agent, yielded to Mr. Shaughnessy's wishes, and Messrs. Shaughnessy and Hoppe accepted the general terms of the tournament for Hoppe to compete for the championship against Slosson, Schaefer, Sutton, Morningstar, Cure, and Cutler.

Promptly following the agreement Hoppe made arrangements for practice games, and the practice, with Tom Gallagher playing against him, was begun last night in the champion's academy on Thirtieth Street. The other men entered in the championship tourney also were busy at practice yesterday, Sutton at the Broadway Academy, Broadway and Sixty-fifth Street; Slosson and Morningstar at Slosson's Twenty-second Street and Broadway room, and Cure at Maurice Daly's, while Schaefer is at work in Philadelphia, and Cutler is playing in Boston.

F. H. Chapman of Haverstraw, N. Y., appeared at Hoppe's room in the afternoon with $5,000 to bet upon the young player. A book was made, and the figures quoted were: Hoppe, 8 to 5 and 1 to 2; Schaefer, 5 to 2 and 4 to 5; Cure, 3 to 1 and 2 to 5; Sutton, 9 to 2 and 8 to 5; Slosson, 10 to 1 and 3 to 1; Morningstar, 25 to 1, and 8 to 1; Cutler, 25 to 1 and 8 to 1.

Hoppe made the high average of 57 1-7 in a 400-point game at 18.2 balk line yesterday afternoon in his match with Tom Gallagher in Hoppe's billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. This is the best average that has been made at 18.2 this season in New York. Hoppe's best run was 160. Gallagher played an excellent game, scoring 209 in six innings. The scores:

Hoppe—0 26 68 51 63 160 32. Total, 400. Average, 57 1-7.

Gallagher—59 4 10 7 81 20. Total, 209. Average, 21-5-6.

In the evening Hoppe needed fourteen innings to run out his 400 points, but made the excellent average of 28 8-14. He opened with a splendid run of 138. The scores:

Hoppe—138 3 7 44 3 4 14 23 1 69 38 0 57 4. Total, 400. Average, 28 8-14.

Gallagher—0 12 1 57 4 2 14 3 2 11 12 23 19 15. Total, 175. Average, 12 7-14.

Honors were divided in the practice games at 18.2 balk-line billiards between Maurice Daly and Louis Cure at Daly's Academy yesterday. In the afternoon Daly scored 300 to the Frenchman's 187, the winner averaging 12 and the loser 5. Daly's high runs were 36, 32, and 23, while Cure's best contributions were 23, 17, and 17. In the evening Cure scored 400 points to 196 for Daly, and averaged 28. His high runs were 64, 62, and 40. Daly averaged 13, and his best runs were 34, 25, and 20.

Greater New Yorks' Light Work.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 5.—Another day of rest came the way of the Greater New Yorks to-day. A game had been scheduled with Atlanta, through an error, as the locals had a previous engagement with the Augusta team of the South Atlantic League. An effort was them made to arrange a game with the Georgia "Tech," but this was also frustrated by a conflict in dates. The visitors, however, were out for several hours engaged in light practice. Griffith says he is not at all displeased with the way the time is being spent. He says his men needed rest, and that the mild weather he has found here with the light practice he has been giving his men are what was needed to put them in proper shape, and that there is no danger of their becoming overtrained and stale.

Beginning to-morrow, however, the Americans will be subjected to strenuous exercise for the remainder of their stay in Atlanta. Three games have been mapped out with Atlanta, to take place to-morrow, Saturday, and Monday. To-morrow Griffith says he will send in Clarkson and Whalen to pitch. Clarkson was beaten in Atlanta last year, and is anxious to get even with the minor league team for that defeat. Saturday Griffith will do the pitching with McGuire catching.

Giants Start for New York.

WHEELING, W. Va., April 5.—The champion New York baseball team arrived from Columbus early this morning, and half an hour later an all-day drizzle set in, which made play between the Central and world champions impossible. The Giants left early in the afternoon for New York.

Wesleyan Beats N. Y. U. at Baseball.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., April 5.—Wesleyan defeated New York University in the opening game of baseball on Andrus Field this afternoon by a score of 7 to 3. The visitors started off well and led at the close of the fourth inning, but in the fifth the Wesleyan batters secured several hits off Lillis's delivery, which netted them three runs. A feature of the game was a home run by Cunningham, a Wesleyan freshman; also the hitting of Monroe, the Wesleyan pitcher. Score by innings:

Kentucky Horses Under the Hammer.

A consignment of ten saddle horses owned by Ball Brothers of Versailles, Ky., was sold at the American Horse Exchange last evening for a total of $6,940. The star of the lot was the six-year-old seal brown gelding The Gambler, winner of the World's Championship at St. Louis, and of blues at other Western shows in the ladies' saddle class. The gelding made an excellent showing of both action and speed when put through his paces, and the bidding for a time was quite spirited. He was finally knocked down to H. G. McElwaine for $2,050.

The others brought an average price of $450. Dr. F. L. Licht bought two mares, Sunbeam and Olga; E. H. Weatherbee bought The Jap for $635, and H. S. Ladew, Quotation for $625. The combination chestnut gelding Kingston was bid in by George Watson for $975.

C. E. SANDS WILL PLAY JAY GOULD FOR TITLE

Court Tennis Champion Defeated Fearing in Straight Sets.

BOSTON MAN WAS OUTPLAYED

Fast Work Marked the Semi-Final Round of Championship Tourney —Young Gould Favorite.

The semi-final round of the court tennis championship, which was played yesterday on the court of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club, was won by Charles E. Sands of the local club, who defeated George R. Fearing of the Boston Tennis and Racquet Club in three straight sets, 6—3, 6—5, 6—4. Sands will meet Jay Gould to-morrow in the final round for the championship. Yesterday's contest brought together two experienced players, both having competed in championship tournaments for the past decade. Each player knew every point of the game, and the work of both men was brilliant. Sands's vitality and stamina were important factors in deciding the contest. He varied his pace and stroke, but at times his returns were poor and badly judged. Fearing was weak at critical periods of the game and did not play with his usual dash and vim. His placing was superior to that of Sands, but the latter offset this advantage with his speed and hard smashing. Unless Sands plays an improved game with Jay Gould to-morrow he is likely to lose his championship title as Tuxedo player as a 5 to 3 favorite.

Sands opened the service and won the first game yesterday. Fearing evened up the score on the second game, and Sands captured the third, which was a love game. Fearing was credited with the fourth after deuce and vantage had been called. Sands found no trouble in adding the fifth game, and Fearing made it three-all after another vantage game. The Boston player could get no further, Sands running out the set with the next three games.

The second set opened in a brilliant fashion, deuce and vantage being called three times in the first game before Fearing found the dedans. The second and third games went to Sands. Fearing responded with a love game, making it 2 all. The fifth game went to the New York player on service, and Fearing, for the second time in the set, blanked his opponent in the sixth game. He then took the lead after a vantage game. Sands was at his best in the two following games, and deprived Fearing of the lead. The tenth game went to Fearing, who found the grille opening, but the Boston player lost a share in the eleventh game, which gave Sands the game and set.

Early in the third set Fearing exhausted his supply of racquets, but Harry Payne Whitney came to his rescue and placed his set at the disposal of the Boston player. Fearing captured the first game, but Sands again found the grille opening in the second game and won. Each player won another game, making the score 2 all. Sands made a double fault in the fifth game after securing the advantage. He made a splendid rally and won. Fearing was successful in the sixth game after his opponent lost the ball. Hard smashes by Sands won the two following games, both of which were vantage. In the second of the two games Sands found the dedans, and Fearing lost the ball. Fearing won the ninth game by love. The tenth and deciding game went to deuce and vantage twice, Sands reaching the dedans on the winning stroke. The summary:

Semi-final Round—Charles E. Sands, New York Racquet and Tennis Club, beat George R. Fearing, Boston Tennis and Racquet Club, 6—3, 6—5, 6—4.

Referee of service—George Standing. Marker—John White.

WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Amateurs Meet in Rough Bouts for Metropolitan Titles.

Amateur wrestlers met last night in the preliminary bouts of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Union championships. The tournament, which was held in the Boys' Club, Tenth Street and Avenue A, was in seven classes, under the direction of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. As every pair came to the mat there was the fiercest sort of competition. Because of the manner in which the wrestlers went at each other there was more than the usual amount of blood flowing. Several times contestants were thrown clear out of the ring, receiving cuts from the rough edges of the improvised stage.

The first bout showed the mettle of the wrestlers, when T. Lee, of the St. George's Athletic Club, threw George Chadwick of the Boys' Club out of the ring, and took along with him John Steil, who was acting as referee. All were bruised and cut. Chadwick fell underneath, and when Lee got him back into the ring again he had little difficulty in scoring a fall by a half Nelson in 12 seconds. The summary:

Must Not Block Cornell Crews.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 5.—The Department of Public Works has come to the aid of the Cornell rowing authorities in their fight against the owners of motor boats about Ithaca. The trouble arose over the violation of the law concerning speed, whereby the progress of the Cornell crews in and about Cayuga Lake Inlet was materially blocked and sometimes brought to a standstill. Incensed by the willfulness of these acts, the rowing authorities of the University appealed to Supt. Franchot, and he immediately instructed Harbor Master Thomas to vigorously enforce the law, which limits the speed to four miles an hour. The boats up to this time had often done sixteen miles an hour.

LOZIER

QUALITY

Quality, of the kind that means high-grade in motor car construction, implies good design, good materials, good workmanship.

Good design, good materials, and good workmanship cost money.

For which the manufacturer pays.

And as the item of cost determines the matter of price, THE LOZIER MOTOR CAR, by virtue of the extraordinary care given its construction, is legitimately a high-priced car.

But no higher than it ought to be.

OPPOSES WEST SIDE PARK.

Metropolitan Association Points Out Needs of Other Sections.

The Metropolitan Parks Association is opposed to the plan to establish a new park between Riverside Drive, Claremont Avenue, 116th and 122d Streets. The proposal comes before the Board of Estimate this morning for action.

Eugene A. Philbin, President of the association, has sent a letter to the members of the Board of Estimate urging that the section in which it is proposed to establish the new park, already has much more than its share of park space, while the lower east side is still sadly deficient in parks. The letter is accompanied by comparative maps showing the population and park space in the Riverside Drive section and the population and park space in the vicinity of the Hamilton Fish Park in the lower east side.

The maps and comparative figures show that there is an acre of park space to every 430 persons in the Riverside Drive section, while in the east side section there is but one acre of park space to every 47,205 persons.

The Metropolitan Parks Association admits that it is desirable to preserve part of the field of the battle of Harlem and to give a more adequate setting to Grant's Tomb and Columbia University, and it is said that the objection would not be made if the city had unlimited funds at its disposal. The contention is that, as funds are limited, expenditures for parks should go where most needed.

RECEIVER FOR ROSEBROCK CO.

Commission Merchants with Extensive Connections Are in Difficulties.

Fred E. Rosebrock & Co., (corporation,) butter and eggs commission merchants at 325 and 327 Greenwich Street, one of the largest concerns in the trade, with extensive Western connections, is in financial difficulties, with liabilities $411,000 and assets $315,000. A petition in bankruptcy was filed against the corporation yesterday by Steele & Otis, attorneys for the following creditors: F. C. Barger & Co., $3,277; Droste & Snyder, $510; Brown & Rittenhouse, $2,094.

It was alleged that the corporation is insolvent, and on April 4 admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts and willingness to be adjudged bankrupt. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed Fred P. Bellamy receiver of the assets and fixed his bond at $100,000.

It was stated that the assets of $315,000 consist of a stable in Brooklyn, $16,500; merchandise, fixtures, horses and wagons, $11,000; accounts, mortgage on real estate, and some cash, $158,500; bills receivable, $65,000, from various Western corporations in which Fred E. Rosebrock & Co. own stock, to wit: J. P. Baden Produce Company, Winfield, Kan.; J. D. Bickel Produce Company, MacGregor and Mason City, Iowa, and Empire Produce Company, Port Huron, Mich.; accounts receivable, $75,000, with the above concerns and with the Sioux Falls Produce Company of Sioux Falls, South Dakota. Included in the assets is merchandise on hand and in storage, $48,000, against which there are warehouse loans of $36,000.

The business was started in Brooklyn by Fred E. Rosebrock in 1880 and in New York in 1896, and he became President of the corporation when it was incorporated in January, 1903, with a capital stock of $750,000. It succeeded the firm of Fred E. Rosebrock & Co. Henry L. Dreyer, the Vice President, died on Sept. 7, 1905. A report of the corporation's financial condition on July 1, 1905, showed assets $977,289, of which $250,000 was good-will, and liabilities $189,555. The bankruptcy petition, it is said, was precipitated by the report that a suit had been brought at Winfield, Kan., against the corporation and against Mr. Rosebrock for $300,000 by the minority stockholders of the J. P. Baden Produce Company of Winfield, Kan., in which Fred E. Rosebrock & Co. own a controlling interest.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Duty on Cherries in Spirits Reduced—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Somerville, the Board of United States General Appraisers sustained yesterday a claim filed by La Manna, Azema & Farnan and others of New York, regarding the classification of cherries in maraschino. Collector Stranahan returned the merchandise for duty under the paragraph in the tariff law for fruits preserved in syrup, whereas the importers claimed that the articles were preserved in spirits and were, therefore, dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem as unenumerated manufactured articles.

General Appraiser Fischer wrote a decision for the board denying the contention of Hermann Boker & Co. of New York for lower duty on so-called nickel anodes. The Collector assessed duty at the rate of 45 per cent. under the provision in the law for manufactures of nickel. The importers maintained that the assessment should have been at the rate of 6 per cent. per pound as "nickel in bars or sheets."

Other protests overruled were filed by the W. N. Proctor Company, Boston; W. W. Atchison, and the Michigan Fish Company, Port Huron, Mich.

The board sustained claims filed by George Borgfeldt & Co. and the W. H. S. Lloyd Company, New York.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

FRANK N. MOCKRIDGE.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has granted a discharge from bankruptcy to Frank N. Mockridge of 174 Bronx Park Avenue, who filed a petition on April 25, 1904, with liabilities $1,964 and nominal assets $971.

AMERICAN GENEALOGICAL BUREAU.—Judge Newburger of the Supreme Court has appointed Jerome Jackson receiver for the American Genealogical Bureau, formerly at 500 Fifth Avenue, on the application of Walter J. Solomon, who recovered a judgment for $1,729 on March 9 for rent.

DUPLEX RADIATOR COMPANY.—A meeting of creditors of the Duplex Radiator Company of 229 Broadway and Newton, N. J., was held yesterday before William H. Willis, referee in bankruptcy, at 80 Wall Street, and Charles F. Linde was elected Trustee. The liabilities are $19,146 and assets $3,050.

ABRAHAM H. SMITH.—A meeting of creditors of Abraham H. Smith, shirtwaist manufacturer at 15 Waverley Place, was held yesterday at the office of Seaman Miller, referee in bankruptcy, at 346 Broadway, and Robert G. Perry was elected Trustee, with a bond of $6,000. The schedules showed liabilities $11,600, but the value of the assets was not given.

BALAMUTH BROTHERS.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Nathan and Michael Balamuth, who composed the firm of Balamuth Brothers, jobbers in peddlers' supplies at 78 Clinton Street, by these creditors: Endsweig, Schechter & Brand, $345; M. Brand & Co., $182, and Isidor Breidbart, $105. It was alleged that they are insolvent, have transferred merchandise and receivables valued at $2,000, and removed a large part of their property. They began business in 1899.

EMANUEL MIHLHEISER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Emanuel Mihlheiser, shirtwaist manufacturer at 552 West Broadway, who used the styles of the Frances Waist Company, by these creditors: Muser Brothers, $253; David Dairs, $25, and P. K. Wilson & Son, $760. It was alleged that he is insolvent and has made preferential payments. The place has been closed for several days past, and creditors, it is stated, have been unable to see him. He began this business in September, 1902, having previously been a salesman in a retail dry goods store for ten years. It was said that he owned a four-story flat at 319 East Seventy-ninth Street, valued at $25,000, mortgaged for $17,000, but it was learned yesterday that he disposed of it in July, 1905. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed a receiver of the assets, with a bond of $750. It was stated that the assets consist of stock and fixtures, $1,200, and need care to prevent them being destroyed by dirt, dust, and moths.

Stocks Lower; Call Money Rates, 8½@30 Per Cent.

Foreign Exchange Market Weakens on English Bank Rate Reduction.

Yesterday's stock market was, in large measure, a repetition of that of Wednesday; in the fore part of the session prices were everywhere firm, with substantial advances in such issues as Reading, Union Pacific, and Amalgamated Copper, and this movement was undisturbed by money rates so long as these were confined between 10 and 15 per cent., their only effect upon the market being found in the curtailment of trading, which waned steadily as money advanced. As on Wednesday, the highest money rates of the day were made in the final hour, the announcement of a loan of $1,000,000 at 30 per cent. serving as a signal for recessions throughout the list of active stocks. The morning gains in the most prominent shares in the trading were replaced by actual losses, while declines were general throughout the list, although in most instances they were confined to fractions. Much of the resistance offered by prices throughout the day to the continuation of high money rates was due, doubtless, to the action of the Bank of England, which reduced its discount rate from 4 to 3½ per cent., a step followed by so sharp a fall in the foreign exchange market that demand sterling at the close of the day rested, to all practical purposes, upon a normal gold import basis. The market was without news from the conference between the anthracite operators and the miners' representatives, the announcement that the miners had offered to submit all their claims to arbitration, and that this proposition had been taken under consideration by the operators for final decision at another meeting on Monday next, coming after the close of business.

Further transfers of money to San Francisco and New Orleans yesterday, amounting in all to $800,000, added materially to the burdens which the money market just at the moment is bearing. These transfers were made through the Sub-Treasury, which had already gained almost $4,000,000 from the banks since Friday, compared with a gain of only $2,300,000 in the same period a week ago. Increasing the tension yesterday were further demands upon this centre for funds on the part of Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, these demands resulting in the calling of loans made upon the moneys now withdrawn from this market. To increase the confusion in the situation there are falling due just now many three months' and four months' loans, the borrowers preferring to pay what they consider temporarily higher rates for day-to-day money in the expectation that within a reasonable time renewals for the longer periods can be made upon much more favorable terms. Important financial transactions unsettling the money market for the moment are also under way, the borrowing of $2,500,000 by the city yesterday constituting one such transaction. While these are matters whose influence is by no means continuing, they work with the other factors enumerated in displacing funds to such an extent that rates are affected. The day's decline in exchange and the probable continued activity in money make favorable the prospects for relief to the situation here through imports of gold, but such additions as will be made to reserves through this medium will come haltingly since European bankers are reluctant to part with gold at this time. The reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate makes it altogether likely, of course, that gold engagements will be made in the London market, and the first gold due to arrive in that market is some $3,500,000 on Monday.

CALL MONEY REACHES 30; TALK OF MANIPULATION

A Natural Though Unusual Demand Exists, However.

THE CITY A HEAVY BORROWER

Two Temporary Loans of $2,500,000 Obtained to Meet Maturing Revenue Bonds—Best Plan, Metz Says.

Call money lent yesterday at 30 per cent., the highest rate quoted for call money in the first week of April in any year since 1873. The financial community has been very much surprised by the course of the money market this week. Each successive day has brought an advance in the call money rate until all records for this season for the past thirty years were broken. Large borrowings by New York City and heavy transfers of cash to the interior have contributed to the abnormally high call money rate, but these facts have not been regarded by many as altogether sufficient to explain yesterday's rate of 30 per cent.

Suggestions were heard, even in conservative banking circles, that there were evidences of the money market being manipulated purposely, with a view, possibly, to affecting the stock market. The more general view, however, was that the unusually heavy demands for funds which have come this year just at the beginning of April, when large sums were temporarily tied up as a result of the distribution of interest and dividends, are the real cause of the present stringency.

Among the large demands for funds which have affected the money market this week were two temporary loans of $2,500,000 each made to the City of New York. On Monday the city borrowed $2,500,000 from the National City Bank for one week at 5 per cent., and another loan of the same amount was arranged with the City Bank yesterday on similar terms.

Controller Metz explained yesterday that he had borrowed this money in order to meet maturing revenue bonds amounting to $5,300,000. Rather than renew these bonds in the present condition of the money market, he considered it preferable to make a temporary loan, in the hope that next week more favorable renewal terms could be obtained by the city. If need be, Controller Metz said, he will renew the temporary loan for another week if favorable terms cannot be had when the present loans fall due, on Monday and Thursday next. Controller Metz said that he could have renewed the bonds at 4⅝ per cent. interest, but that he did not care to pay as high as that, inasmuch as the maximum rate which he has paid so far on city revenue bonds has been 4½ per cent.

The minimum has been 3⅞ per cent., and the average on all the city's borrowings since the beginning of the year has been 4¼ per cent. Controller Metz said that he had borrowed only the amount actually necessary, and that, all told, the city had sold revenue bonds to the amount of only $17,000,000 in the first three months of the year, compared with about $32,000,000 of similar bonds sold in the corresponding period in 1905. Controller Metz said that, so far as he knew, the city's borrowing had not caused any disturbance in the money market, and that, in fact, there was nothing at all unusual about the transaction.

"Perhaps the only unusual thing about this week's borrowings," Controller Metz added, "is that an effort is being made to get the money needed by the city as cheaply as possible."

Further transfers were made yesterday through the Sub-Treasury to the South and West. Half a million was sent to San Francisco and $300,000 to New Orleans.

The reduction in the Bank of England's rate to 3½ per cent., announced yesterday, and the high rate for call money here, resulted in a sharp break in foreign exchange rates. Demand sterling broke 40 points, and closed at 4.8775, the low price of the day. Rumors were current of further engagements of gold for import to this country, but these reports were apparently premature, if not altogether unfounded. The price of gold bars advanced in London yesterday, and, moreover, there were said to be no fresh arrivals of gold at that centre. The present movement in exchange and the continuance of high money here are, however, regarded as almost certain to lead to further takings of gold.

U. S. RUBBER EARNINGS.

Dividends Declared on First and Second Preferred Stocks.

At yesterday's meeting of the Board of Directors of the United States Rubber Company it was said that the net earnings for the year, partly including March, might be put at approximately $3,851,000. Last year's figures were $3,761,922. The estimated earnings do not include any of the earnings of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company, recently taken over by the United States Rubber Company, except dividends on the preferred stock of the former company amounting to $276,859.

The meeting declared a dividend of 2 per cent. on the first preferred stock for the quarter ended March 31, and one for the same period of 1½ per cent. on the second preferred stock. The earnings of the year were sufficient to pay a dividend on the common stock, but it was decided to defer this payment until the company should have received the benefit of the earnings of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company and other newly acquired properties.

Sale of Kansas City Southern Notes.

It was said yesterday that the subscriptions by the stockholders of the Kansas City Southern for the notes authorized by the stockholders and offered to them for subscription are sufficiently large to make it unnecessary for the present to call upon the underwriting syndicate for any payments on account of the underwriting. Bankers interested in the financing of the notes said that it might not be necessary to call at all on the members of the syndicate.

BERLIN, April 5.—At a meeting to-day representatives of the principal Prussian banks agreed to issue a loan of 300,000,000 marks ($75,000,000) in Prussian 3½ per cent. consols and a new Imperial 3½ per cent. loan of 260,000,000 marks ($65,000,000.)

The loans, it is understood, will be issued to the subscribing banks at 99.40 and will be open to public subscription on April 11 at 100.10.

STEELE, GENERAL COUNSEL.

Baltimore Lawyer Now Associated with the Guggenheim Enterprises.

John N. Steele, until recently senior member of the law firm of Steele & Semmes of Baltimore, has associated himself as general counsel with the various smelting and mining interests in which Daniel Guggenheim and the firm of M. Guggenheim's Sons are dominant factors. Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett will continue as consulting counsel for the American Smelting and Refining Company and its subsidiary companies, and Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall will remain in a similar capacity with M. Guggenheim's Sons, the Guggenheim Exploration, and their various allied interests.

The smelting and mining business now under the control of Daniel Guggenheim, as President of the above companies, has become so widely extended and of such great importance that it was deemed necessary to have the exclusive assistance and advice of most competent legal counsel, particularly versed in corporation law.

Mr. Steele is the second son of the late I. Nevett Steele, long the leader of the Baltimore bar, and has himself been considred for years one of the leading lawyers of Baltimore, especially among those who have devoted themselves to the study and practice of corporation law. While severing his long connection with the bar of Baltimore and with his native city, Mr. Steele is not among strangers in New York, as two of his brothers, Charles Steele, a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and the Rev. J. Nevett Steele, vicar of Old Trinity Church, are both widely known.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 5.—Money was in increased supply in the market to-day, owing to the distribution of Government dividends and the payment of $10,000,000 of Treasury bills. Discounts were weaker.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were steadier with the reduction of the Bank of England's rate of discount, though business did not increase materially, the various loans pending causing hesitancy. Consols were supported, and home rails occasionally had a better tone.

Americans opened weak and improved somewhat on the reduction of the Bank rate. Union Pacific was in request, and Erie and Ontario & Western became harder. But prices weakened later, then recovered sharply, and closed firm.

Grand Trunk was flat on the unsatisfactory report of the Board of Directors at to-day's meeting of the shareholders.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅝ ex interest.

Bullion amounting to £45,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £151,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

Bar silver quiet at 29⅝d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.45; Lisbon, 4.

QUARTER BROKE ALL RECORDS

Bank Clearings Ended March 31 Aggregated $41,535,590,466.

Bank clearings for the quarter ended last Saturday, March 31, have broken all records for this period or any other quarter on record. The clearings for ninety-four cities aggregate $41,535,590,466, according to Bradstreet's figures, an increase of 17.8 per cent. over those of 1905 for the same quarter, and of 63 per cent. over 1904. The clearings in the same group of cities for the month of March were $512,911,071,121, an increase of 4.3 per cent. over February, and of four-tenths of 1 per cent. over March, 1905.

New York City figures for March were $8,377,234,189, an increase over February of six-tenths of 1 per cent., but a decrease of 3.9 per cent. from March a year ago. This loss Bradstreet's attributes to lessened speculation, particularly in the stock market, for, to offset the decline in clearings in New York in March, the other ninety-three cities show a gain of 11.7 over February, and of 10 per cent. over March, 1905. March is the eighteenth consecutive month in which clearances have run into tens of billions.

M., K. & T. DIVIDEND.

Its Declaration in Accord with Policy Announced by the Directors.

The Directors of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway at a meeting held yesterday at Parsons, Kan., following the annual meeting of the stockholders, declared an additional semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent. on the company's preferred stock. The dividend is payable May 10. This action was foreshadowed by recent statements in regard to the dividend policy of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Directors.

It has for some time been the accepted policy of the management that as soon as provision has been made for the maturing equipment trust obligations of the road and funds have been provided for necessary improvements, part of the company's earnings should be distributed to the company's preferred stockholders. By the recent sale of $10,000,000 of bonds the Missouri, Kansas & Texas was provided with the necessary funds for special capital outlays, and the way was thus paved for the dividend declared yesterday.

TO PROTECT BONDHOLDERS.

Jurisdiction of Hamilton & Dayton Receiver May Be Extended.

Counsel for the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Noteholders' Protective Committee, it was learned yesterday, will probably apply soon to the United States courts in Ohio for an extension of the jurisdiction of Judson Harmon, receiver of the road, so that he may represent the interests of the bondholders as well as of the creditors and stockholders, at whose instance he was appointed.

The question of applying for a co-receiver in the interest of the noteholders, it was said yesterday, had been considered by the counsel for the noteholders. It was considered best, however, for the time being to take no such action. The present plan adopted as an alternative is to ask the court to increase the jurisdiction of Judson Harmon so that he will have the same powers as would another receiver appointed at the special request of the bondholders.

It was acknowledged that the counsel of the Noteholders' Protective Committee were not inclined to raise the question of a joint receiver so long as they thought that the interest of the noteholders would be fully protected through the present receiver. Those in a position to speak authoritatively for the committee said yesterday that they were as fully convinced as ever of the strong position of the noteholders and that they had not the slightest doubt that their claims against the property would be met in full. It is, in fact, generally regarded in Wall Street as essential to the Morgan interests to protect the noteholders, inasmuch as it is considered impossible in any other way to guard the equity in the property represented by the common stock held by the Morgan syndicate.

FRICK OUT OF ROCK ISLAND.

Said to Have Left Directorate Because of His Harriman Connections.

H. C. Frick resigned yesterday as a Director of the Rock Island Railroad Company, and his resignation was formally accepted at a meeting of the Board of Directors. At the offices of the Rock Island Company no information could be obtained as to the reasons which led to Mr. Frick's retirement from the company.

Bankers who are in a position to speak with authority on Rock Island affairs said they knew of no special significance to be attached to Mr. Frick's retirement, and suggested that it was probably due to the fact that he was a very busy man and unable to give to Rock Island affairs as much attention as they require.

Wall Street took it for granted that Mr. Frick's resignation indicated that he had considerably reduced his holdings of Rock Island securities, and that, moreover, he was prompted in the matter by his own close relations with Mr. Harriman in Union Pacific affairs. The withdrawal of Mr. Frick from the Rock Island Company was regarded as a natural development following the previous withdrawals from the Southern Pacific of interests closely identified with the Rock Island Company.

Coffee Exchange Fees Raised.

The Board of Managers of the Coffee Exchange have approved the plan formulated a few weeks ago of raising the initiation fee from $5,000 to $10,000. The law at present makes the initiation fee $5,000 "until the membership shall have reached 500." With the increased fee the membership will be limited to 550. Actually, the number of members at present is 328, and seats sell for between $3,000 and $4,000.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Died: Community of Interest—a romantic idea descended from the Northern Pacific Panic—after a lingering illness resulting from neglect, exposure in Pine Street, and an insufficient knowledge of human nature. Age, about 3½ years. Exact time of death unknown. Corpse found at the corner of Wall and Broad Streets, where deceased evidently had fallen from exhaustion. Obsequies deferred, owing to inability of Messrs. Harriman, Gould, Morgan, Hill, et al. to attend immediately. Please omit flowers. Nobody feels bereaved.

On Wednesday it was announced that the Speyer interests had retired from the Southern Pacific Directorate. Yesterday Mr. H. C. Frick's retirement from the Rock Island Directorate was announced. It is evidently not as pleasant as it used to be for eminent capitalists to sit on each other's boards.

Some large time loans made in the first week of January at about 7 per cent. have been maturing this week, and the borrowers, instead of renewing on time, chose in many instances to depend upon call money, thus increasing the demand for that commodity at a time when it is not any too accessible. This has contributed somewhat to the stringency of the last few days.

In view of the extraordinary spectacle of 30 per cent. call money in the first week of April it would have required an effort of bearish imagination to call yesterday's stock market weak. Only a few active stocks declined as much as 1 per cent. The market's resistance to the strain of high money is all the more remarkable after such an advance as has occurred in prices in the last ten days. Much the greater part of this advance has been retained so far, notwithstanding rates for money which are almost prohibitive of commission house speculation. The volume of transactions has fallen off steadily since Tuesday as prices have receded. Wednesday's trading was smaller in volume than Tuesday's, and yesterday's transactions fell about 200,000 shares under those of Wednesday. There has been a good market for stocks on moderate recessions. The people who buy stocks in a tight money market presumably have superior facilities for carrying them, and it may be inferred also that they have large confidence in the market. After an advance of more than 10 points in Union Pacific from the recent low point, extensive profit taking from professional sources together with the strain of a 30 per cent. rate for call money have depressed it less than 2 points. It closed yesterday at 157⅝, down 1⅝ per cent. from Tuesday's high, showing a decline for the day of ⅞ per cent. This is no more of a recession than would normally be looked for after a rise of 10 points. It is less than normal. Amalgamated Copper, to cite another equally prominent example, is off less than 3 points from the top of a 13-point recovery.

So far, this week's flurries in money, although much more acute than anybody expected, have served only to check the market; they have not forced any serious setback in prices. The market, as a whole, has presented a stubborn appearance.

The highest rates for call money, except in a few unimportant cases, have been paid by borrowers offering undesirable collateral.

It is understood that several very prominent speculators who hived profits freely on Monday and Tuesday were surprised at the readiness with which stocks were taken off their hands at the advanced prices. They have since been surprised at the market's exhibition of strength under the weight of their stocks and the strain of high call money. Sometimes, however, it takes the market two or three days to show the effects of heavy selling. It will seem to take stocks greedily on top of a big bulge in prices, remain strong for another day, or perhaps for two days, and then betray symptoms of acute indigestion. It could be likened to a man who dines well but unwisely. The dinner sets well for a few hours and the man believes he is going to escape the consequences of his indiscretion, but on the day following he is disillusioned. So it is with the stock market. It may be apparent that people who bought stocks at lower prices are selling very freely, but if their selling makes no immediate impression others marvel at the market's capacity for taking stocks and are reassured. Two or three days later, when the market begins to show that the absorption of those stocks has temporarily overtaxed its digestion, everybody wants to know why prices are running off and demands specific explanations.

About half the commission houses in Wall Street are either too conservative to advise their clients to buy or are bearish. This applies not only to the local commission houses but to the large wire houses as well. Some of the latter are outspoken in their hostility to the market and keep insisting that prices ought not to advance in the face of tight money. But with easier money market conditions these same houses would probably be bullish on a higher level of prices. In December, when interest rates were so high as to be prohibitive of general speculation, commission houses were almost solidly opposed to the idea of buying stocks under such abnormal conditions, but prices continued to advance, and in January, when money was easy, commission houses were almost unanimously bullish at the extreme top. Brokers will not encourage clients to buy stocks when money is tight, but when there is more than enough money to go around they will let their people load up. It is then that the big buyers during the period of tight money are willing to sell. The broker is not to blame for this. It is simply a condition which works to the disadvantage of the small speculative buyer. If commission houses had been participating heavily in the speculation of the last fortnight, the market would not be capable of showing such resistance as it has to 30 per cent. call money.

There has been considerable breadth to the market this week. The list of stocks traded in, even yesterday, was larger than might reasonably be looked for in a market beset with money difficulties and influenced very largely by professional operations.

A speculative community is willing at all times to pay high rates for the use of money if profits are large enough to offset the cost of carrying stocks. Some of the old-time traders and brokers will recall bull movements that were successfully financed with call money costing "one-eighth and interest" or "one-quarter and interest," which was the way call money used to be quoted in former days. Lenders were held by law to a 6 per cent. maximum rate of interest, so that in times of stringency they charged the maximum rate and added a commission of one-eighth or one-quarter. A quotation on call money of "one-quarter and interest" would be the equivalent of about 97 per cent. as it is now quoted; that is, at the rate of 97 per cent. a year. And bull markets have been carried on with call money ruling day after day at that rate. Speculators could afford to pay it because prices were kept rising, and, although interest charges cut heavily into their profits, the profits were large enough to stand it.

Referring recently to the effect of public clamor for restrictive legislation, &c., upon investment sentiment, Robert Goodbody said: "There is now great apprehension as to the character of the political spirit that is abroad here. The spirit is largely due to evidences of mere selfishness in high places. Curiously, while this is true here, there is an even stronger apprehension as to popular movements in Europe, leading some investors there to think of buying here. We hold that the safeguards given here by the Constitution are far more effective than anything existing abroad." This is a view of the matter that has not been widely considered.

Pennsylvania has been showing improvement in the market. There is still some hope of an active bull campaign in the Pennsylvania group of securities, which are selling below the prevailing standards of value. It is understood that a new pool has been formed in Baltimore & Ohio. Norfolk & Western has been advancing steadily for several weeks. Pennsylvania itself has long been a laggard.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—Dull, indeed, would have been the local market to-day had it not been for the arbitrage issues, in several of which, notably Pennsylvania Railroad, Reading, United States Steel, and Brooklyn Rapid Transit, quite an active business was transacted. Dealings in the home stocks lacked snap, but prices were fairly well maintained.

American Railways was up ½; so was General Asphalt preferred, Keystone Telephone ¾, while Lehigh Valley at one time advanced ⅛, but later receded a full point, closing with a net loss of ½. Its late weakness followed high money quotations in New York. Philadelphia Rapid Transit was again under pressure, but there was a fair absorption of the stock. The remainder of the list was practically unchanged.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Further Advances in Pig and Probable Increase in Steel Orders.

A noticeable stiffening of the pig iron market is attributed in the trade to the coal strike situation. Northern grades of foundry iron have advanced in the Eastern market from 25 cents to 50 cents per ton. April opens in the steel trade with large numbers of inquiries, which lead trade authorities to predict further increases this month in the unfilled business on the books of the steel companies. This period is looked on in the trade as a certain index of the final showing for the year. If new orders continue plentiful, it is regarded as certain that the pressure of work at the mills will continue through the year.

Steel rail orders for the week are reported at 40,000 tons, and orders for 22,000 tons of bridge material are pending.

Advices from Niles, Ohio, where the Empire Iron and Steel Company's plant is, state that the plant has been purchased by Jonathan Warner of Chicago and William Ward and W. T. Hardesty of Niles, who will continue to operate the mills.

Sales of 15,000 bales of spot cotton at 8 points advance and Egyptian and Continental buying of Winter options in Liverpool for the account of spinners who are now said to be sold up to next March on mill products opened the local cotton market yesterday with a bulge of 7 to 8 points on the old crop deliveries and 5 to 6 on the new. May started at 11.20 bid and ran up to 11.24, July at 11.16 to 11.18, October 10.55 to 10.57, and December 10.56 to 10.59. The South bought cotton in New Orleans, and New Orleans bought in the New York market against this cotton sold, while short interests bought some July here. Report had it that the bull leaders here sold May heavily on the advance.

Later the National Spinners' Association of Liverpool reported spinners' stocks there at 1,532,000 bales, against 935,000 bales last year. This put a damper on bull ardor, and the market relapsed into its dormant state. Prices eased off 8 to 11 points, May reacting to the previous close, 11.13, July to 11.11, October to 10.52, and December to 10.54. There was some recovery toward the close, principally on room trading. At the finish the market stood about five points above the previous close, May being 11.17, July 11.13, October 10.54, and December 10.56.

Bears thought that even the high figure at which the foreign supplies were placed was an underestimate. They maintain that spinners are not likely to let the trade know that they are well provided with raw material, for they want to sell their goods on the basis of present prices. One authority said yesterday that the foreign mills were supplied up to October; that a large part of this cotton they had on hand, while some was stored in Liverpool, and some was held in the South subject to their order, and that all this was actual cotton owned by the spinners.

Bulls insisted that much of this stock was on paper, and either the spinners or the spot dealers from whom they secured their cotton were protected by futures bought against these spot engagements, but that a large part of this cotton had yet to be secured for delivery.

Spots were quoted in Liverpool yesterday at 6.11d., against 4.32d. last year. Futures opened steady, 5 points up on the near months, and 4 higher on distant options. At the close far months were 7 points above the previous close, and the near 9 points—May-June, 5.96; July-August, 5.93; August-September, 5.92; October-November, 5.72, and December-January, 5.71.

The local spot market advanced 5 points, to 11.70, for middling, against 8.05 last year. The sales aggregated 438 bales.

Port receipts were 15,912 bales, against 13,258 bales last week and 34,676 bales last year. Exports were 40,914 bales. Receipts since Sept. 1 total 6,788,488 bales, against 7,945,247 bales last year. Exports, 5,199,778 bales, against 6,437,990 bales last year. Interior receipts at the thirteen principal towns were 6,920 bales, against 5,597 bales last week and 14,205 bales last year. Shipments were 8,521 bales, against 8,561 bales last week and 17,667 bales last year. Estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 3,000 to 3,500 bales, against 2,895 bales last week and 7,108 bales last year; Galveston, 6,000 to 7,000 bales, against 2,998 bales last week and 5,339 bales last year. New Orleans, 3,000 to 3,500 bales, against 3,091 bales last week and 8,752 bales last year.

Cotton Opinions.

E. F. HUTTON & CO.—We still believe cotton a purchase on every soft spot.

MARSHALL, SPADER & CO.—We expect the market to rule steady and perhaps higher in the late week trading. We continue to regard the Fall and early Winter months as favorable to purchases.

DICK BROTHERS & CO.—The position of the shorts is getting more and more uncomfortable. Instead of seeing the market ease off before the Easter holidays, we look for an advance.

T. A. McINTYRE & CO.—We would advise adhering to merely a traders' position on the market for the present.

HUBBARD BROTHERS—At the moment the market appears to be without tendency in either direction, though the traders are disposed to the bull side.

BAILY & MONTGOMERY—We regard the crop situation on the whole as satisfactory, but seasonable weather will be required from now on.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

December	10.56	10.59-10.53	10.56	10.51

Market closed quiet and steady. Estimated sales, 350,000 bales. New Orleans closed 7 up for May, at 11.26, and 7 higher for July, at 11.36. October and December were 4 points higher, at 10.47 and 10.48, respectively. The New Orleans Exchange will close over the Easter holidays.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market declined ⅛c at the opening under disappointing cables, but promptly rallied about ⅜c on covering on reports of a good demand for the cash property. The price is 5@15c under last year's level at this time, and the trade is naturally responsive to any bullish influence, however small it may be. Later there was such a combination of features against the market that renewed selling set in and prices rapidly declined about 1c. The market was finally easy, at a net loss of ⅜@½c. The cash market closed easy, with No. 2 red in New York quoted at 87½c elevator and 89½c free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 88½c.

CORN.—After opening steady at an advance of ⅛c, the market for corn ruled generally more active on bad weather reports, and closed firm at a net rise of ⅛c—the best of the day. Exporters took 16,000 bushels only, as holders were too arbitrary in their views for the current demand. The cash market was firm, with No. 2 corn in New York quoted at 55½c elevator, and 53c free on board afloat; No. 2 white and No. 2 yellow, 54c free on board afloat.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 5.—Rather free selling of Swift's stock followed the news of the death of E. C. Swift at Boston. Mr. Swift was Chairman of the Board of Directors of the company, and a few traders may have assumed that some of his holdings would come upon the market. The stock closed yesterday at 107⅝ and sold down to 106⅝ before noon to-day.

There was some small pressure on Union Traction shares again, the common selling down to 6¼ here and the preferred losing more than a point in New York. Further activity was seen in American Strawboard, at 20. Boxboard preferred went to 13. Subway was firm. Rights came off Edison stock to-day and were sold at 7. Quaker Oats went at 130@131.

A few shorts covered in Diamond Match, and the price was firm around 135. President Barber plans to have enough favorable publicity about the trading position of the company said in the next fortnight to obscure the issue at the special meeting, when the stockholders will be asked to vote a stock increase of $1,000,000. It is almost a foregone conclusion, however, that objections will be offered to the cut-and-dried plans laid out for the shareholders.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Sluggish Trading on the Curb, with Coppers Firm.

Rights of Guggenheim Exploration Stockholders to Nevada Consolidated Stock Sell Up to 5¾.

Trading in yesterday's curb market was of small volume, and prices moved irregularly within narrow limits. Industrials suffered more than any other class of securities, and what little activity there was in this group resulted in minor losses. Mining shares were sluggish, with some little activity in the wildcat stocks. Most of the recognized copper shares remained firm under the light trading, though there were some small recessions. The rights accruing to stockholders of the Guggenheim Exploration Company to subscribe at 14 to the stock of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company, recently acquired by the exploration company, were traded in for the first time, and 12,000 sold between 4¼ and 5¾.

OUR VAST FOREIGN TRADE

Exports Increased $190,000,000 and Imports $71,000,000 in 8 Months.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—According to a bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor the exports from the United States for the first eight months of the fiscal year, 1906, are $190,000,000 in value in excess of those of the corresponding months of 1905. The imports for the eight months are $71,000,000 greater than for the corresponding period of 1905. The growth in exports of manufactures has been $45,000,000, and in agricultural products $133,000,000 over the same period last year.

The increase in exports of manufactures occurs chiefly in cotton goods, iron and steel manufactures, cars and carriages, manufactures of wood, mineral oils, and leather. The increase in exports of agricultural products occurs chiefly in wheat, wheat flour, corn, oats, and provisions. On the import side all groups show an increase except articles of food, which in the eight months ended with February, 1906, amounted to but $171,000,000, against $184,000,000 for the same time last year. Coffee shows a fall of nearly $12,000,000, and sugar $5,000,000. The most remarkable increase in the imports, says the bulletin, occurs in manufacturers' materials, which show a total gain of over $40,000,000 for the eight months of 1906, as compared with the same period of 1905.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 5.—The local money market is practically unchanged.

Call loans, 6@6½ per cent. Time loans, collateral, 5 per cent. Time loans, mercantile paper, 5¼@6¼ per cent. Clearing House loans, 6 per cent. New York funds, 10c. discount. Clearings, $27,862,230. Balances, $1,823,280. Sub-Treasury debit, $39,048.

United Copper was again the feature in the early trading in the local market, advancing to 69⅞. Amalgamated opened off fractionally, but later more than regained the initial loss. Toward noon Trinity again became exceedingly active and gained over a point on commission house buying, over 14,000 shares changing hands. Balance of copper shares show comparatively small price changes. In the late trading there was some reaction in sympathy with the weakness in New York and the closing was irregular.

Gentlemen:—We accept your order for 500 of our beautiful Walters Belford Pianos, to be delivered to you in time for your Easter sale.

These pianos are the finest that skilled labor can build. The design of the cases is original, beautiful and attractive. We have put our expert knowledge into every detail of these Walters Belford Pianos. They are creations in piano construction and

REAL ESTATE

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF THE
and of how many happy and independent HOME OWNERS it has made throughout the UNITED KINGDOM?

We are operating the same safe and conservative system here in OUR COUNTRY, and it has proven very successful, because the money you have paid heretofore in rent each month through our system is a payment towards a HOME, and you pay no more than you now pay in rent, and in a few years you will have YOUR HOME all paid for.

You have to pay only $5.00 down on each thousand you wish to invest in a home; $2.50 per month on each thousand (for three months), receiving credit for $2.00 of the $2.50. After the home has been purchased for you, you then pay us $7.00 per month per thousand, receiving credit for $5.00 of the $7.00 each month on the principal.

SUITOR'S DEVOTION LANDS HIM IN COURT

Gardner Was So Insistent That He Had to be Arrested.

BUT MRS. HULL RELENTED

Wouldn't Have Him Sent to Any Place Worse Than Providence—Court Lets Him Go.

Greater love have few men than Louis Gardner of Boston, President of the Nantasket Steamboat Company and Treasurer of the National Gas Company of that city. His affections survived a long night beneath the slighting lady's casement, braved the peril of her frown for the faint chance of her smile, and suffered arrest unheeding, and when he was arraigned in court he was still wrapped in the glamour. He was discharged oblivious to peril o'erpassed, and when last observed was still apparently enamored.

She is Mrs. Mabel M. Hull of Providence, and she recently obtained in Rhode Island a divorce from her husband, who was a friend of Gardner. In Yorkville Court, before Magistrate Pool, she stated that she came from Providence three weeks ago to visit some friends at 146 East Forty-sixth Street. She declared that she had come here to avoid the uninvited attentions of Louis Gardner, but that he had followed her, taking rooms at the Hotel Manhattan. On Wednesday night, she said, he called upon her at 146 East Forty-sixth Street, but she declined to see him. He waited, Mrs. Hull believed, in the street until daylight, at intervals tapping and asking for admittance.

Finally, at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, he became so persistent in his demands to be allowed to enter that the door was opened. Mrs. Hull declared that he threatened to shoot her if she did not listen to his suit.

Policeman Barnes of the East Fifty-first Street Station arrested him at the request of Mrs. Hull. He was taken to the police station, where he wept bitterly. He drew from his pocket a photograph, and, pressing it to his lips, moaned:

"Oh, Mabel, Mabel! How could you?"

In Yorkville Court, Magistrate Pool looked over the top of his glasses and coughed.

"Very sad. Very sad, indeed," he murmured.

"Didn't you point a pistol at her?" asked the clerk, who was drawing up the papers.

"I!" gasped Gardner. "Point a pistol at Mabel—Ma—"

"You did!" interrupted Mrs. Hull. "You know you did."

The prisoner hung his head.

"I only want you to send him back to Providence," said Mrs. Hull. Apparently she was beginning to relent. "I don't want to do any more to—to the poor young man."

"Well," said Magistrate Pool, with a whimsical smile, "suppose we send him to the workhouse for six months."

"Oh! No! No! No!" cried Mrs. Hull. "Only to Providence."

Magistrate Pool opened his mouth, then sharply shut it. He asked the clerk if they had anything nearer than Providence. The clerk replying in the negative and Mrs. Hull refusing to have any severer sentence than Providence, Magistrate Pool discharged the prisoner.

"You won't annoy her any more?" he asked.

"Oh, Mabel, Mabel—" began Gardner.

"That's the condition," said Mrs. Hull, with her face averted. He bowed his head in submission and followed her out of the court.

"Well," said Policeman Barnes, "he'll just make trouble the minute he's out on the street."

"Si-lence!" cried Magistrate Pool.

On the sidewalk Louis Gardner again addressed Mrs. Hull—tumultuously. She hurried toward Lexington Avenue, he following. An audience on the Court House steps smiled through its emotion. She got on a car, he followed, and the curtain fell.

At the Forty-sixth Street house it was found last night that Mrs. Hull had left the city. At the Manhattan Hotel it was said that Gardner had also gone away.

ANT-I-WET

"You Can't Make a Silk Dress Out of a Sow's Ear."

NEITHER can you make a good Rain Coat out of a poor fabric, no matter what sort of a rain-proofing stamp or trade mark that fabric may bear.

Neither can good tailoring overcome the fact that the fabrics are inferior.

Neither can the most classical language in an advertisement make poor fabrics good, nor can the very latest style make unworthy fabrics worthy.

When we say that Ant-I-Wet clothes are the best clothes in America, it means something, because the foundation of every garment is the fabric, and at no time will the Ant-I-Wet trade mark be allowed on poor fabrics. It will never be necessary to apologize for Ant-I-Wet clothing, be it Suit, Top Coat or Rain Coat. BINGHAM INTENDS TO STAY.

Gen. Chaffee Not to Have His Job—Wants a "Crimeometer."

Police Commissioner Bingham is not going to resign in favor of Lieut. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, who, it is said, has been offered a position under Mayor McClellan. Gen. Bingham is going to hang on to his job at least long enough to establish a "crimeometer."

A "crimeometer," he explained yesterday, is to be an information table after the fashion of the daily weather map to tell whether the crime wave in New York is going out or coming in. The usual questioning by the newspaper reporters at Headquarters evoked the "crimeometer" scheme yesterday.

"Have you any reports that gambling is on the increase?" he was asked.

"I think we ought to have a crime card," he answered jestingly. "I think we will have one, in fact," he added after a bit of hesitation, "but dam'fino what to call it. Let's s-e-e. Oh, yes, we might call it a 'crimeometer.' We could have colors—red for murder, green for hayseed swindles, blue for the poolrooms, and so on. We might have a ticker system, too, to tell if crime is up or down, and then we could list it on the Stock Exchange, and let 'em gamble on it for long or short."

"Do you believe in a wide open town?" he was asked.

"That's an unfair question," the Commissioner replied. "I have certain orders to carry out and do my best. If they're not carried out, don't sneer. I think all the laws should be enforced, but I don't hesitate to say that I put more steam on some than on others. I place more importance upon arresting murderers and burglars than on arresting a boy selling papers after 10 o'clock at night."

"Are you using Brooklyn policemen for work in New York?"

"A chicken has two legs," he answered, "and a man has two legs; therefore chickens are the same as men."

"Some chickens are roosters," was suggested.

"Yes," replied the Commissioner with a frown, "and some are lobsters. And if the shoe fits anybody here he can put it on."

"Now, Mr. Commissioner," asked the reporters, "is it true that you are going to resign, and that Gen. Chaffee is to succeed you?"

Gen. Bingham reached for his pipe, filled it with tobacco, crushed the leaves down into the bowl, pursed his lips again, raised his eyebrows once more, and said:

"So?" And then he concluded: "I have no immediate intention of resigning. I'm pretty apt to stay here till June 1, anyway. You see, lots of my friends have bet that I would last six months. I don't want them to lose their money." Then he laughed.

STRIKE DELAYS NEW BRIDGE.

Explanation of Slow Work on Blackwell's Island Structure.

Commissioner Stevenson has written to the Mayor, explaining the delay in the work on the Blackwell's Island Bridge. The letter was in reply to a communication criticising the Bridge Department, which Samuel J. Bloomingdale sent to the Mayor, and which the Mayor forwarded to the Commissioner.

Mr. Stevenson says that it was not until October, 1904, that the contracts for the bridge were finally approved. The plans and drawings provided for certain large castings, the largest ever made in the United States, weighing forty tons each, and the failure to get those castings in time necessitated an extension of another three months. Until December, 1905, the work progressed, Mr. Stevenson says, with regularity, and about 5,620 tons of steel were put in place on the fixed span of the bridge. On Jan. 2 last a general strike of the Housesmiths' and Bridgemen's Union was declared, and no work has been done since. The Commissioner expects that the strike will soon be over.

The work at the mills has not been stopped, and there will be no delay for material when the bridge building is resumed. In value of work done more than half the contract has been completed; 36,000 tons of steel have been delivered, or 72 per cent. of the total, and 11 per cent. is erected in place. Dec. 31, 1907, is the date set for the completion of the work.

NOT A "CONSPIRACY."

Court Says Builders' Agreement with Bricklayers Is Legal.

Judge Townsend of the United States Circuit Court, in a decision of importance to the building trades, handed down yesterday, denied the application of the National Fireproofing Company for an injunction restraining the Mason Builders' Association and the various bricklayers' unions from carrying out the agreement which exists between them, and which, the plaintiff asserts, prevents the company from doing any business in this city. In the affidavits accompanying the petition conspiracy was charged. The court, in holding that no such conspiracy exists, says that this case presents the unusual feature of a combination of labor and capital accusing another combination of labor and capital.

Besides the association and unions, the various individual members of each association who had signed the yearly agreement were named as defendants in the petition.

Counsel for the plaintiff concern set forth that it was a Pennsylvania corporation, and that prior to 1904 it did a large business in the State, and especially in the City of New York on contracts to install its tile system. Thereafter, says the petition, the defendants, desiring to obtain the sole monopoly of installing tile fireproofing business in New York, and desiring to exclude the National Fireproofing Company, except upon terms dictated by the mason builders, which were harsh and unjust, conspired with the bricklayers' unions to prevent the use in New York of the plaintiff's products, except under prohibitive conditions.

The defendants prevented the plaintiff from making contracts, the petition alleges, by entering into an agreement whereby the mason builders should do all the fireproofing and not sublet the contracts. The bricklayers, it is alleged, struck on all such work as the company obtained as soon as they found out about the contracts. This agreement, the plaintiff urged, was a conspiracy and in violation of the Wilson bill.

Judge Townsend, in his decision, says, in part:

> It is claimed, for the reasons set forth in the affidavits and referred to above, that this agreement was entered into for the mutual advantage of the parties in the line of the avoidance of strikes, and the opportunity for control by contractors of an entire contract, in permitting the bricklayers to do all the brickwork on a certain building, so that having done the outside work, exposed to the inclemencies of the weather, they might also do the inside and protected work and obtain full and better wages.

SUMMONS FOR MR. ROBINSON.

President's Brother-in-Law Says Tenants' Character Can't Be Helped.

At the request of Capt. William H. Hodgins of the Tenderloin Police Station Magistrate Steinert, in the Jefferson Market Court, issued summonses yesterday for a number of property owners and agents, including Douglas Robinson's real estate firm and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Capt. Hodgins alleged that the persons for whom summonses were asked owned or administered properties occupied by disorderly persons.

When the Police Captain asked for a summons for Douglas Robinson the Magistrate appeared to be greatly surprised.

"If that is the Robinson I have in mind, it is the President's brother-in-law. Am I right?"

"That's the party," answered Capt. Hodgins.

Mr. Robinson said last evening that it was the policy of his firm to maintain a sharp lookout for tenants of undesirable character, but that where such tenants are in possession under leases obtained from a former owner the immediate ousting of them is not always an easy matter.

"If this summons," said Mr. Robinson, "grows out of any of the properties on Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets, bought for the McAdoo tunnel terminal, the condition complained of is clearly one that has been passed along by a former owner."

FIGHTS ENGEMAN WILL.

Turfman's Nephew Raises the Point of Illegal Adoption.

A contest over the will of George W. Engeman, who was interested in the Brighton Beach race track, was begun yesterday in the Surrogates' Court, Brooklyn, by Albert W. Tyson, a nephew of the dead turfman. Mr. Engeman bequeathed to his adopted daughter, Miss Elizabeth Cusick Engeman, $100,000, and made her executrix of the will.

In a petition filed yesterday asking that the decree admitting the will to probate be revoked, Tyson alleges that Miss Engeman was more than twenty-one years of age when she was adopted. He argues that when the decree of adoption was granted by County Judge Hurd, in 1897, it was represented that the girl, a niece of Engeman's wife, was twenty years old, whereas her real age was 27 years.

Tyson asserts that the law does not contemplate the adoption of a person over twenty-one years of age. The plaintiff also alleges that the will was not properly executed, and that undue influence was exercised.

Tyson has brought proceedings in the County Court to have Miss Engeman's adoption declared void.

Conventional dress for boys is pretty free and easy this year.

For instance, most of our finest double-breasted suits for boys are made with bloomer breeches—a more comfortable as well as smarter form of a standby style; $8.50 to $15.50.

The boys' Norfolk suits all have these bloomers and it's probably their comfort as much as the snap of the belted coat which accounts for the Norfolk's popularity; $6.50 to $15.50.

FOR A HENRY HUDSON BRIDGE.

Board of Estimate Will Appropriate $2,000,000 To-day to Build It.

The committee appointed by the Mayor to consider the plans of the Bridge Department for a Henry Hudson Memorial Bridge has agreed to report the matter favorably. To-day the Board of Estimate will appropriate $2,000,000 corporate stock for its construction.

The committee was made up by Borough Presidents Ahearn and Haffen and Controller Metz. Commissioner Stevenson of the Department of Bridges told the committee that if the money is authorized at once the bridge can be completed in time for opening in 1909, on the 300th anniversary of the discovery by Hudson of the Hudson River.

RUSSIAN REPUBLIC NEAR, DECLARES LEADER HERE

Narodny Already Has Headed One in Baltic Provinces.

NOW HIDING IN NEW YORK

The Next Uprising a Revolution, He Says, with Army as Allies—Will Meet Gorky.

Some inside facts in connection with the new revolutionary movement in Russia were told to a TIMES reporter yesterday by one of its chief agents, who for the last five weeks has been in hiding in this city with a price of 50,000 rubles on his head, laid by the Czar's Government.

This man, who for the present appears as Ivan Narodny, although he is only 36 years old, has made Russian revolutionary history for the last seventeen years under half a dozen different names. He was the leader of the Cronstadt uprising last October, and was head of the provisional republic, which, unknown to the outside world, existed in the Baltic provinces during three weeks in November and December last until it was snuffed out in an orgy of blood and excesses by the Cossacks, who killed Narodny's wife and two children and burned his home. It was then the price was set on Narodny's head. Prior to that he had spent four years in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, the grim Bastile of the Czar's capital.

M. Narodny, who, despite his youth, is one of the most impressive figures of "Underground Russia," comes to this country with credentials from the Russian military revolutionists, composed largely of officers and men from the army and navy; from the League of Leagues, and the Russian Peasant Party, for the purpose of raising funds to render effective the new Russian revolution.

In this he will be aided by Nicholas Tchaykoffsky, who is known as "The Father of the Russian Revolution," and by Maxim Gorky, the writer, who has been known as the soul of the movement. It is largely on the representations of Narodny that Gorky, who is due here next week, is crossing the Atlantic.

The Next Resolution.

"Our next move," said M. Narodny, in speaking to THE TIMES reporter, "will be more far-reaching and entirely different from any of the movements that have preceded it. These have been little revolts; this will be an armed revolution. The uprisings that have gone before have been more or less local in nature and generally started by some one party or organization. This movement will sweep the country and will have behind it every organization working for social reform. Its ultimate goal will be not a constitutional monarchy, but the republic.

"That is the present programme. A few months ago many of the liberal organizations would have been satisfied with a constitutional assembly and a constitution. Now we will not stop short of the republic. On that point there is complete unanimity among all the revolutionary bodies, who now for the first time are working harmoniously together through a central committee.

"The underground propaganda and work of reorganization is progressing satisfactorily in every part of Russia and in many other countries, including this, and when we raise the flag of freedom next Fall we will have behind it men with weapons in hand in sufficient number to make victory assured. Russia will be free."

"What about the Russian Army" asked THE TIMES reporter. "Is not that big enough to put an insurmountable obstacle in the way of an armed uprising?"

"Here is a peculiar thing," said M. Narodny. "In the coming revolution we place almost our chief reliance on the army. If we could not do so, an armed uprising would be a folly. But the army is more prone to start a revolution than almost any part of the Russian people.

Most of the Army Sympathize.

"I know the army very well, for I have been in intimate touch with it for many years. A majority of the officers and the men in practically every infantry and artillery regiment in St. Petersburg and in Northern Russia are in sympathy with our movement now. Others will be won over before Fall. The only uncertain element is the Cossacks and the crack cavalry regiments of the Guard. But even the latter have been reached by our propaganda."

M. Narodny told of a recent incident which might serve as an illustration of the much-vaunted loyalty of the Guard regiments. The Life Guards every year, in the month of March, have a grand celebration which begins with a review and ends with a banquet at the Michaeloffsky menage, in St. Petersburg. In years past the Czar and the Grand Dukes have generally appeared as reviewing officers and guests of honor at the banquet. It was while on the way from such a review that Alexander II. twenty-five years ago fell by a terrorist bomb in the streets of his own capital.

When the celebration was held this year invitations practically mandatory in tone had been sent out for the officers of the various regiments. Nevertheless, they stayed away. Neither the Czar nor any of the Grand Dukes appeared. About 6,000 soldiers sat down to the feast. Sixteen of these soldiers made revolutionary speeches. They called on their comrades to lend a hand in ushering in the new era, and the regimental bands played the "Marseillaise" instead of the Hymn to the Czar. Finally they elected with acclamation as honorary officers of the Guards organization Gen. Smirnoff, a former member of the general staff, who is now an exile in Paris on account of his revolutionary leanings, and M. Narodny.

"The sixteen soldiers who made the speeches have since been arrested," said M. Narodny, "but this has only tended to make new converts for our cause and Russia's. I would almost be inclined to say that the Cossacks are the only stand-by of the Russian Government, and they will desert when the Government is unable to pay them."

M. Narodny was asked what influence the convening of the Douma would have on the revolutionary movement.

The Douma Not Enough.

"None whatever," he replied. "The people in the provinces will never be satisfied with the Douma. The leaders of SNAKE AROUND GIRL'S LEG.

Kicks It Off at Salvation Army Meeting—It Was of Various Lengths.

Two hundred men and women were packed into the hall at 512 East 138th Street, where the Salvation Army for the Bronx has its headquarters, attending a special service last night, when the meeting was suddenly broken up by the appearance of a big blacksnake. It was 2, 6, 8, 10, and 12 feet long.

Capt. Clara Dammes, the young woman in charge of the barracks, was conducting the meeting. Testimony had been called for, and from down near the door a man about 50 years of age rose to tell that he intended to lead a better life. As he was talking the crowd was startled by a young woman in one of the front benches, who uttered a shriek and, jumping upon a chair, yelled that a rat had bitten her. As she stood on the chair she kicked frantically and other women leaped upon chairs and screamed.

Policeman William Hagen of the Alexander Avenue Station heard the commotion and ran in. He ran toward the young woman who had started the commotion. She was Miss Sophia Roeser of 780 East 138th Street. He says he found a snake curled around her ankle, its tongue darting in and out and its eyes fiery. Hagen didn't say how big the snake was. He hadn't measured it.

"It's a snake!" he cried. "Kick it off!"

"I can't!" cried the young woman.

"Keep still and I'll knock its head off," the policeman ordered, making a crack at it with his night stick and missing, but coming close to breaking the young woman's leg. Just then Miss Roeser gave one final desperate kick, and the snake was loosened and hurled into a corner. During the excitement the crowd fled to the street. After several efforts with his club, the policeman managed to strike the reptile and stun it. It was then killed. Nobody measured it except with the eye. It is believed the snake escaped from an animal store in the neighborhood.

SAYS NAMES WERE PAID FOR.

Goldberger Got 10 Cents for Hearst Signatures, He Declares.

Benjamin M. Goldberger, the City Register's clerk charged with filing forged petitions for the nomination of William R. Hearst on the Municipal Ownership ticket in the last campaign, talked with Assistant District Attorneys Kresel and Whiteside for several hours yesterday. It was said that he made a full statement and gave the names of men who, he says, employed him to get up the Hearst petitions. He said that he was paid 10 cents for each name furnished.

Goldberger added that he had at his home letters, vouchers, and checks supporting the story he had already told. Detective Flood was sent with him to his home, at 780 East 148th Street, and many documents were found. They are now in possession of the District Attorney, and, it is said, furnish important aid in fixing the original responsibility for the alleged frauds.

It was said yesterday at the District Attorney's office that of 6,500 names attached to the petition nominating candidates for Mayor, Controller, and President of the Board of Aldermen on the Municipal Ownership League ticket at least 5,000 have been found to be forgeries. And as the petition itself forms part of the complaint in the case the District Attorney can, if necessary, call every person whose signature appears on the petition as a witness.

Those 5,000 signatures appear to have been written by thirty persons in all, it was said at the District Attorney's office yesterday, while about twelve notaries acknowledged the names. It was also said that several men who were not Commissioners of Deeds at all gathered signatures, and that they were paid 5 cents for each signature brought in. About 40,000 names in all were signed to petitions, but only 6,500 of these were filed.

Jacob Newstead, Republican leader of the Twelfth Assembly District and head of the club at 464 Grand Street, where most of the petitions were made out under direction of Goldberger, went to the District Attorney's office yesterday to protest his complete innocence of any connection with Goldberger. He said that Goldberger was not a member of the club; but as campaign manager for the Municipal Ownership candidate for Assemblyman had used the clubrooms for headquarters.

ROUND UP OF BAD DOGS.

Westchester Watchdogs Impounded with Notorious Vagrants.

A dog hunt on a mammoth scale disturbed the ordinarily quiet life of the little village of Westchester yesterday, and before dusk thirty specimens, good, bad, and indifferent, had been gathered into the big automobile of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals by six of its gray-uniformed officers.

For several weeks the village has been suffering from a plague of homeless dogs, and numerous complaints have been filed at the Westchester Police Station. Citizens complained that they were attacked at night; several were bitten, and hen roosts suffered generally. Last Wednesday night a villager rushed into the station house and grasped the rail in front of the Sergeant's desk for support. He said that he had returned home earlier than usual and had found a half dozen big dogs in his front yard. They chased him into the road and tore out sections of his clothes as he fled. The police got busy after this report.

As a result of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals raid yesterday, there were almost as many dogless homes last night as there had been homeless dogs twelve hours previous. Several persons went to the station house and complained that their dogs had been stolen.

RATE CONFERENCE PLAN FAILS IN THE SENATE

Move to Unite Democrats Follows Rayner's Visit to President.

NO AGREEMENT ON A VOTE

Tillman Again Makes a Vain Effort to Fix a Day for a Ballot on the Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The newest move in the rate fight began and ended to-day in an effort to get an agreement from the Democratic Senators to hold a conference and define common ground on which the minority would be willing to stand.

While it is not clear that the idea of this move had its initiative at the White House, it is certain that it made its appearance immediately following a conference between the President and Senator Rayner. The Maryland Senator was asked by the President to meet him for the purpose of consultation in regard to legal questions involved in the amendment of the Hepburn bill. It is understood that the conference not only embraced a discussion of the legal difficulties in the situation but also went on into the practical problems connected with reaching an understanding which should lead to the passage of a suitable bill.

Senator Rayner urged the wisdom of trying to get together on some proposition not far removed from the Bailey amendment, which he said the President had approached in the Long amendment. All that was necessary to remove the last obstacle to bringing a majority of the Senate together was the acquiescence of the President and his friends in the denial to the courts of the power to suspend the rate made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission while the consideration of constitutional rights was proceeding in the courts.

When Senator Rayner returned to the Capitol he and Senator Dubois, one of the acknowledged masters of manipulation among the Democrats, began to urge on their colleagues the wisdom of holding a conference to get an interchange of views and endeavor if possible to get together on some one amendment. A paper was passed around for signatures for a call to such a conference.

Much to the surprise and disappointment of the Senators who proposed it, Senator Bailey took strong ground against holding any conference at all. Senator Tillman was in favor of it, but deferred to the wishes of the majority of his colleagues. Senator Bacon and Senator Culberson also expressed their disinclination to go into a conference. The general opinion of these Senators was that the conference would not be binding, and the divergence of opinion was so great that there was no substantial reason to expect that any good would come of holding a conference. Toward night it was generally understood that the effort had failed, and the idea would be abandoned.

Late in the day Senator Tillman tried once more to get an agreement for a day for a vote on the bill. He asked Senator Aldrich, as the leader of those Senators who opposed the Rate bill, to say whether he would now consider the matter. Mr. Aldrich took exceptions to being designated as leading the Senators who opposed the bill, and said that he was for rate legislation, and when the bill had been amended as he thought it should be he would be found voting for it. He thought the Senator from South Carolina might more properly be called the Senator in charge of the opposition to the bill, as he had proposed four or five amendments to the pending bill.

Tillman said that for the present debate had been exhausted. There were no Senators ready to go on with debate to-morrow. Next week there would be several speeches. Senator Foster (who is one of the Senators called to the White House by the President) would speak.

Senator Bailey is preparing another constitutional argument which he jokingly predicts "will disgrace Senator Spooner before the American Bar Association and make Senator Knox look like thirty cents."

Senator La Follette, who was to have spoken this week, will give notice Monday when he can be prepared to address the Senate. He has studied the railroad question for years and has a practical knowledge of the operations and practices of railroads that can only have great value in the discussion of the subject.

It was the current report to-day that Senator Aldrich had abandoned his effort to get an agreement with Senator Bailey on an amendment which would command the support of the so-called railroad Senators and was at work on certain Democratic Senators who had from the first occupied extremely conservative ground. Among these are Morgan, Foster, Martin, Bacon, Clarke, Taliaferro, Mallory, Stone, and Carmack. This attempt is in the nature of a back fire on the friends of the Hepburn bill, and it promises to endanger the President's chances of getting through a bill that will have any semblance whatever to the pending Hepburn bill.

Aldrich objected to-night to going on with the consideration of a day for a vote on the amendments and the bill so long as there was a whole week of speeches in sight. Tillman was practically helpless in the face of the objection, as the well-known traditions of the Senate must prevail, and as long as there is a Senator who desires to make a speech there can be no closing of the debate.

In the course of the debate to-day Senator Elkins made a long speech in which he declared his principal objection to the House bill to be that it does not go far enough in remedying evils, and expressed the opinion that if enacted into law it would prove a general disappointment. He said that he was in hearty accord with the President on the subject of rate regulation, and then indicated the respects in which, according to his opinion, the bill falls short in accomplishing all that should be accomplished by railroad legislation. Among these were the following:

A prohibition against railroads producing, selling, or shipping their own coal and other like articles in competition with other owners.

A requirement that switches shall be built where needed to accommodate business.

A requirement compelling inter-State roads to make connections with connecting lines.

A requirement for the fair and just distribution of cars among shippers.

Mr. Gamble predicted that a failure to legislate would result in Government ownership of the railroads.

Mr. Kean declared that Congress should not exceed the authority granted by the Constitution in dealing with the question of commerce between the States. He argued that the pending bill transcended this authority in that it provided for the regulation of commerce by the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and that the effort to prevent a judicial review of the commission's orders was a practical acknowledgment of the weakness of the position of the advocates of the bill.

EXPLOSION SCARES DINERS.

Steam Pipe Bursts Under Pabst's in Harlem—Lights Go Out.

Pabst's Harlem restaurant, in West 125th Street, was crowded with diners last evening, when suddenly the place was thrown into an uproar by the explosion in the basement directly under the main restaurant of the two-inch steam pipe that supplies steam to the dynamos that light the establishment. The report, which was heard for blocks, was immediately followed by the going out of the electric lights, which caused excitement among the five hundred or more persons who were in the restaurant.

The coolness of Proprietor Meyer and Manager Winters prevented what threatened to become a panic in the great dining hall. Women were screaming and calling to their escorts to get them out of the place, which soon filled with steam, when Mr. Meyer ran up to the balcony and shouted that nothing more serious than a broken pipe was the matter, and begged everybody to keep quiet. Mr. Winters performed a similar duty on the ground floor. In the meantime an alarm of fire had been turned in, and the reserves from the West 125th Street Station hurried up.

The clanging of the engine bells renewed the alarm of many of those in the restaurant. They got out as quickly as possible. None of the diners was hurt.

August Schussling, the chef, and several of his assistants went into the steam-filled boiler room to bring out Michael Lenhard, the engineer, and Valentine Dietz, the fireman. Lenhard and Dietz were both unconscious and were painfully scalded and burned. They were removed to the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

The restaurant was again illuminated about 10 o'clock, but the lights were gas, and not electric.

SENATOR ALGER TO RETIRE.

Withdraws His Candidacy for Re-election by Michigan Legislature.

DETROIT, April 6.—Announcement was made late this afternoon from United States Senator R. A. Alger's office in this city that he will not be a candidate to succeed himself in the Senate when the Legislature meets on Jan. 1 next. The announcement took the form of a letter received to-day from the Senator. In it he says:

"Owing to the condition of my health, I am compelled to withdraw my candidacy to succeed myself in the United States Senate. While it is a great sacrifice to sever a connection of many years' standing with the public affairs of my State, that sacrifice has become necessary. I take this opportunity to convey to the friends who have so loyally given me their support my heartfelt thanks and sense of lasting obligation, and to express to the State my deep gratitude for the honors it has seen fit to confer upon me."

At Senator Alger's office a rumor that the Senator was about to resign was declared to be without foundation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Senator Alger's decision to retire from the Senate is due to the declaration of his physicians that he must avoid all participation in excitement of any kind. He is suffering from a complication of disorders, involving heart disease and nervous exhaustion. There are now well-defined symptoms of locomotor ataxia.

Mr. Alger is serving out the term for which the late Senator James McMillan was elected. He was appointed in September, 1902, by the Governor of Michigan to fill the vacancy, and later was elected by the Legislature.

MENACED BY TRADE.

Residents Near Madison Avenue and Seventy-third Street Would Bar It.

Residents in the neighborhood of Madison Avenue and Seventy-third Street are awaiting with considerable anxiety the decision of the Supreme Court as to whether or not property owners on the corner are to be allowed to rent stores in a building which has been started. A preliminary injunction restraining them from doing so has been granted, and the residents hope to see it made permanent.

The application for a permanent injunction states many facts of interest to New Yorkers. The land was at one time the property of Robert Lenox, who willed it to his son, James. In his will he stated that, as he believed that it was probable that a village might be founded on his land, (then a farm,) the son should have the right to all that the land might yield, but that he could not sell it. In a codicil he gave his son the right to sell land under the restriction that it was to be used for residential purposes only.

The question now before the Supreme Court is whether or not the reconstructed building on the corner, with its two stores, would not be a violation of the restriction. In the meantime a watchman guards the building, which is partly demolished, while the people in the neighborhood wonder whether their part of the city shall suffer what Fifth Avenue and other districts have had to put up with. The question is uppermost in the conversation and thoughts of those who have believed that their neighborhood would never be invaded by trade on a corner shadowed by the spires of two churches.

Among those living in the neighborhood are Mr. and Mrs. G. Q. Palmer, Mrs. J. B. Gibson, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Kelly, Mrs. T. R. Hostetter, Miss E. W. Riggs, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, their son and his family; Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Summers, Mr. and Mrs. David Thomson, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bernstein, Mrs. J. Townsend, Mr. Stephen Geoghegan, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harzog, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bendit, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Johnson, James W. S. Cleland, Miss Gertrude Cleland, Solomon Marx, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Barnard, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Sargent.

CHURCH AID FOR COURTSHIP.

Rockefeller's Pastor to Establish a Parlor for the Poor.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, April 6.—A "community parlor" in a church is the latest idea of the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of John D. Rockefeller's church in this city.

"Every downtown church should have one," he said to-day. "The churches cannot furnish home life to the very rich, but they can to the very poor. Cleveland is a place of crowded homes, tenements, and boarding houses. I always feel especially sorry for the boarding house people. They haven't even the home life of the tenements. If they meet their friends elsewhere it must be in winerooms or other public places. Homeless young men and women have the same right to pleasant courtship as the more fortunate ones who live in comfortable houses.

"It is natural for women to want to meet and gossip about clothes, children, and other interests which make up their lives. Where shall they meet? In the community parlor. Just now, unfortunately, our church is overcrowded with clubs and meetings. Later, the community parlor may be a permanent fixture at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church."

VESUVIUS THREATENS DESTRUCTION OF TOWNS

Bosco Trecase Abandoned — Panic in Other Places.

1,000-FOOT COLUMN OF FIRE

Lava Advancing at the Rate of 21 Feet a Minute—Stones Weighing a Ton Each Ejected.

NAPLES, April 6.—The inhabitants of the villages in the vicinity of Mount Vesuvius are in a condition of panic.

Many homes have been abandoned for the open air, although there has been a thick fog all day and the atmosphere has been dense with volcanic ashes and the fumes of subterranean fires.

The churches are crowded day and night with people praying for deliverance from impending peril, manifestations of which are heard and felt in explosions which resemble a heavy cannonading and in the constant trembling of the earth.

The eruption of the volcano is now most violent. The main stream of lava proceeding from Vesuvius is 200 feet wide, and it advances at times at the rate of twenty-one feet a minute, the intense heat destroying vegetation before the stream reaches it.

The peasants of Portici, at the west foot of Vesuvius, cleared their grounds of vineyards and trees, in the effort to lessen the danger from fire, and resisted the progress of the lava to their utmost.

The population of Bosco Trecase, on the southern declivity of the mountain, the nearest village to the crater, have sought safety in flight.

The cemetery of Bosco Trecase has been invaded by lava.

Bosco Reale, to the eastward, is also threatened. Women of this village, weeping with fright, carried a statue of St. Anne as near as they could go to the flowing lava, imploring a miracle to stay the advance of the consuming stream.

The town of Torre del Greco, which has been eight times destroyed and as often rebuilt, is again threatened, and the inhabitants are in extreme terror.

Ottajano is also threatened.

Hot mud, ashes, and black sand are ejected from the craters, which, mixed with rain, produce the so-called caustic rain, which is most damaging to vegetation.

Although the showers of cinders have diminished here, people can be seen holding up umbrellas as protection against the falling ashes.

The scene at night is one of mingled grandeur and horror. From the summit of Vesuvius there leaps a column of fire fully 1,000 feet in height, the glare lighting the sky and sea for many miles. Occasionally great masses of molten stone, some weighing as much as a ton, are ejected from the crater.

Signor Matteucci, director of the observatory, is working indefatigably. He has had military engineers establish telephonic connection between the observatory and points within the zone of volcanic activity. The director said this even'ng that although the eruption presented a grave menace, he did not believe it would reach the villages. Indeed, he said, the present volcanic activity was not altogether unmixed with good, for if it had not come to pass a violent and sudden eruption, having a far wider radius, might have occurred.

Although Portici is not the largest of the towns threatened with destruction by Vesuvius, its loss would be the most serious, as it contains many art treasures and splendid buildings. It is at the north foot of Vesuvius and has a population of about 12,000. In it are a large royal palace adorned with pictures and frescoes from Pompeii, and a museum containing many art treasures from the unburied Roman cities.

Torre del Greco is a flourishing town of 30,000 inhabitants, standing on one of the lava streams of 1631, which destroyed two-thirds of the older town. The lava streams of 1737 and 1794 also caused the town great damage. The earthquake of 1857 and the eruption of 1861 were even more destructive. The polishing of coral is the chief industry of the place. The town is built mainly of lava.

Bosco Trecase is the usual starting point for tourists who wish to make the ascent of Mount Vesuvius from the south side. It has a population of 9,000.

Ottajano is situated at the northeast foot of Vesuvius. It has 20,000 inhabitants.

Bosco Reale has about 5,000 inhabitants.

WOULDN'T SERVE CLERGYMEN

Hotel Waiters Quit Work at the Prospect of Small Tips.

The three hundred clergymen who are attending the sessions of the New York East Conference of the Methodist Church at the New York Avenue Church in Brooklyn arranged for a luncheon at the Brevoort Hotel, Bedford Avenue and Fulton Street, Wednesday afternoon. When the fifteen waiters of the hotel learned what men they were expected to serve they balked.

"Nothing doing," was the edict of a spokesman they appointed to represent them. Then they folded their aprons and departed. The hotel management got fifteen new men to fill their places, but the second crew quit as suddenly as the first.

The clergymen were mystified until one of the waiters explained that in view of the prospect of small tips the waiters had struck, because the hotel management wouldn't give them an increase in their regular wages for the day. Better treatment is promised the clergymen to-day.

The conference adopted a resolution to formulate a petition urging the Legislature to pass the Stevens-Wainwright bill providing for the proper labeling of all medicines containing alcohol.

BROOCH LEFT IN THEATRE.

Waldo and the Police Recovered Mrs. Benkard's Gem at 5 A. M.

Henry H. Benkard, a broker who lives at 35 West Tenth Street, and his wife occupied a box at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre Thursday night. The curtain of the box kept getting between Mrs. Benkard and "Candida." Finally in desperation she took off a $2,000 diamond brooch and pinned back the curtain.

The show went on, and Mrs. Benkard forgot the pin. She missed it, however, when she got home. Deputy Commissioner Waldo, who is a friend of the Benkards, was called up on the telephone. He communicated with the Tenderloin Station, and Detective Brockman was put on the case about midnight.

Brockman tried to get into the theatre right away, but "Billie" Miles, the night watchman, kept him out. Brockman found Mr. Proctor at his home on Thirty-fourth Street about 1 o'clock. He was told to wait until the morning shift of workmen opened the theatre.

It was 5 o'clock when Brockman finally got in, hastened to the box, and found the pin, which was returned to Mrs. Benkard.

SEA WATER IMPROVES COAL.

British Admiralty Orders More Submarine Storage Experiments.

LONDON, April 6.—The Admiralty's small experiments have proved that the storage of coal beneath the sea steadily increases its calorific value, while open-air storage decreases it.

The Admiralty has directed that experiments on a large scale be made, with a view to overcoming the difficulty of the drying of the coal after it has been stored beneath the water.

PRISONER IN BABY CARRIAGE.

Policeman Trundles Man in the Vehicle He Stole.

Joseph Flanagan, full grown, was wheeled to the West 100th Street Police Station last night in a baby carriage by Policeman Lewis and locked up on the charge of stealing the vehicle.

The carriage was stolen from Joshua Lewis of 823 Columbus Avenue. He saw Flanagan just turning into West 103d Street with it. He followed, and when Policeman Lewis hove in sight caused Flanagan's arrest.

Flanagan stretched out on the sidewalk and refused to take a step toward the station house. Policeman Lewis thereupon bundled him into the baby carriage and trundled him to the lock-up.

CHICAGO ELECTION FRAUD.

Recount, It Is Asserted, Will Make City Operation Plan Effective.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Charges of fraud in the returns upon the municipal ownership proposition voted on last Tuesday have been received by Corporation Counsel Lewis, and the County Court and the Election Commissioners will be asked to investigate the matter.

It is asserted that in forty-one precincts the returns upon all of the three propositions relative to municipal ownership show exactly the same vote, and this is said to be an impossibility. It is claimed by the advocates of municipal ownership that a recount will show a gain of 8,000 votes for the proposition, and these, together with the same loss for the negative votes and an error of 1,000 votes already found in the footing of the vote in the Tenth Ward, will give the immediate-operation proposition sufficient votes to become effective.

EASTPORT, L. I., April 6.—Last night's showers proved a boon to the inhabitants of this section, quenching the brush fires that have been raging in the woods on the east end of the island during the last few days.

WIDOW RECOVERS $1,000,000.

Will of James C. King of Chicago Broken—Old Men Lose.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Mrs. Maude A. King, widow of James C. King, a Board of Trade operator who died in 1901, is to get $1,000,000 of the King estate under a decision handed down in the Circuit Court to-day by Judge Walker.

King's estate amounted to $3,600,000, and all but $100,000 was devised for the endowment of a home for old men. Mrs. King sued for half the property.

MAY PUNISH APOSTLES.

Mormon Leaders Who Have Avoided Senate Subpoenas in Danger.

SALT LAKE, Utah, April 6.—Joseph F. Smith, President of the Mormon Church, in his address to-day at the opening of the annual conference of the Mormons, created a stir among the thousands of his followers present by a pointed reference to absent apostles.

His remarks were interpreted to mean that the church authorities have determined to discipline those apostles who for more than two years have been in voluntary exile. They are J. W. Taylor, George Teasdale, and Matthias F. Cowley, wanted in Washington as witnesses in the Smoot investigation. They are accused of having made polygamous marriages in recent years.

CANARY SAVES THREE LIVES.

Awakes Sleepers in Danger of Asphyxiation and Then Expires.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 6.—A tame canary bird which was allowed to fly around the house at will last night saved the lives of Mr. and Mrs. John Bietze and their little daughter Ida, who live near Obernburg. The canary was very tame and a great pet of the little girl. When disturbed at night the bird set up a shrill chirping.

Shortly after midnight this morning Bietze was awakened by the calls of the canary, and found the rooms filled with coal gas from a stove. He awakened his wife after some difficulty and going into the little girl's room found her gasping for breath and nearly unconscious. The canary bird was standing on the footrail of the bed chirping for all it was worth. It could not stand the gas and died shortly after it had awakened Mr. Bietze.

WHOLESALE EXPLOSIONS CAUSE WEST SIDE PANIC

More Than 50 Manhole Covers Hurled in Air.

GAS FROM GARAGES BLAMED

Many Persons Hurt, Hundreds of Windows Shattered, and Sewers Wrecked by Gasoline Vapor.

Men, women, and children were thrown in all directions, window panes in scores of houses were shattered, dozens of persons were hurt, and ambulances and police reserves flocked to the middle west side yesterday afternoon, when explosions of gas in the sewers blew the manhole covers in Ninth Avenue, between Forty-ninth and Fifty-fifth Streets; in Fifty-first Street, between Eighth and Eleventh Avenues, and in Fifty-fifth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, high in air.

It was the fifth visitation of the kind in the vicinity within five months, and the police authorities and the officials of the Board of Sewers agreed after an investigation that the garages which discharge their waste into the outlet sewer emptying through Fifty-first Street were responsible.

There were two explosions. The first, which was comparatively inconsequential, occurred at 4:25 o'clock, and lifted the manhole covers a few feet from their places. There were many children playing in the streets at the time, and several received minor hurts. The noise attracted the attention of the neighborhood, and the occupants of the houses hurried into the streets.

When the second explosion, many times more violent, took place the sidewalks and streets were crowded, and a panic resulted, in which many persons were knocked down and trampled. The manhole covers flew above the roofs in the side streets, and fell back to burst into fragments on the pavement. In Ninth Avenue they banged against the elevated structure. Children suffered most in the stampede.

The outlet sewer in Fifty-first Street is 4 feet square. It receives the sewage from Ninth Avenue and the Fifty-fifth Street sewer empties into it through that thoroughfare. In the explosion which took place just two weeks previously, at about the same hour in the afternoon, the principal damage was done in Fifty-first Street, between Ninth Avenue and the river.

Think Gasoline Waste the Cause.

Into this sewer runs the waste gasoline and other volatile oils from the garages between Fifty-first Street and Central Park. Gasoline vaporizes into explosive gases at a temperature much lower than that of the warm sewers, and the experts of the Consolidated Gas Company who have been hard at work trying to determine the cause of the previous explosions have reported within the past few days that there was little doubt that the garages in the district named were to blame.

When Horace Loomis, chief engineer of the Board of Sewers, heard of the latest explosion, he unhesitatingly subscribed to the garage theory.

"For two weeks," he said, "the Consolidated Gas Company has had men inspecting the sewers to see if by any possibility its product could have leaked into the sewers. These men report that there is and has been for this period an absolute absence of illuminating gas. The explosion yesterday took place at high tide, as it did two weeks ago, when the flow from the sewers is more or less checked and the oil from the garages backs up. The chances are that trolley cars cause the ignition. I will immediately investigate yesterday's explosion, but I am already satisfied that the garages are responsible."

Before Chief Engineer Loomis was heard from Police Inspector Walsh, who, with Capt. Zimmerman of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, was on the scene within ten minutes after the second explosion, had found a verdict against the garages.

A Yellowish Flame Shot Up.

"I talked to a number of persons along Ninth Avenue and in Fifty-first and Fifty-fifth Streets," said Inspector Walsh, "who told me that a yellowish-blue flame shot from the manholes as their covers were blown upward, and that there was a distinct odor of gasoline. In the garages, when automobiles are cleaned, gasoline is used for many purposes, and then there is the waste gasoline from the tanks, all of which finds its way into the sewers. I shall take up the matter with the Health Department and with the Fire Department, and see if some remedy cannot be devised."

Inspector Walsh had charge of the police reserves from five precincts. They came from the West Twentieth Street, Tenderloin, West Thirty-seventh, West Forty-seventh, and West Sixty-eighth Street Stations. With them came Capts. Burfiend, Ward, Hodgins, Zimmerman, and Langan. They were kept busy restoring order in the district, and were then charged with the duty of closing the manholes which were minus covers with barrels and other makeshifts and placing danger signals by them.

Landlords and residents in the neighborhood were much alarmed. The landlords declared that property values would fall to nothing if some plan were not adopted for insuring safety, and residents were talking about moving away.

Ex-Coroner Scholer was talking to Policeman Foley of the West Forty-seventh Street Station at Fifty-first Street and Ninth Avenue when the heaviest explosion occurred. Dr. Scholer was thrown forward, landing on his face, but he was on his feet in an instant, and helped to calm the frightened people about him. He said he was confident, from the character of the explosions and the smell which followed them, that they represented the ignition of volatile oils, such as gasoline.

More Than Fifty Covers Blown Up.

When it is considered that more than fifty iron manhole covers, weighing 100 pounds or so apiece, were blown into the air; that windows were blown out on every side, and that the panic which followed covered a dozen blocks, it is remarkable that no fatalities were reported. There were none, however, although two ambulances were summoned from Roosevelt Hospital, and the four doctors accompanying them had all they could do for half an hour or so. The injured whose names were obtained by the police and the doctors—there were many more who went straight home—were:

James Reilly, Consolidated Gas Company Inspector, 748 Tenth Avenue, fracture of the right arm, removed to Roosevelt Hospital; Thomas McGuire, 101 West Sixty-second Street, dislocation of right wrist, removed to Roosevelt Hospital; Michael Ryan, 507 Fifty-fourth Street, scalp wound, removed to Roosevelt Hospital; May Shannon, 19 years old, 748 Ninth Avenue, rendered unconscious by shock and taken home; Joseph Fatel, 19 years old, 689 Ninth Avenue, dislocated finger, treated by ex-Coroner Scholer and sent home; Ruth Berg, 18 years old, 428 West Fifty-third Street, scalp wound, sent home; William Slattery, 475 West Fifty-first Street, cuts on face and hands, went home; Cornelius Muldoon, 10 years old, 448 West Fifty-first Street, treated by ambulance surgeon and went home; Joseph Gallagher, 775 Ninth Avenue, cut on head, sent home for treatment; Homer Chase, 13 years old, 406 West Fifty-first Street, bruised about body, carried home.

Ten-year-old Jimmy Lane was playing marbles with several companions on the manhole cover at Tenth Avenue and Fifty-first Street at the time of the first explosion. He shot up in the air and struck on his head, receiving a cut on the cheek. When he landed manholes were popping on every side, and the apartment houses were sending streams of tenants into the street.

Jimmy was the only victim to be seen, and a crowd of almost 1,000 persons gathered about him. Traffic at the corner was blocked. Then came the second explosion. As the block shook from one end to the other and the crash of broken glass, showering from the windows on either side, was heard, there was a frantic dash for safety.

The children of the block, and there are few blocks where children are more numerous, left their playthings behind and raced to the nearest doorways. Householders took them in without regard to relationship. Men and women, just as panic-stricken as the children, fought for shelter.

Made a Pile of Hats and Caps.

When the rush had subsided at the corner of Tenth Avenue James O'Brien, who lives near by, saw the pavement strewn with hats and caps of all sorts, sizes, and conditions which had been left behind by their owners. He organized himself into a salvage corps of one, and soon had a pile of headgear a yard in height. He let anybody who was bareheaded paw through his pile when quiet had been restored, and it took him an hour or so to get rid of his collection.

There was not a house in the block which escaped damage. In some of the buildings every window was shattered. Stained-glass windows were blown out of the Sacred Heart Church, on the north side of the street. Half a dozen yards from Ninth Avenue the manhole cover had not only been sent sailing upward, but the iron rim of the manhole itself had been torn out, leaving a hole, filled with brick and stone, twenty feet across.

In Ninth Avenue, although fewer windows were shattered and the explosions were not so powerful, the panic was, if anything, greater. To begin with, there were larger crowds upon this thoroughfare than on the side streets, and the manhole covers, while they did not fly as high as those in Fifty-first Street, made a mighty racket when they landed against the elevated structure, and there were enough windows broken to send the shoppers scattering.

At Fiftieth Street May Shannon was just coming out of a store when the shock of the explosions came. Before she could escape she was knocked down by a rush of frightened people. She fainted, and in the excitement there was no one to go to her aid. After several minutes she revived sufficiently to crawl into a doorway. There she relapsed into unconsciousness, and it was some little time before she was noticed and taken to her people.

Apartment House Windows Smashed.

Between Fifty-first Street and Fifty-fourth Street there was little force in the explosions, although all the manholes were blown open. Between Fifty-fourth Street and Fifty-fifth, the gas seemed to be present in larger quantities and the manhole settings were fairly torn from the pavements. The windows in the large apartment houses at Fifty-fifth Street were broken, and in the manhole at the corner was an explosion which stove in the slot of the north-bound trolley line, resulting in a blockade which continued for fifteen minutes. The blockade added to the confusion.

It was fully two hours before the neighborhood resumed its normal attitude, and then the red lanterns and broken windows remained to tell of what had happened. Glaziers were still busy at midnight putting in window panes. It was estimated by the police that $3,000 worth of glass was broken.

The reserves from the West Twentieth and West Sixty-eighth Street Police Stations were not kept on duty long, but it was late before the other reserves were sent back to their stations. The residents talked of the dangers to which they had been subjected until far into the night.

"I'll tell you," a 10-year-old was overheard to say, "I had a narrow escape. If 'Billy' Jones hadn't saved my life I'd 'a' been dead. I'd just caught on to a wagon, and 'Billy' pulled me away. Right away the wagon passed over a manhole and the tail-end blew off. Where would I been?"

DOROTHY LOVE A SUICIDE.

Daughter of Dr. I. N. Love Leaps from a Hotel Window.

Dorothy Love, known on the stage as Delphine Love, killed herself early yesterday morning by jumping from the third story of the Sterling Hotel, Seventh Avenue and Fiftieth Street. The young woman was a member of "The Vanderbilt Cup" company.

Thursday night she was seen in the hotel café with a man who is known as William H. Wilson, and is said to be the son of a Harlem hotel proprietor. Later she took a room in the hotel. The hotel people say that the two had quarreled. Miss Love made so much noise in her room that a bell boy was sent to tell her that she must be silent.

As he was knocking on the door the young woman jumped from the window. A policeman found her unconscious on the sidewalk and called an ambulance. She was sent to Bellevue, where it was found that she had suffered internal injuries. She died in the afternoon.

Wilson was arrested and taken to the West Side Court. There he said he was William H. McGucken; that he had known Miss Love in St. Louis for years, and that they were engaged to be married. As the young woman's injuries were at first thought to be slight, he was allowed to go. Late last night the police had not found him.

The dead girl was the daughter of the late Dr. I. N. Love, well known in St. Louis and this city. He died in 1903 of apoplexy on his way home from Paris. His daughter, while on a visit to Louisville, Ky., in 1898, eloped with Charles Kohn of Jeffersonville, Ind. The couple were married, returning to Louisville, where the girl refused to live with her husband. Kohn then got a divorce.

Broker Tried to Wreck Cafe.

Frank Hewlitt, 40 years old, a broker, who gave his address as 120 West Forty-second Street, was taken from the Union Square Hotel to Bellevue Hospital last night in a straitjacket after having attempted to wreck the hotel café.

According to the police, Hewlitt suddenly became violent and started in to smash things. It took several men to hold him.

DOWIE LOST $1,200,000 IN STOCKS, SAY ZIONISTS

Gambled It All Away in Wall Street Three Years Ago.

BIG SLUMP WIPED HIM OUT

Prophet Says He Is Returning as Moses to Smite His Enemies with Fire and to Rule Again.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 6.—While Apostle Dowie is speeding north on his way to Zion from the City of Mexico, the wires are fairly hot with messages emanating from the repudiated prophet telling of the terrible fate he has in store for those in Zion who have rebelled against his authority.

To-day came the news straight from Dowie himself to one of his followers that he will enter Chicago dressed as Moses. Carrying a "scroll" made in New York for him at a cost of over $2,000, he will step from the train at Zion City next week to punish his enemies and then to lead the faithful to the promised land—Mexico. It is said that a miracle will be performed when the prophet arrives. A great flash of fire is to rend the heavens and crush the unbelievers. In the message he sent he said he was a greater man than his followers ever believed him to be.

All these threats are taken in Zion to mean that Dowie hopes to scare his detractors into silence as to his past doings. By way of reply to the Moses-with-the-scroll and flash-of-fire threat, the new rulers in Zion dug into Dowie's past again to-day and showed the miracle-maker up as a plain Wall Street gambler, a lamb who was shorn to the quick in the stock slump of 1903.

An examination of Dowie's papers shows that he lost fully $1,200,000 in Wall Street in the 1903-04 slump. In February, March and April of that year he dealt in the following stocks: Ontario & Western 400 shares, Southern Pacific 700 shares, Union Pacific 2,000 shares, Missouri Pacific 300 shares, United States Steel preferred 2,000 shares, Amalgamated Copper 2,000 shares. All these shares were sold out at heavy loss.

Dowie, it is said, still owes $48,000 to his New York brokers. It is declared that he opened accounts with four stock brokerage houses, and that three of them went out of existence soon after he had deposited margins for the protection of his deals. It was agreed that a 20 per cent. margin be kept good, and all differences were to be settled every Saturday by telegraph draft drawn on a special account opened for the purpose with one of the branches of the London City and Midland Bank, London, and regulated by a man named Oofa Wilson.

In the prayer meeting to-day Mrs. Dowie asked for prayers for "my dear husband." He had sinned, but it was the work of an unclean spirit. It is said, however, that she and her son stand firm in their resolve to pull the prophet down from his high station. If he doesn't come down peacefully there will be trouble.

Among the stories from Mexico is one to the effect that Dowie is coming with $10,000,000 in cash, and that he has asked President Roosevelt to give him an escort of Federal troops. This is the same money, so Gladstone says, that his father imagined he would get while in Jamaica. The son says that his father had a hallucination that he was settling the Morocco trouble for Germany and France, and that he was to get $10,000,000 in cash. Roosevelt was helping him, he thought.

MEXICO CITY, April 6.—John Alexander Dowie, before leaving last night for Chicago, showed deep emotion in replying to a question as to how the revolt in Zion City could be explained.

"It is merely a guess, and I may be wrong, but I think I am right. They, my wife and son, and all of them, thought I was going to die, and have been deeply disappointed. Apparently I am going to live, and I am on my way back home.

"They have done many things that were not right, not that they were crimes so much as blunder; unwillful departures from my policy. We were generous to them in every way, but they were not generous to us. I lent them, for instance, some resources that I had control of and gave them money to help them in Zion City. One of the falsehoods they are telling is that I am deeply indebted to my bank. It is not true. I am the largest holder of stock in the bank, and when the bank has been in need I have always been ready to help it. I may now say openly that what I could have taken from the bank legitimately I did not take. They have succeeded in making the people think suddenly that I was a cruel tyrant because I did not want this young man (Deacon Granger) to continue in office. I make a rule not to have incompetents in office.

"To-day's paper says that I am threatened with arrest if I dare to go back. Back I go, back if I die upon the road. If I have done anything wong, let me be punished. They say I have misused funds. It funds are placed in my hands for a number of years, I have a right to use them; but I don't misuse them. I have $21,000,000 of estate behind all obligations of Zion after everything is accounted for. How can they remove me? How could anybody remove the President whom the people put there? It is ridiculous. Nobody less in office can remove one higher in office."

Boardman Will Disposes of $900,000 to Friends and for Charity.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 6.—Legacies amounting to about $900,000 were made public when the will of the late Mrs. Lucy C. Boardman, widow of Judge W. W. Boardman, was offered for probate this afternoon. During her widowhood Mrs. Boardman gave away $750,000 to charitable institutions. Among the larger bequests are $100,000 to relatives and friends whose names she desired withheld, $20,000 to household servants, $175,000 to build and maintain a new general hospital here, $20,000 to Yale, $50,000 to Trinity College, Hartford, for a Boardman historical museum; $25,000 to Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown; $10,000 to Tuskegee Institute, $50,000 to the Episcopal Missionary Society, which body also will divide with Trinity College the residue of the estate, which is expected to be $150,000. Many large gifts are also made to local charities.

COURT COULDN'T GET POLICE.

Magistrate Wouldn't Sit Because He Feared Prisoners Would Escape.

Because the Police Department failed to detail what he considered a sufficient force of policemen for duty in court, Magistrate Furlong, in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon abruptly adjourned court, declaring that he would not take the risk of allowing the escape of prisoners awaiting arraignment.

At the afternoon session of the court the four policemen on duty there informed the Magistrate that they had been ordered to go to the Thirteenth Regiment Armory to drill for the coming police parade. The Magistrate then called up the office of Deputy Commissioner O'Keefe and asked that policemen be sent to court to take the places of those being relieved. In a little while three policemen from the Gates Avenue Station reported.

"There is one shy," said the Magistrate, and he again called up the Deputy Commissioner's office on the telephone.

When he returned to the bench the Magistrate announced that he would adjourn court.

"I will not assume the risk of the escape of prisoners because of any official's folly," said the Magistrate.

Deputy Commissioner O'Keefe expressed astonishment that Magistrate Furlong had taken such action.

"Why," said he, "the Magistrate did not speak to me personally about the matter at all. He talked to Sergt. Rathsgeber of my office, asking that policemen to be sent to relieve those called to drill. As at that time of the day most of the court's business had been disposed of, we considered three policemen more than enough. We did the best we could for him, and I am astonished that he should make such a return of our courtesy."

ARRESTED AT THE WALDORF.

Guests Say Johnson Was There on the Day They Were Robbed.

Among the twenty-three prisoners lined up as suspicious persons at Police Headquarters by Inspector McLaughlin's detectives yesterday morning was one man the police had never seen before. He described himself as Henry J. Johnson, 38 years old, and said he was an engineer residing at the corner of Hudson and West Tenth Streets.

Johnson was arrested in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel by "Scotland Yard" Smith, the hotel detective, who turned him over to Detective Sergeants Sullivan and Snyder. When arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court Johnson declared that he was innocent of any wrongdoing, but he did not explain why he had been walking about the upper floors of the hotel Thursday night.

The hotel detective said that Johnson had first been seen in the hotel on Feb. 24, on which day the rooms of three guests had been entered by some one who carried away silverware, jewelry, and cash. Johnson denied that he had ever been in the hotel before last Thursday night, but the detective produced three hotel guests who identified Johnson as the man they had seen on Feb. 28 loitering about the hotel café and telephone booths.

Detectives from Headquarters asked Magistrate Steinert in the Tombs Court to remand Johnson to their custody until they had had a chance to learn something more about him, and the Magistrate remanded him until Sunday in default of $1,000 bail.

Then the detectives went to Tenth and Hudson Streets, where Johnson had been living for a few weeks in a room over a saloon. They searched the room and found some pawn tickets for jewelry, but were unable to learn whether Johnson or some one else owned the jewelry.

COSMIDES'S BAIL RAISED.

Though Goslin's Alleged Accomplice Had a Bondsman Ready.

Having set next Tuesday for the hearing of Cristo Cosmides, alleged accomplice of the missing swindler, Alfred R. Goslin, Magistrate Wahle raised the prisoner's bail yesterday from $5,000 to $10,000. As the change was made after the closing of the City Chamberlain's office, and Assistant District Attorney Lockwood insisted on taking the forty-eight hours allowed the District Attorney by law for the examination of any offered security, Cosmides had to go to the Tombs over night, although he had a bondsman ready to give $20,000 cash bail.

An affidavit was filed at the District Attorney's office yesterday by Isaac Schwartz, setting forth that he lost $1,800 by entering into a contract with Bernhard Uhran, another of Goslin's alleged accomplices, for the building of a garage in Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn. The contract was concluded in the presence of a man introduced as "Matthews," who, according to the District Attorney's information, was Goslin again.

Schwartz says he was told that the lot on which he started to build the garage was free of incumbrance, but when he had the title searched he found the property saddled with a $3,000 mortgage made out to Anne Irene Magher. Miss Magher was Goslin's stenographer.

KNIFE FOR KINGDON GOULD.

He Undergoes a Successful Operation for Appendicitis.

Kingdon Gould, the oldest son of George Gould, was operated on for appendicitis at 2 o'clock Thursday morning at the family city residence, Fifth Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street. He was considered to be out of danger yesterday afternoon. Dr. William B. Anderton, the family physician, said that the patient had fully recovered from the shock, and that his temperature was normal. The operation was performed by Dr. William T. Bull, assisted by Dr. Anderton.

The young man, who was ill with measles at the same time as his sister Margery, was able to leave his sick room a week ago Monday. Since then he had been regaining his strength at the family home at Lakewood, and last Saturday and Monday he had so far recovered as to be able to play polo. He returned to New York Tuesday morning, and resumed his studies at Columbia University, where he is a sophomore. Wednesday morning he complained of being ill.

Dr. Anderton, after an examination, decided that he was suffering from acute appendicitis. Dr. Bull was called Wednesday night, and he said that an operation was imperative.

Dr. Anderton said last night that his patient would be able to return to his studies at Columbia in about three weeks.

Mr. Gould and his son, Jay Gould, came to this city with Kingdon Gould Tuesday, and Mrs. Gould came up from Lakewood Thursday, after hearing of her son's illness.

Laying Wooden Block Pavements.

Workmen began tearing up Broadway yesterday, from Bowling Green to Vesey Street, taking away the cobblestones and replacing them with the noiseless wooden blocks such as are soon to be laid in many of the downtown streets. Broadway from Thirteenth Street to Columbus Circle is also to have this new kind of paving block.

LITTLE BOY KILLED BY BAUDOUINE'S AUTO

Ran Child Down While Avoiding the Lad's Brother.

WOMEN COMPANIONS FLEE

Former Woolen Importer Weeps When He Shoulders Responsibility for Fatal Accident at Jamaica.

Two children at play were run down on the Hoffman Boulevard, in Jamaica, L. I., yesterday by John F. Baudouine's big touring car. One of them died a few minutes after being hit by the automobile. Mr. Baudouine, who is a well-known yachtsman and whip, was driving the machine.

According to the witnesses, he did all in his power to prevent the accident, but in steering the car to avoid hitting one child he ran down the other. Two women were in the car. They sprang out and ran into the neighboring woods.

Mr. Baudouine was arrested and later paroled pending an inquest. The dead child is Joseph Mainet, 5 years old, whose parents live on Augustine Avenue, just east of the Hoffman Boulevard. Joseph, with his seven-year-old brother, John, was "playing horse." Joseph was playing the part of the horse, and with a piece of rope over his shoulders ran in front of his brother, who played "driver." They ran in the roadway from their home to the Boulevard, which, as usual, was crowded with automobiles and wagons. Two wagons were passing in opposite directions when the boys reached the Boulevard. The children ran around the tailboard of one wagon, and passed the noses of the team drawing the other, when Mr. Baudouine's automobile came along.

The children did not discover their danger until they were directly in front of the machine. Mr. Baudouine shut off the power, applied the brake, and steered toward the east side of the road as he saw one of the boys turn to the west. He took the risk of wrecking his machine upon a pile of granite blocks on the roadside, and would have killed both boys but for the fact that he steered quickly. As the car bore down on Joseph, John fell in the roadway. The wheels of the machine just grazed his arm. The car passed a few feet after running over Joseph before it was brought to a full stop. Jumping from the automobile Mr. Baudouine ran back and picked up Joseph, who was dying.

The young women in the machine immediately ran into the woods back of Maple Grove Cemetery.

The mother of the boys ran to the scene, only to find Joseph dead. With an ambulance which had been summoned came Detectives McDonald and Wooley. Mr. Baudouine and his chauffeur stood in the roadway, waiting to be arrested. Several automobiles stopped, and in one of them came the Coroner, who ordered the boy's body removed to the police station.

The detectives climbed into Mr. Baudouine's automobile and accompanied him and his chauffeur to the Rockaway Court, where Mr. Baudouine was arraigned before Magistrate Connorton. Mr. Baudouine wept as he declared that he, and not his chauffeur, was in charge of the car at the time of the accident. After hearing the story Magistrate Connorton held Mr. Baudouine for examination on a charge of homicide, and then paroled him until April 27 pending the holding of the inquest. With his chauffeur Mr. Baudouine started back to his home in Mamaroneck. The women who were in the automobile at the time of the accident will be required to appear at the inquest at witnesses.

Mr. Baudouine has had a heap of trouble to contend with since his woolen importing firm became insolvent. His wife, who was Mai Alden Chatterton of Larchmont, left him two years after their marriage. They were married in 1900, notwithstanding the opposition of the young woman's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Chatterton. Two years later they signed articles of agreement to separate. Then young Mrs. Baudouine sued for a legal separation, but his attorney had the complaint dismissed by Justice Dickey in the Supreme Court at White Plains in 1904, as Mrs. Baudouine failed to appear to testify.

Mr. Baudouine, who has an income of $30,000 from a trust fund bequeathed to him by his grandfather, was before a referee in bankruptcy a few years ago, and at that time testified that the six horses and twelve vehicles which he kept for the use of his family ate up all of his income. The firm known as John F. Baudouine & Co. terminated in 1899, after which Mr. Baudouine filed his bankruptcy petition. He is a member of the New York Yacht Club, the Larchmont, the New York Athletic, Democratic, and Lotos Clubs. He lives in a beautiful mansion overlooking the Sound at Orienta Point.

ODELL DENIES RUMORS.

Not to Hasten a Test of His Leadership, He Says.

Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee was interested yesterday in reports concerning the long-deferred "reorganization" of the State Committee.

"Most interesting, but absolutely untrue," was his comment on the report from Albany to the effect that he had told his friends he was determined to call the committee together at once and show that his control was unimpaired.

"Yes, I have read all of the reports," said the Chairman, smiling as he came from the State Committee headquarters, where he had been in consultation with many of his followers on the reapportionment plan. "They are interesting if true."

"Well, are they untrue?" he was asked.

"Absolutely untrue," he said.

During the afternoon Odell saw several district leaders, including Abraham Gruber and John H. Gunner, who had been supporters of Chairman Parsons of the County Committee on his apportionment plan. Apparently they had become converts to the Odell plan.

"I have looked them over," Mr. Gruber said last night, "and I believe the Odell plan to be the better one."

Chairman Parsons was in the city yesterday, but returned to Washington at night. The special meeting of the Executive Committee of the County Committee will be called for Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Paylor were away from home, and their four children were asleep on the third floor. Neighbors rescued three.

liberal thought to whom the oppressed people looked as their future delegates to the National Assembly have either been killed, cast into prison, sent to Siberia, or into voluntary exile.

"Others have gone into hiding because they would not be party to such a farce as running for the Douma and being defeated. The Government has placed in the hands of the officers supervising the elections in the provinces a list containing the names of candidates that must be elected. Some tool of the Government places them in nomination and the people are either coerced into voting for them or where this is impracticable they are declared elected on fraudulent counts."

"But how do you account for the liberal victory in the St. Petersburg election?"

"In the large cities where public opinion is better crystalized and under more competent leadership, the Government cannot commit the same outrages as in the country districts where there is a lack of such leadership. Especially is this true of St. Petersburg, which besides in a sense is under the keen gaze of the outside world. But the Douma will in no sense be a body representative of anything except the existing Government, and few of the people in Russia are fools enough to believe it will be. We are keeping the peasants and the people at large well informed on this subject through our underground channels.

"When M. Witte returned from the United States after the conclusion of peace and took up the reins of Government, our hopes centred in him for a time, for we looked upon him as another Moses, who had had a glimpse of the Promised Land. One of my friends had a talk with him and held out to him an offer of the co-operation of all the revolutionary organizations in his plans of reform, on the condition that we were granted freedom of speech and the right of meeting in public. He assented, but he kept none of his promises.

Says the Czar Is Insane.

"M. Witte undoubtedly meant well," said M. Narodny, "but the trouble with him is that he lacks character and backbone. He is as completely in the hands of the Grand Ducal ring as is the Czar. We do not blame all the excesses and outrages on the Czar even. He is undoubtedly a young man with kindly disposition. But the tragedy of the Romanoffs seems to have culminated in him. He is insane—else things might have been different."

The leaders of the revolutionary movement at this moment are scattered all over Europe, but all will return the moment they get the signal from Russia that everything is in readiness for the raising of the flag of rebellion. The three men who, when M. Gorky has arrived, will be in this country are among the most important men in the movement. Forty officers—members of the Military Revolutionists—have established headquarters in Stockholm, from which port they can make a swift dash across the Baltic to Finland when the tocsin proclaims the hour.

Twenty agents are at work in Finland, where the start probably will be made. Another colony of revolutionists, representing the flower of the Russian intellectuals are laying plans for Russia's new birth on the shores of Lake Geneva in Switzerland. Paris, Berlin, and London each harbors a group intent upon collecting funds from the friends of freedom in France, Germany, and Great Britain. When M. Gorky comes to this country he will be fresh from the revolutionary headquarters in Zürich, Switzerland.

In the meantime the active management of affairs in Russia is in the hands of a General—a member of the General Staff who secretly has joined the revolutionists; a representative of the peasant organization, and a professor who holds the Chair of Jurisprudence at one of the large universities.

Gen. Trepoff's Daughter a Worker.

"One of the most active workers in Russia," said M. Narodny, "is a daughter of Gen Trepoff. Her whereabouts is kept a strict secret by her revolutionary brethren. The General himself, in the meantime, is in Germany for his health, though this fact is not generally known among the people outside of revolutionary circles. There is some doubt whether he will ever be permitted to set his foot on Russian soil again and live."

The work demanding most attention on the part of the revolutionary leaders in Russia just now is the organization and fitting out of the revolutionary army. This is known as the "People's Guards." It is part of the underground movement. Every one willing to take up a musket and join the fight for freedom is accepted unless he should be needed for other duties. It is to provide arms and ammunition for these soldiers that the revolutionary leaders are now soliciting funds from friends of human freedom all over the world.

"I saw an example of how far-reaching the revolutionary movement in Russia is at the time of the Cronstadt uprising last October," said M. Narodny. "I was in Berlin when I received a telegram informing me that sixteen soldiers had been arrested and sentenced to be shot on a mere suspicion, and asking me to go to Cronstadt immediately and head a demonstration to set them free.

"I started immediately for Riga. When I reached that city a general strike was in progress. I went tot the headquarters of the revolutionists and told them of my mission and my urgent need of reaching Cronstadt in time. Not a wheel was turning on a Russian railroad at the time, but the Riga revolutionists swiftly arranged with the Strike Committee for a special train to take me to Reval, a seaport within four hours sail of Cronstadt. When I reached Reval that evening a gunboat manned with marines and officers belonging to our organization was waiting with steam up to take me to Cronstadt.

"When we reached Cronstadt the officers of the garrison were at the Army and Navy Club drinking. Forty thousand soldiers rushed from their barracks in the middle of the night, with flags and with bands playing 'The Marseillaise.' The officers fled, the soldiers were released, and after this purpose had been attained the garrison again quieted down, for we had no desire to go any further and could have served no useful purpose by doing so."

DAY AND NIGHT BANK MAY 1.

Money at Any Hour Then—for Those Who Have It.

After May 1 a man may draw out his money and spend it at any hour of the twenty-four—if he have an account with the Day and Night Bank. This institution presents not only universal conveniences for drawing-out purposes, Second Vice President G. M. Wynkoop points out, but also equal conveniences for putting away inconvenient amounts of money that may be accumulated after 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Cabbies and waiters who grow rich at night may pass by the bank on their way home at 3 A. M. and leave their accumulations.

The men behind the new banking idea determined to do things thoroughly, and so they prepared for day and night safety deposit vaults in the basement of the new twelve-story building at Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, which has been constructed by the men behind the bank. Thus cash, jewelry, or other valuables may be stowed away or drawn out at any hour of the twenty-four.

Mr. Wynkoop, the executive head of the new institution, says he didn't originate the idea.

"This new institution is absolutely the only one of its kind in the world," he remarked yesterday. "Maybe there wasn't room for such an institution here five years ago; we believe there is now. No little fun has been poked at us, but I'll bet that within a few years every bank for fifteen blocks north of Fourteenth Street will have a night extension of its business.

"The all-night idea at first had a sort of Tenderloin flavor. But, seriously, we are simply proposing to start a solid bank like any other institution of its kind, but to have a night extension to meet emergencies of our patrons."

There will be a reception in the new bank building on the night of April 30, and the bank and deposit vaults will be formally opened for business May 1. Oakleigh Thorne is President of the new institution, J. W. Harriman Vice President, G. M. Wynkoop Vice President and executive head; Harrison K. Bird cashier and Secretary. Some of the Directors are Oliver H. P. Belmont, Frank Gray Griswold, J. Borden Harriman, Edward H. Harriman, J. W. Harriman, James S. Kuhn, John C. Tomlinson, and Myron T. Herrick.

Mr. Wynkoop says that there will be three shifts of clerks. And those working from midnight to 8 will receive no more pay than the others.

COURT MAKES A NEW RULING.

It Bears on Consents Necessary to Allow Railroads to Lay Tracks.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down a decision yesterday reversing an order of the Supreme Court in the case of Frederick P. Fox and Edward J. Keogh against the New York City Interborough Railway Company. The order continued a temporary injunction pending the trial of the action restraining the company from constructing its street street surface railroad in 200th Street, between Jerome Avenue and the Southern Boulevard, in the Bronx. The order is now reversed and the motion for an injunction denied.

The plaintiff contended that only part of the value of property fronting 200th Street and owned by the Ursuline Convent should be considered in deciding whether enough consents of property owners had been obtained by the railroad. The convent's property has only a small frontage on 200th Street, in comparison with its total area.

Justice Clarke, who writes the opinion, says:

"We believe it to have been the intention of the Legislature, and we announce it as the rule of law, that in considering the question of the valuation of property for the purpose of determining whether the necessary consents have been obtained, the value of each entire parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, as appearing upon the assessment roll for the appropriate year is final and conclusive."

All the Justices concur.

In the Nursery

Surely no soap is too fine, too gentle, too wholesomely good, for baby's tender skin.

There are particular reasons why Pond's Extract Soap and Pond's Extract Soap only should be used in the little one's daily bath.

Pond's Extract Soap is a perfect cleanser. It gently and thoroughly searches out every impurity, clears and refreshes.

But it does more than cleanse.

Pond's Extract Soap

—because of the Pond's Extract which it contains—is a most effective stimulus to the growing skin, allays irritation and creates that soft firmness that resists harm.

Nothing like Pond's Extract Soap to instill the "habit of cleanliness" from infancy. Baby rejoices in the morning splash; emerges from it happy, crowing, clean and sweet-as-a-rosebud.

SOFT COAL PEACE NOW IN WEST PENNSYLVANIA

Independent Owners Decide to Give Up the Struggle.

ANTHRACITE OUTLOOK BAD

Miners Fear Rejection of Arbitration Proposal, Though Mitchell Professes to be Hopeful.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—Peace is now assured in the miners' situation, so far as the soft coal fields of Western Pennsylvania are concerned. The organization of the independent operators who were holding out against granting the advance demanded by the miners decided at a meeting to-night to give up the struggle and sign the scale. All those at the meeting were representatives of operators who had bound themselves not to sign the scale.

A number of other members were wavering as to entering the agreement. These latter were not present, but it was assured that they, too, would sign upon learning of the action of the meeting to-night. At the conclusion of the proceedings the following statement was given out:

"A large number of the independent operators of the Pittsburg district have signified their intention of signing the 1903 scale in justice to their customers. In so doing they fully believe that the action taken by the joint convention in January at Indianapolis was the correct position to take in view of the conditions of the coal trade for the past two years. They believe that conditions have in no way changed since that January convention that would warrant an advance in the wage scale at this time. Mr. Robbins, Chairman of the Pittsburg Coal Company, at that convention and at the recent convention, stated that conditions did not justify an advance in the wage scale.

"The independent operators further believe that in signing this scale it may work an injury to the Pittsburg district. It may have the effect of ultimately establishing a differential against the Pittsburg district in favor of the Western States, and by increasing the wage scale in a depressed market and against the conditions of the coal trade it may ultimately work an injury to the miners' organization itself."

By Monday it is believed all signs of the shut-down of the mines in this district will be over, at least in the mines for which the scale has been signed. The men will go back to work, sulkily, it is true; but they will go back. Missionaries in the shape of district officials and organizers are out among them explaining the situation. Many returned to duty to-day, and the Pittsburg Coal Company was able to operate nearly all of its mines. About 8,000 to 10,000 men out of the 20,000 affected were estimated to be at work to-day.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 6.—A meeting of the Independent Anthracite Coal Operators' Association was held in this city to-day. Thirty operators, representing the independent mine owners of the entire anthracite region, were present. President H. H. Ashley of Wilkesbarre presided. The object of the meeting was to consider the present anthracite situation and the progress of negotiations at New York.

J. L. Cake of West Pittston, the representative of the independent operators at the first conference in New York, and subsequently appointed one of the sub-committee of seven to deal with the miners' sub-committee of a like number, was present, and made his report of the conferences that have already been held.

Just what action was taken by the association could not be learned, as neither the officers nor members would say a word about its proceedings, save that the meeting had adjourned to convene again at the call of the chair.

SCRANTON, Penn., April 6.—It was learned here to-night on indisputable authority that the independent operators in session at Wilkesbarre to-day decided against the acceptance of the arbitration proposition made by President John Mitchell. While some of them said they would have favored its acceptance had it been made before the cessation order was issued, they were practically unanimous in opposing its acceptance at the present time.

HARD COAL MEN PESSIMISTIC.

Mitchell's Arbitration Plan Rejected by the Independents.

In order to prepare for their conference with the Anthracite Miners' Committee of Seven on Monday the operators' Committee of Seven will meet to-day in the office of one of the coal-carrying companies to outline a reply to the arbitration proposition of President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers.

None of the coal Presidents would indicate yesterday what the attitude of the operators will be in reference to the arbitration proposition. The general belief was that, as submitted by Mitchell, it will be refused on the ground that there is nothing to arbitrate in the demands, but that the operators may be willing to arbitrate the contention of the miners that there is something new which was not covered by the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission.

The pamphlet issued by President Willcox of the Delaware and Hudson Company on Thursday, in which he says that the only question open is whether there are any new facts to raise, new questions not covered by the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission, is regarded as official. Mr. Willcox answers the question himself by saying that such new facts have not been brought to public attention.

President Baer of the Jersey Central Company, who was in Philadelphia yesterday, authorized a contradiction over the long-distance telephone of a dispatch quoting him as saying that he had canvassed the operators and found that they were opposed to arbitration.

The miners Scale Committee of Thirty-six left New York for their homes yesterday with the exception of Mitchell, but will all be on hand on Monday, when the conference with the operators takes place. Mitchell was asked if he thought the anthracite operators' Committee of Seven would agree to arbitration.

"I believe they will," he said. "I would not have proposed arbitration if I had not hoped that the proposition would be agreed to."

WESTERN OWNERS' OFFER.

Wire the President and Mitchell, Proposing Arbitration.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 6.—John H. Winder, President of the Bituminous Operators of Ohio, has proposed arbitration for the settlement of the strike in the bituminous district, including Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Indiana, and Illinois. To-day he sent the following telegram from Charleston, West Va., to President Roosevelt and to President Mitchell of the Miners' Union:

> I propose that, subject to the approval of a convention of the bituminous operators of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, which shall be called at the earliest date possible, the differences between us be referred for determination and settlement to a board of arbitration composed of the members of the present Board of Conciliation provided for in the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, with Judge Gray or any person he may appoint to act as chairman and umpire; the decision of this tribunal, or the majority of members thereof, in so far as it influences wages, to be effective from April 1, 1906, and to continue in force until March 31, 1908, which decision is to be final and binding on all parties interested; the employes of the bituminous mines in the territory named to resume work immediately and to continue at work pending the decision of said board.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—President Roosevelt has received a telegram from John H. Winder, President of the bituminous operators of Ohio, a duplicate of which was sent to President Mitchell of the miners' union, proposing arbitration. At the White House to-day it was stated that the telegram was sent to the President for his information; that no reply is expected, and none will be sent.

Mitchell yesterday sent the following reply to the telegram from John H. Winder, President of the Ohio Operators' Association, proposing arbitration:

> Telegram forwarded from Indianapolis received New York City. I have no authority either to accept or decline the proposition you make to arbitrate differences between bituminous operators and miners. The International Executive Board United Mine Workers of America will convene at Indianapolis the 17th inst., at which time your telegram will be laid before it and the decision communicated to you.

Mitchell, as he gave out this reply, remarked in reference to Mr. Winder's proposition that he liked Mr. Winder's literary style. As a matter of fact, the wording of Mr. Winder's arbitration proposition is strikingly like the wording of Mitchell's arbitration proposition to the operators.

Miner Shot Dead at Greensburg.

GREENSBURG, Penn., April 6.—John Wessel, a striking miner, was shot and killed to-night while going from his home to an outbuilding. It is not known who fired the shots. Wessel, it is alleged, promised to go to work to-morrow morning. The shooting has created great consternation. The Sheriff is gathering together deputies to-night, and will rush them to the coal works when they are called for.

PILGRIMS HONOR CURZON.

Dinner in London—Ex-Viceroy Wishes Us Success in Philippines.

LONDON, April 6.—The Pilgrims' Society to-night gave a banquet at the Savoy to Lord Curzon of Kedleston in honor of the conclusion of his service as Viceroy of India. Lord Roberts presided, and among the distinguished guests were the following:

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, the German Ambassador, the Lord Chancellor, Lords Milner, George Hamilton, Goschen, Esher, Ampthill, Allerton, Fairfax, Strathcona, Durham, Kinnaird, Leigh, Wenlock, Stalbridge, Methuen, Kilmorey, Essex, and Castlereagh, Sir Conan Doyle, Gen. Sir John French, Winston Churchill, Alfred Lyttelton, Moberly Bell, Henry Norman, and H. Rider Haggard.

Lord Roberts proposed a toast to King Edward and President Roosevelt, which was enthusiastically received.

Lord George Hamilton, in offering a toast to Lord Curzon, praised his services to the empire.

Lord Curzon, in responding, made a notable speech. He referred to the Philippine Islands, and expressed the hope that the Americans would achieve there the same measure of success which Great Britain had gained in India.

Mr. Justice Darling proposed "The Guests," and Lord Ampthill and Sir Thomas Shaughnessy responded. There were frequent references to the Pilgrims' dinner in New York in honor of Earl Grey. All the speakers expressed the hope that these dinners marked a new and important era of closer relations between the Anglo-Saxon peoples.

In the course of his short speech Mr. Justice Darling said he was glad to learn that Lord Grey was returning to the United States a portrait of Benjamin Franklin which was captured in the War of Independence. The speaker was greeted with shouts of laughter when he suggested that the Americans might reciprocate by returning what they had won as the result of that war.

MESSENGER BOY DECISION.

Man Who Lost $500 Not Entitled to Recovery, Says Court.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down a decision reversing the decision of the City Court in the case of Morris J. Hirsch against the American District Telegraph Company.

The suit was for the recovery of $500 intrusted by Joseph S. Jantzen to a messenger boy at the office 845 Broadway on Feb. 16, 1904, to be taken to the Rutherford National Bank, at Rutherford, N. J. The plaintiff obtained judgment.

Justice Ingraham, who wrote the opinion, held that the evidence did not show that there was a special agreement by the defendant corporation to deliver that particular package to the bank, and therefore no verdict would hold. Jantzen had refused two boys offered, and a Mr. Hegel, who had charge of the messenger office, told him a third was the Sergeant and was all right, but the court holds that this did not constitute a specific contract.

BI-PARTISAN POLICE BOARD.

Bills Introduced by Tammany Legislators at Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 6.—Senator Frawley and Assemblyman La Fetra, both Tammany men, introduced bills to-day to create a bi-partisan Police Board of four in New York City, the members to be appointed by the Mayor and to hold office until 1913.

The bills provide a salary of $7,000 for the President of the board and $6,000 for the other three members.

Several prominent local politicians denied last night that they knew anything about the plan.

WASHINGTON BUST FOR CITY.

Jefferson M. Levy's Gift Arrives on the Steamship St. Laurent.

On the steamship St. Laurent, which arrived yesterday, there came a replica of the bust of George Washington presented by Jefferson M. Levy to the City of New York. The original cast made by David d'Angers is now owned by his daughter, Mme. La Ferme, and is exhibited in the musée in the Town of Angers.

There have been two replicas of the original cast made. The first was destroyed by fire. This one is the work of Louis Noel, the Parisian sculptor. The gift to the city was accepted and approved by the Municipal Art Commission on Feb. 5.

The bust is about thirty inches high and made of bronze; the pedestal, of marble, stands about six feet, making the total height about eight feet six inches.

SET-BACK FOR DEUEL BY APPELLATE DIVISION

Says He Can't Engage in Business and Remain a Justice.

OVERRULES HIS OBJECTIONS

Deuel Must Answer Jerome Removal Petition in Ten Days—Talk of Cornell as His Successor.

"This respondent can engage at any time in any business that he sees fit by resigning his position as a Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, but as long as he holds that position he must comply with the statute," were the words employed by the Justices of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, yesterday, in a decision overruling the objections of Justice Deuel of Special Sessions to the petition for his removal from the bench filed by District Attorney Jerome, Edward M. Shepard, and James W. Osborne. Ten days are allowed Justice Deuel in which to prepare his answer.

The removal petition is based on the admissions made on the witness stand by Justice Deuel during the trial of Editor Norman Hapgood of Collier's Weekly for criminal libel. In his objection to the petition the Justice contended that the provision of the statute forbidding Justices of Special Sessions to engage in other business was unconstitutional. After quoting the statutes creating Special Sessions and defining the duties of the Justice, as well as those giving the Appellate Division power to remove judicial officers from the bench, the Appellate Division's decision said:

"We think that these charges present a situation which requires that this court should take cognizance of them and that the defendant should be required to answer. The respondent raises a point as to the constitutionality of the provision that a Justice of the Court of Special Sessions shall not carry on any business; but we think it clear that the Legislature that created the court and provided for the appointment of the Justices thereof had authority to provide for the qualifications of the Justices to be appointed and to regulate their proceedings while in office.

"There was nothing that required any particular individual to become a Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, and nothing that invaded any of the constitutional rights of any individual, but any one who accepted an appointment as a Justice of the Court of Special Sessions was bound to comply with the provisions of the statute while holding the office. This respondent can engage at any time in any business he sees fit by resigning his position as a Justice of the Court of Special Sessions, but as long as he holds that position he must comply with the statute.

"The other objections taken by the respondent to the petition should not be discussed at this time. After the answer of the respondent is filed, the question will then be presented as to the subsequent proceedings, which can be determined when it arises. The objection of the respondent to the petition is therefore overruled, and the respondent is required to answer within ten days."

It was said yesterday that the likelihood is that the Appellate Division will appoint a referee to take evidence as soon as Justice Deuel has filed his reply, but it is impossible, it was also said, in view of the character of the evidence filed in support of the petition for Justice Deuel's removal, that the court may take action immediately without referring the case to a referee.

Several judicial changes are in contemplation at City Hall, and will be put into effect by Mayor McClellan should Justice Deuel leave the Special Sessions bench, either by resignation or by removal. City Magistrate Cornell is understood to be in line for the promotion to the Special Sessions bench.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Herman Stiefel, who is in charge of the Bureau of Penalties, is slated for the Police Court bench to succeed Magistrate Cornell, if the later is promoted. Mr. Stiefel comes from the Sixteenth Assembly District, and has been an Assistant Corporation Counsel for twenty-two years. When Mayor McClellan was Treasurer of the Brooklyn Bridge, Mr. Stiefel was assigned to him as counsel.

SHOT HIS GIRL WIFE.

Then Forster Shot Himself—He Dies, but She Will Recover.

Mrs. Margaret Forster, the sixteen-year-old wife of Walter Forster, an upholsterer, 18 years old, of 180 Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, was shot yesterday at the home of her father, George F. Kern, a veterinary surgeon, at 207 Eldert Street, by her husband, who then shot himself. Forster had failed to persuade his wife to become reconciled to him. He was taken to the German Hospital, where he died. The girl will recover.

The couple were married eight months ago, and in February, after a disagreement, they broke up housekeeping, and Mrs. Forster went back to her parents. She had her husband arrested for non-support, and the hearing in court was adjourned until next Monday. Forster went to his wife's home yesterday. At first she refused to have anything further to do with him, but finally she consented to a reconciliation on his promise to support her.

Suddenly Forster asked his wife to kiss him, and shouted that he had determined that both should die. Then he drew a revolver, and as he fired a shot at his wife she threw up her left arm to protect her face. The bullet went through her arm, and, striking her chin, was deflected, and fell to the floor. The girl ran screaming to the kitchen. Then her husband shot himself in the temple.

Mrs. Forster says she married Forster because he threatened to kill her if she didn't.

Wives Quarrel, Husband Killed.

William Murtha, a laborer of 141 West Ninetieth Street, and William Gartland, a driver of 149 the same street, got into a fight last night over some words that had passed between their wives. Murtha was the smaller man and got the worst of it by far, being so badly beaten and kicked about the head by Gartland that he had to be taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital. There he died about 10 o'clock last night. Gartland was locked up in the West 100th Street Station on a charge of murder.

Typhoid Outbreak in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—Fifty-six more cases of typhoid fever were reported in the last twenty-four hours in this city, a total of 171 cases in three days. The outbreak is attributed to the swollen condition of the local rivers. The city bacteriologist predicts an increase in the number of cases before the floods subside.

MARTINE PAROLED.

Friends Intercede for Society Entertainer Who Stole.

On the recommendation of the attorney for the complaining witness, the Justices of Special Sessions paroled yesterday John Wilmer Martine, who had pleaded guilty to stealing a polo shirt from his employers, F. A. McLaughlin & Co. of 304 Fifth Avenue. The case attracted attention because Martine has been well known in social circles as a clever contortionist, his ability procuring for him the nickname of "the human snake."

Probation Officer Graveur told the court that the real name of Martine was William Rauschenbach, and that he was born in Baltimore 27 years ago. Losing his parents when two years old, he was brought up in the German Orphan Asylum of that city. While working as a gardener on the estate of the late F. A. Alliger at Orange, N. J., he won his employer's favor to such an extent that he was made his private secretary. From that time dated his social rise, in the course of which, according to Graveur, Martine became a friend of Senator Mason of Illinois, and, according to some reports, was engaged to his daughter, Miss Ruth Mason. That engagement was broken.

The court received letters from many friends of the defendant, among them being one from Henry Erkins of Henry Erkins & Co., decorators, who offered Martine employment, and wrote:

"I don't doubt that Jack (Martine) did not pay for some of the articles he wore. McLaughlin should have known this, too, as he went to Europe with him, and saw him every day and knew what salary he was getting."

Coroners Must Hustle Now.

Inspector McClusky, commanding the Bronx police precincts, informed Chief Clerk Austin of the Bronx Coroners' office yesterday that the police, by order of Commissioner Bingham, will furnish no more written reports of homicide or fatality cases to the Coroners' office, as has been done in the past. The Coroners or their clerks will have to get the details in such cases.

BADLY HURT BY MOTOR CAR.

Laborer Run Over by Mrs. Fisher's Auto Will Probably Die.

A motor car accident, which will probably cost a life, happened at Flushing yesterday. A car in which were Mrs. Clarke Fisher of Whitestone Avenue, Flushing, and Albert Meyers, her chauffeur, was traveling eastward along Jackson Avenue from Long Island City, when an Italian laborer suddenly stepped into the middle of the road. He was knocked down, and the wheels rolled over him.

The man waas removed as quickly as possible to the Flushing Hospital, but his recovery is considered impossible. His companions said he is Nicholas De John of 69 Farrington Street, Flushing.

Mrs. Fisher has been twice married. Her first husband was Gustav Lindenthal, formerly Commissioner of Bridges. A divorce separated them. Her second husband was Capt. Clarke Fisher, United States Army, retired, who died about a year ago. He had a business at Trenton, N. J., which his widow has since managed.

Aiding Would-Be Patrolmen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last night's examination in the High School of Commerce was a test of the work accomplished by the members of the Civil Service Preparatory Class which is being conducted in connection with this evening recreation centre. Throughout the Winter, over 100 men have spent six evenings a week preparing for the mental, written, and physical tests which are given at the civil service examinations for the position of patrolman.

Last night, April 5, over 150 earnest men came to the High School of Commerce to undergo a test given by their instructor, which test would show the results of the Winter's training. Questions were prepared by their teacher and the answers handed in by the members of the class. The answer sheets have not yet been examined by the instructor. This test is the first of its kind ever conducted in a school building.

The INSIDE and the OUTSIDE
Of Loeser Clothes for Men
THE CLOTHING ADVERTISING AND THE REAL ESTATE ADVERTISING are a good deal alike these days. Apparently every seller has the best bargain on earth.
But when you start out to buy real estate you read all the advertisements AND THEN INVESTIGATE FOR YOURSELF.
Why not choose your clothing in the same way? Why not make up your mind that the Suit you expect to wear for some months to come must not only be good on the outside, but GOOD ON THE INSIDE AS WELL?
It is the INSIDE of Clothing that is the vital part—the UNSEEN TAILOR WORK that determines whether the Suit will wrinkle out of shape at the first rainstorm or hold its graceful shape until the suit is worn out.
GOOD TAILOR WORK is at the foundation of this Clothing business. The STORE FOR MEN is on the main floor with a separate door at Elm Place and practically in a separate building. But the Clothing is so good that the men who know about it would hunt it up wherever we put it.
In the new Suits and Coats for Spring you will find distinctive style—for every Suit was specially designed for us. You will find smart and exclusive fabrics. You will find prices as low as or lower than the prices in other places for ordinary Clothes.
Investigate these things for yourself. Find out about the INSIDE of the Clothing you buy—and then buy where the inside work is right.

FIELDS CAME BACK TO VINDICATE HIMSELF

Trustees Who Say Records Are Missing Make Him Laugh.

WILL TELL ALL THE TRUTH

And Won't Spare Anybody, Says the Mutual's Legislative Agent—House of Mirth a Libel.

Andrew C. Fields made it evident yesterday that he did not intend to be silent as to the charges made by the reorganizers of the Mutual Life that he was primarily responsible for the vast sums spent by the company's supply department.

"All those Trustees," said a statement given out on behalf of Fields, at his home in Dobbs Ferry yesterday, "who are now pointing a finger of scorn at me were aware of all I was doing in connection with legislative work for the Mutual, and when they say that they were ignorant of the character of my work they are saying what is untrue. I am here to challenge them in every such statement that they may make or have made.

"In the first place, I never gave a bribe in my life to any one. I have come home prepared to completely vindicate myself, and in doing so I shall let the truth that I shall tell fall upon whom it may. I am not an old man, like Mr. McCurdy, whose age was so great that he could not defend himself. While my bodily strength is not what it might be, I am mentally as strong as ever I was, and am determined to vindicate myself in the eyes of the public.

"I have to laugh when I read the statements of Trustees to the effect that a part of the records of the supply department are missing or have been destroyed. I will say that it is absurd to declare that any book or record of the supply department, of which I was the head, has been taken from the company's office. The story simply amuses me—nothing more. The Trustees can have all the records of the supply department—if they want to get at them.

"As to the payments by Robert Oliphant, Chairman of the Expenditures Committee, of amounts aggregating $600,000 to me, I will say that I can furish a full and complete explanation of exactly what was done with this money, and can show that every payment was fully authorized.

"I saved for the Mutual by my work at Albany hundreds of thousands of dollars, and in doing so never committed a dishonest act. I do not propose that the men associated with me in the Mutual shall destroy my reputation to further their own selfish ends. The story about the so-called 'House of Mirth' in Albany is a gross libel. Nothing ever took place in that house, which was simply my Albany residence, of which I or any other God-fearing man need be ashamed.

"As for Andrew Hamilton, I have known him a long time, but I never had any personal relations with him. I have not seen him since my return."

Fields, so far as could be judged from his statement of yesterday and from what can be learned of the plans of the McCurdys with respect to the suits brought against them, proposes to put the final responsibility for all the money he spent upon the Trustees who served on the committees that indorsed his vouchers, and generally upon those members of the board who belonged to the "inner circle" and know all about the McCurdy policies. Except for the officers who have resigned, all these Trustees are still in the board. It was said yesterday that the return of Fields at this time was arranged with a view to these actions, and that John B. Stanchfield of Elmira, who appeared for the firm of Lawrence & Co., the Mutual's former stationers, at the hearings before the Armstrong Committee, would represent him.

Augustus D. Juilliard, who returned from Europe on Thursday with a communication from D. C. Haldeman, the London manager of the company, who resigned because he disagreed with the policies of the present administration, will meet President Peabody, Joseph H. Choate, Chairman Truesdale of the Investigating Committee, and Vice President McClintock on Tuesday. They will take up in detail the Haldeman situation, and in general the condition of the company's business abroad, which Mr. Juilliard has been looking over during his six months' trip.

BARS UP ON WRONGDOERS.

Insurance Bills Strengthened Against Lobbyists—Informers Protected.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 6.—The Armstrong Committee reported a number of amendments to the Insurance bills at to-day's session of the Senate, and added an entirely new bill to meet the situation in the Equitable, the majority of the stock of which is owned by Thomas F. Ryan. The bill amends the corporation law to the extent of providing that any policy holder may become a Director in a life insurance company whether or not he is a stockholder in the corporation. The bill which relates to lobbying was amended so as to include promised consideration for legislative activity, and provides that the disburser shall also file with his statement of expenses "the names of the payees and the amount paid to each." The original bill provided only for such statements from corporations. In the amended bill the words "person, firm, or association" are added.

The desire of the committee to not injure innocent stockholders led to the elimination of the section in the lobbying bill which provided that any foreign corporation which failed to comply with the provisions of the law should have its license revoked. It was contended that as the law reached any officer or employe of a corporation who failed to comply with its provisions it was not necessary to go to the length of taking a charter or license from an offending company.

The bill relating to political contributions was materially amended by providing that no joint stock association or corporation shall contribute to campaign expenses except it is organized purely for political purposes. In order, however, that a political club could not use this exemption to collect funds from firms, corporations, or associations, and then act as a disbursing agent in turning the funds so collected over to political parties or candidates for office, it is provided that the political club or association may only use its own funds for such campaign purposes. The following section is also added to the bill:

> No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or producing any books, papers, or other documents before any court or Magistrate upon any investigation, proceeding, or trial, for a violation of any of the provisions of this section, upon the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to convict him of a crime or to subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may so testify or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, and no testimony so given or produced shall be received against him upon any criminal investigation or proceeding.

The only change of consequence made in the big bill which amends the insurance law generally relates to the Russian policy holders in the mutual companies. It is provided in the bill that lists of policy holders shall be available at the branch agencies and at the home office. In speaking of this provision, President Orr of the New York Life said that the company ran up against a snag in this provision, as the publication of the lists of policy holders was prohibited by Russian law. In order to meet this the committee amended the section so as to insert after this provision for lists of policy holders the words "unless prohibited by law."

Except for the amendment relating to joint stock associations, the committee has ignored entirely the suggestions made by the Senators, especially Senator Grady, at the long session yesterday. If Grady and the other objectors persist in their amendments there is another long fight in prospect when the bills come up in the Senate for final passage.

WANTS HELP FROM CANADA.

Commission Pushing Bills to Aid in Saving the Falls.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 6.—President Dow of the Niagara Falls Reservation Commission came here to-day relative to the Foelker bills repealing various charters to take water for power purposes from Niagara River.

An impression existed here that the commission was in favor only of the four bills that repealed charters of old companies that do not even claim to have any rights. But it turns out that the commission also is in favor of Mr. Foelker's two additional bills to wipe out the charters of the Niagara, Lockport and Ontario Power Company and the Niagara County Irrigation and Water Supply Company.

"We are opposed to all charters granting water rights where the companies have not begun construction and continued in good faith," said President Dow. "Pass these bills and show the Canadian people that we are acting in good faith. Nothing would lead more quickly to getting an international agreement by which the Falls could be saved."

MALBY FIGHT UP AGAIN.

Palmer Threatens Obstruction if Thursday's Tactics Are Pursued.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 6.—Minority Leader Palmer to-day resumed his fight against the Malby bills legislating Ogdensburg Democrats out of office. Much of the bitterness engendered at the session of yesterday was shown again to-day. Palmer gave notice that if the Republicans continued in their course he would raise technical points throughout the remainder of the session in retaliation. Such a course would seriously balk the plans of the "reform" leaders. They could make a little progress, but at this stage of the session a little progress is not much better than no progress at all.

The two Malby bills were on to-day's third reading calendar, and when they were reached Mr. Palmer requested that they be placed on Tuesday's or Wednesday's calendar. To this Mr. Moreland objected.

"Very well, then," said Palmer. "If that is the case I move to strike these bills from the calendar on the ground that they have been improperly advanced. If you are going to proceed along lines whereby the rules of the House are not to be observed, all except the few whom the Speaker will recognize might as well go home. It is like so many poodles appearing at the entrance and being there stopped and informed by a paid employe sent by the presiding officer, that they cannot come in, as they can serve no useful purpose."

Mr. Moreland moved that the motion to strike the bills from the calendar lie on the table, and the motion was carried.

The bills will come up for further discussion on Monday night. Merritt of St. Lawrence has promised he will pass the bills Monday night even if nothing else be done.

ROW OVER MORTGAGE TAX.

Enemies of Repeal Bill Seek to Bury It in Senate Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 6.—A row developed in the Senate to-day over the Mortgage Tax Repeal bill which passed the Assembly last night. Senator Allds, acting for himself, Raines and Malby, all of whom are opposed to the measure, had the bill brought over to the Senate to-day and sent to the Committee on Taxation, which has held up a similar measure all the present session.

It was the plan of the proponents of the measure to hold the bill on the Assembly side until Monday, and then to have the rules suspended in the Senate so as to have the measure committed to the Committee of the Whole without reference. Senator Page would have had enough votes to sustain such action at any time except Friday, when there is a small attendance in the Senate.

Page, however, gave notice that he would move for a suspension of the rules so as to have the bill taken out of the Committee on Taxation and brought out on the floor. The bill will then be pressed for final passage. It is contended that the committee would have smothered it if it was left to their tender mercies.

SHOT HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Mrs. Hester Cuisine of Mariners' Harbor Is Seriously Wounded.

Mrs. Hester Cuisine, 58 years old, of Mariners' Harbor, Richmond Borough, was taken to the Smith Infirmary at New Brighton late last night, suffering from a pistol shot wound inflicted by Henry Bean, her son-in-law. She is in a critical condition.

Bean disappeared from Staten Island some time ago. Last night he called at the home of his mother-in-law and was allowed to enter.

As soon as Bean entered the house he drew a revolver, Mrs. Cuisine says, and fired two shots at her. One of the bullets struck her in the chain. The second grazed her neck. Bean then fled, and late last night had not been captured.

Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Gain.

The Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company, according to a statement of condition filed with the Massachusetts Secretary of State, had a surplus of $4,792,039 at the end of 1905, an increase of $346,518 over 1904. The value of real estate and merchandise on hand increased from $10,427,997 to $11,867,378 in the same period.

TELLS BY THEIR SLEEP

"I can tell by my little ones' sleep when a cold is coming on" said a mother when speaking of the advance symptoms of colds in children. "They toss about, are restless, their breathing is heavy and there are symptoms of night sweats. The next morning I start with Scott's Emulsion. The chances are that in a day or two they are all over it. Their rest is again peaceful and the breathing normal."

Here's a suggestion for all mothers. Scott's Emulsion always has been almost magical in its action when used as the ounce of prevention. Nothing seems to overcome child weakness quite so effectively and quickly as Scott's Emulsion.

BACON'S JUDGMENT UPSET.

The Building and Loan Banking Co. Gets a New Trial.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down a decision yesterday reversing the judgment obtained by Charles P. Bacon against the New York Building and Loan Banking Company and ordering a new trial. Mr. Bacon got a judgment for $25,000, which, with interest and costs, was brought up to $28,481.74. He said he had made a contract with the First Vice President and Secretary of the company, by which he was to receive $100 a day for services to be thereafter rendered to the corporation. The opinion of the Appellate Division says:

"Even though it be assumed that a valid contract was made with the claimant, by which he was to receive $100 a day for service to be thereafter rendered to the corporation, we are of the opinion that the evidence does not sustain the finding that he did render, under such contract, 250 days service.

"All that he did, according to his own testimony, was to go to Albany and consult with the Attorney General—and he had no definite recollection as to when these trips were taken, because he kept no register—and give general advice to the officers of the corporation."

KILLED A DEAF-MUTE.

Mooney Gets Fifteen-Year Sentence After Plea for Clemency.

Thomas Mooney, an ex-convict, found guilty of shooting and killing a man, who, being a deaf-mute, could not answer when Mooney tried to pick a quarrel with him, was sentenced to fifteen years in State prison by Justice Dowling in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday.

Counsel for the defendant urged clemency on the ground that Mooney had an eighty-year-old mother and a wife and children.

"He should have thought of them before," was Justice Dowling's rejoinder.

YACHTING PLANS UPSET BY THE EASTERN CLUB

Takes Dates for Big Schooner Race from Local Clubs.

LIKELY TO STIR UP TROUBLE

Owners Anxious to Find a Way Out of the Muddle — Depends on Maxwell Boat's Debut.

The arrangement of the long-distance schooner race of the Eastern Yacht Club on June 30 has probably upset the plans of the New York yachtsmen for their Independence Day races and for the events of the succeeding weeks. It was expected that the Queen would make her first appearance under Mr. Maxwell's charge in the annual race for the Colt Cup at Larchmont on July 4. The entry of the Elmina by F. F. Brewster and of the Corona by Arthur F. Luke is essential to the success of this plan. If the Eastern Yacht Club has succeeded in its effort to secure these two boats for its New London to Marblehead race it has spoiled the whole Larchmont plan, and by taking these boats into Eastern waters, where they are likely to remain for the Eastern Regatta on July 6 and the Eastern cruise to Bar Harbor, starting on the 7th, it will keep them out of racing about New York until Larchmont race week. This has been the fear of New York yachtsmen ever since the Eastern race was announced, and it is exactly what is likely to occur.

Both Mr. Brewster and Mr. Luke are partial to the Eastern Yacht Club. Mr. Luke is a Boston man, and with Mr. Brewster participated in the Eastern race to Halifax, where Elmina won the cup offered by King Edward VII. Both evidently feel bound to accept the Eastern invitation to race to Marblehead from New London, but Mr. Luke will only go in the event of Elmina entering. In answer to an inquiry, Mr. Brewster expressed the hope that the Maxwell schooner would be ready early in June, so that the three boats could compete in the annual regatta of the Atlantic Yacht Club, and in the New York and Larchmont races two days later. It is doubtful if this can be done. Mr. Brewster says:—

"At this time it is impracticable to give you a positive answer.

"I hope Mr. Maxwell will have the Queen out early in June, and if so, Corona, Queen, and Elmina should meet in the race for the Atlantic Club June 12, for the New York Club June 14, and for the Larchmont Club June 16. I expect to enter Elmina for the Eastern Club race, New London to Marblehead, and the Eastern Club's cruise to Bar Harbor. This cruise would prevent Elmina's entering any further races in the Sound until Larchmont race week.

"I expect to enter Elmina in the New York Club's cruise and for the King's and Astor Cups. Capt. W. S. Dennis will handle Elmina."

The Queen will probably not be ready to make her first appearance until July 4 in a race. She will be delivered to Mr. Maxwell on June 1, and he expects to spend the month in tuning up. In speaking of her, Mr. Maxwell said:

"The boat will be built to rate very close to the ninety-foot limit, of as light construction as is consistent with a conservative regard for safety, and will, I think, be able to give a good account of herself. She will have the advantage of six-foot longer water line than either Elmina or Corona, and as both of these will rate about the same as she does, she will have a great advantage over them. I am free to confess that I cannot see the full advantage of the new rule of measurement in this respect. It seems to me that the longer water line ought to play a larger part in the rating than it does.

"I shall tune the boat up after I get her before putting her into a race. This will take some time, as there will be plenty to do aboard her. I think she will certainly be ready to race by July 1. I shall not enter the race from New London to Marblehead."

While Corona is not pledged to go with the Eastern Club, Mr. Luke acknowledged his predisposition toward the race, but said he would make no engagement of any kind until later. He further said:

"The Corona is at Lawley's being prepared for the season. She will have a three-foot addition made to her mast that will increase her hoist and sail spread accordingly. I have had a computation made by Fred Lawley, and he figures that we will come just within the 90-foot limit. Elmina shaded that mark very close last year. In fact she went over it at first, and had to be trimmed down. I do not think there will be an appreciable difference in the rating of the three big boats this year.

"Queen ought, of course, to beat us, and some of the smaller boats will give us trouble in the fleet races. The Venona beat us every time last year, and Muriel and Valmore and Katrina are mighty smart boats. These boats have a big advantage if conditions favor them at all. I believe Elmina I. could beat Elmina II. on allowance if Mr. Brewster would put her in commission."

There is a feeling among racing men in New York waters that the action of the Eastern Yacht Club in scheduling dates that conflict so seriously with the time-honored fixtures of the Larchmont and New York Clubs was hardly courteous. They urge that an earlier or later date could have been chosen. To this the Eastern men reply that the later date was impossible on account of fogs on the Maine coast and the earlier out of the question.

KEENE HORSES GALLOP.

Sysonby, Delhi, and Wild Mint Do Half Miles in 0:52.

The three best old horses of the James R. Keene stable, with the champion Sysonby as the leading individual, made the most important part of the training show at the Sheephead Bay course yesterday, though there was enough work done on the exercise track to keep the watchers busy through the early part of the day. The training track was dry and fast and the weather conditions were favorable, but there still was no indication of hurry on the part of Trainer James Rowe, who galloped several sets from his big stable.

The appearance of Sysonby was the principal event of the day, and especial interest was aroused when the colt, which is top weight in all the important Spring handicaps, went out for the fastest gallop he has had this Spring. This was a half mile in 0:52, with the champion well in hand throughout and finishing as strong as he began. There was no apparent effort, and the move made it look as if Sysonby is much more forward than the watchers generally have believed; and it seems now that if the stable had any wish to do so Sysonby might be fitted and brought to the post by about the time the Metropolitan Handicap is run at Belmont Park. Trainer Rowe also worked the five-year-old Delhi, winner of last season's Brooklyn Handicap, and the four-year-old Wild Mint, and sent them just such trials as Sysonby had, the time of the half-mile gallops of the three horses being identical—0:52 in each case.

Trainer J. W. May worked several of his horses the fastest gallops they have had since their arrival from Memphis, Toots Mook doing three furlongs in 0:30, and the two-year-old Islip getting a trial over the same distance in time a fraction of a second slower.

Trainer A. J. Joyner worked two of his big string fast enough to attract attention, sending the colt Don Diego and the Watercress colt Watergrass six furlongs in 1:18. The Carter Handicap horse Battleaxe had a mile in 1:49, finishing easily, and Enoch Wishard sent Afric Jewel a smart gallop of a half mile in 0:50.

At the Gravesend track a great number of horses representing many different stables were out for exercise on a fast and good course, but no really notable individuals were among the horses worked. The latest arrival at the Gravesend track was Trainer James Healy, from Oceanport, with a string of fourteen horses that wintered in New Jersey.

"There's a Reason"

TELLS OF LAUTERBACH TALK.

Gen. Fitzgerald Testifies About an Alleged "Yellow Dog" Proposal.

There were developments in the action instituted by Morris Mengis against Gen. Louis Fitzgerald for $1,000,000 yesterday, when the defendant was on the stand under cross-examination by ex-Congressman Magner, counsel for Mengis. Mengis alleges that Gen. Fitzgerald agreed to pay him the sum sued for for services rendered by him in the purchase of the Western Maryland Railroad for the Fuller syndicate. The suit is now being tried before Justice Sutherland and a jury in Part II. of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn.

The new testimony in the action related to the "yellow dog fund," which was deposited with the Mercantile Trust Company, of which Gen. Fitzgerald is President, while he was Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Gen. Fitzgerald denied that he had dodged the investigation conducted by the Armstrong Committee, declaring that he had volunteered to appear before the committee, but was prevented from doing so by illness.

"Did you know," asked counsel, "in your capacity as President of the trust company, of the deposit of George B. Squire as trustee for Thomas B. Jordan and James W. Alexander, of a large sum of money known as the 'yellow dog fund'?"

Gen. Fitzgerald said he knew of this fund, but that he did not know the use to which the money was put, as it never came before the Finance Committee. From what he had discovered since the deposit was made, Gen. Fitzgerald said, the money was not used for the purposes attributed to it by newspapers.

Gen. Fitzgerald then related a conversation he said he had with Edward Lauterbach in which Mr. Lauterbach had informed him that by the "judicious use of money" the sale of the railroads could be brought about.

The General said that he understood the phrase to mean the bribery of the City Council.

"I asked him," said Gen. Fitzgerald, "how he could come to me with such a proposition, and he left immediately."

Mr. Lauterbach said last night that he had already denied the truth of the "bribery" story, and had nothing to add to that denial. The trial will be continued on Monday.

PLOT VICTIMS, HE THINKS.

Robert Hunter Tells Meeting About Western Miners' Officials.

The west side failed to rally last night and "Arouse!" as the thousands of hand bills urged the west siders to do, for the meeting held in the Amsterdam Opera House, 334 West Forty-fourth Street, to protest against the extradition of the officers of the Western Federation of Miners. A similar protest meeting held in the Grand Central Palace several weeks ago filled that large building.

The slim attendance last night seemed to irritate Ben Hanford, one of the orators.

"You men don't have to depend on THE NEW YORK TIMES for your news," he said, "nor on McClure's Magazine for views. You'll find out that you will have to go on strike early and often or you will be locked out by the bosses. You will have to join the Socialist Party and go to the polling place with your arms. I don't say that you will have to fight, but you will have to be willing to fight. You must vote and bear arms or Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Rockefeller will continue to run this country."

Robert Hunter, Settlement worker, brother-in-law of J. G. Phelps Stokes and author of the book called "Poverty," said that he had invited Mr. Hanford to lunch with a number of the editors of New York newspapers and of various magazines to hear his side of the charges that the Western Federation of Miners officials, charged with conspiracy in the murder of ex-Gov. Steunenberg of Idaho, were being made the victims of a plot by the mine owners.

"His statements were so astounding," said Mr. Hunter, "that they seemed unbelievable. I thought they had been exaggerated, and took the trouble to investigate. I went to Washington and had a three hours' talk with Senator Patterson of Colorado and learned the facts of the trouble in Colorado from him. He took the miners' side. I also secured a letter from an editor of The Chicago Tribune and another from a correspondent of a metropolitan newspaper who was sent to Colorado to report the facts, and all of these sources of information tend to show that Moyer, Haywood, and Pettibone, the accused officials of the miners, are innocent men."

PATRIA CLUB 15 YEARS OLD.

Celebrates with a Banquet and Listens to Reformers.

The members of the Patria Club, to the number of about 300 men and women, gathered in the banquet room of the Hotel Savoy last night to celebrate the club's fifteenth birthday. Dr. George T. Steven, the President of the society, was toastmaster.

Clinton Rogers Woodruff, who played a prominent part in the reform movement in Philadelphia, spoke upon the recent political events in his own and other cities, and said the people were but at the "cock crowing and the dawn of the movement for civic righteousness and reform."

Mrs. Philip Carpenter, President of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, gave a humorous account of the landing of the "Pilgrim Mothers." The Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, who championed sterilized betting," discussed "Public Service a Patriotic Duty." He made no reference to his recent activities in connection with the deceased Anti-Betting bill, but urged his hearers to devote their energies to reforms at home rather than to bother about evil conditions abroad.

"Don't worry about the open door in Asia," said he, "but secure an open door here for those who have a right to it. I have no patience with the philanthropist whose eye is a long way off. Force a door of opportunity for the man next to you. This is the reign of the common people. It behooves you to get down on the ground floor with them."

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 6.—The annual handicap of the united North and South amateur championship golf tournament, played to-day, drew a field of sixty-four contestants. L. A. Hamilton of the Englewood Golf Club, New Jersey, won the gold medal offered for the best gross score by a margin of three strokes, with a card of 84. A. P. K. James of London was second. The latter, whose handicap was 10, and C. E. Cameron of the Baltusrol Club, New Jersey, whose allowance was 14, tied for the net score trophy at 77, and will play off to-morrow.

Miss Charlotte Campbell of Milwaukee, playing with a handicap of 8, was the winner of a special women's handicap, scoring 101. Miss Gertrude E. Chandlee of Philadelphia, 18, was second, with 102.

MOTOR OMNIBUS LINES IN NEW YORK SUBURBS

Autos for Public Traffic at Nyack, Long Branch, and Greenwich.

WILL RUN CARS TO RACES

Success of Lakewood's Motor 'Bus Has Aroused Interest in Plan in Summer Resorts.

Plans are being made in a number of localities in the vicinity of New York to establish automobile omnibus lines this Summer, and arrangements are also under way to run from half a dozen to ten motor 'buses from this city to the race tracks. The 'buses that will be used for this purpose will be small cars holding ten persons. No attempt will be made to make the trip a sightseeing run. The 'buses will start from fixed points, and parties may hire the entire cars if they choose. Single seats will also be sold, and the run both to and from the race tracks will be made as quickly as possible, returning to New York in time for dinner.

R. M. Owen, who has been interested in the manufacture and utility of motor 'buses for the past year or two, was in New York this week, and he discussed the plan with several of his associates. The growing popularity of automobile runs to the races, and the fact that several of the big sightseeing 'buses were used with success last year, has led to the formation of this plan whereby convenient cars may be run, which will possess the advantage of giving greater privacy to small parties.

Apart from this projected race track omnibus line, several public lines for suburban usage have already been established. A ten-passenger omnibus was delivered to a real estate company at Mineola, L. I., this week, and two more will be sent there within the next two or three weeks. These cars will be used in transporting customers to a large tract of land that has recently been opened near Mineola, and later in the season a similar line will be run to Bay Shore and other resorts.

A public service automobile 'bus line has been organized in Nyack, and six cars have been ordered. It had been expected to open the line this month, but delay in receiving the cars from the factory may postpone the opening until early in May. This line will run from Nyack to Piermont, passing through West Nyack, Fairview, and other places on the main route. The distance as laid out between Nyack and Piermont will be fifteen miles. Four or five stations will be established along the route, and the fare will probably be 10 cents between stations. There is a great deal of local traffic around Nyack, and, as there are no trolley lines in that locality, this automobile line has been hailed with delight by the Summer and permanent residents.

A private omnibus line will be opened in Greenwich, Conn., early in the Summer with two cars. Regular runs will be made to the near-by beach resorts, and it will also be possible to hire the cars for private excursions. A similar line will probably be opened at Bridgeport.

A private automobile line has been in operation in Lakewood this Winter. Only one car has been in use, although three have been ordered, and this single car has been in great demand every day. The other two cars will be delivered this month, and during the Summer they will be transferred to Long Branch, where an omnibus line will be opened between Long Branch and Asbury Park, and probably running as far north along the shore drive as Seabright.

Amateur Boxer Not Seriously Hurt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 6.—In the concluding bout last night of the National amateur boxing tournament between two local heavyweights, Walter Kirchner and Ed Harkins, the latter was knocked out in the first round. His head struck the floor with terrific impact, and he was unconscious for a long time.

Physicians at the Emergency Hospital assert that after a thorough examination Harkins has only a slight concussion of the brain and there is no evidence of fracture. Harkins has been removed to a private hospital to insure speedy recovery.

Columbia and Haverford Tie.

Columbia and Haverford tied by the score of 1—1 in the fourth Association football game of the intercollegiate series for the cup donated by Fred H. Milnes, who Captained the English Pilgrim football team which played here last Fall. Columbia counted on winning the game, having tied the Staten Island Field Club, which had defeated Haverford. The visitors had a strong combination, however, and tied the game.

For Court Tennis Championship.

The final round for the court tennis championship will be played at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club between Jay Gould of Tuxedo and Charles E. Sands of New York. Gould defeated J. J. Cairns and Joshua Crane, Jr., of Boston, while Sands won from G. R. Fearing and Austin Potter. Sands is the present champion, but young Gould has shown the best form during the tournament and is a slight favorite. In the match for the gold racquets at Tuxedo Park last month Gould won from Sands. The demand for seats is already in excess of the accommodations.

"The Roosevelt Bears"

A CORRECTION

I have made a mistake. A correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES writes that in last Sunday's story I refer to the Bears as standing on Concord "Green" and seeing the statue of the minuteman in front of them. This correspondent goes on to say that this is impossible, as the minuteman is a full half mile from the "Green."

I knew that trouble would break out somewhere.

I have been nervous about these Bears ever since they reached Boston.

I have been afraid all along that they would spell a word wrong or eat with their knives or call the Common a park or do some other fool thing that would get them into disgrace.

They should have taken their field glasses with them when they went out to Concord. It isn't possible to see all the literary and historic shrines of Boston and its environments with the naked eye. Or they could have carried that minuteman to the "Green"; or if he is heavy they could have made him walk.

I have been very careful to have the Bears eat beans daily and I have cautioned them particularly about their grammar. To-morrow they visit Harvard. (See the Sunday New York Times.) They get into a good many different kinds of trouble. But they enjoy the fun whether the students do or not.

Paul Piper

P. S.—I am going to get "The Roosevelt Bears" out of Boston just as soon as I can. They are gradually working their way toward Washington, where I am assured they will receive a most enthusiastic and hearty welcome.

The agitation throughout the United Kingdom over the Court's decision that only Pot Still Whiskey can be called true whiskey is giving very favorable prominence to John Jameson Three Star Whiskey.

GIANTS COME HOME FOR REAL BASEBALL

Every Player Reported Well After Long Stay South.

MATHEWSON IN GOOD FORM

Champions Will Play the Yale Team To-day, and Then Take on Providence for Three Games.

The Giants are home and the bleacherite is happy. They open the preliminary season this afternoon at the Polo Grounds with the Yale University nine. Ames, McGinnity, and Wiltse will likely serve three innings each in the box, with Bresnahan at the receiving end. The rest of the team will play in the regular positions, McGann, Gilbert, Dahlen, and Devlin in the infield and Mertes, Donlin, and Browne in the outfield. There will be a typical crowd there to welcome each of the old favorites worthily.

The home-coming yesterday morning was a bit early for a formal reception, but arriving in the big Pennsylvania shed at Jersey City at 8 o'clock, the men were recognized by the incoming workers from suburban points and were characteristically greeted. Manager McGraw had the hardest time he has experienced in quite a few days, handling a big grip, taking care of a felt sombrero, and shaking extended hands, but every one was happy to be back and in the best of humor. All were on hand early in the afternoon for the first home practice.

Twenty-five men were in the Southern party that left Wheeling Thursday afternoon. Secretary Fred Knowles and Manager McGraw had the men in charge. There were Christy Mathewson and McGinnity, Taylor, Ames, and Wiltse of last year's pitching staff, and Henry Mathewson and Ferguson. Every man of the old squad seemed in perfect trim to take his turn in the box, and both youngsters looked promising. Besides Bowerman, Bresnahan, and Marshall to wear the mask, there were Fitzgerald and Alex Smith, while to help out the infield were Robinson and Kennedy, two more youngsters that McGraw believes are comers. The rest of the party was made up of McGann, Mertes, Gilbert, Dahlen, Browne, Devlin, Donlin, and Sammy Strang, while the absentees of last year were Elliott, who has gone to Louisville, and Hall, now with Baltimore. The lot that are left will constitute the Giants' playing strength during the coming year, with the exception of Neal, the infielder, who is to join the team at the close of his school year in Illinois. It may be that one or two of the new men may be farmed out later.

With characteristic enthusiasm, McGraw will consider no possibility of a failure to again win a world's pennant, but the energy with which he went to work in the afternoon is his dependence rather than the past achievement. In a moment he had the players trying as hard, apparently, as though they were making ready to go into a championship contest, and all appeared as eager as he to perfect those little details of inside play that have made the success of the team in the past two years. He had the players batting out the pitching of various members of his staff and the infielders gathering in grounders and the outfielders chasing flies for a good hour. Getting away from the plate and sprinting to first base was practiced, and every conceivable device used to instill ginger and spirit into the play.

Of the pitchers, every one is in as good shape as early in the past year. Mathewson's cold has handicapped him, as well as his injury to his wrist, but there is no trouble from that source now, and he can take his regular turn in the box at any time. He will get a chance to go in early next week, but he will not be used to-day.

McGraw is enthusiastic over the showing of young Ferguson, whom he secured from Louisville in exchange for Claude Elliott. He believes the young fellow has all the attributes of a successful pitcher, and lacks only experience to whip him into such shape that he will be able to take his turn with the rest of them. He is cool headed, it is said, and ought to make good soon, though the entry of a young pitcher into major league company is the most precarious speculation known to baseball. The younger Mathewson has not done so well, although he has the physique to develop into a first-class man, and with careful tuition and training ought to do something. He is too young yet to expect very much of him, being only 18 years of age.

In short, there seems to be nothing to be desired in the team except an even break on luck, and with that McGraw is satisfied that both the league and world's pennants are safe. The team will leave to-night after the Yale game for Providence, where to-morrow they will have a go against the champion team of the Eastern League which Jack Dunn turned out last year. On Monday they will return for another exhibition game at the Polo Grounds, bringing the champion Providence aggregation with them. On Tuesday the two teams will meet again, and on Wednesday Manhattan College will be tried on before the men go to Philadelphia to open the championship season on Thursday.

GREATER NEW YORKS BEATEN.

Conroy's Failure to Stop Long Hit Gives Game to Atlanta.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 6.—Conroy was badly off in his fielding this afternoon, and his failure to stop Winters's long drive in the third inning gave Atlanta two runs and the game. The Greater New Yorks were unable to cross the plate until the ninth inning, when a batting rally gave them one run, and incidentally came near giving the local supporters heart failure. Griffith put Hughes in to pitch, and he gave way to Whalen in the fifth inning. The New Yorkers outbatted the local team, securing seven hits to the locals' six, but with the exception of those made in the ninth inning the visitors' hits were widely scattered, and the perfect fielding of the local team cut out any chance of scores being made by luck. The score:

YALE WRESTLERS WIN TITLE.

Blue First in Championship—Penn and Columbia Tie.

Yale's wrestlers won the intercollegiate championship in the competition held last night in the Columbia gymnasium, defeating Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Princeton after a close contest that was marked by fast and spirited matches, full of interest to the goodly crowd gathered to witness the tourney. Yale scored 7 out of a possible 14 points, Pennsylvania tieing with Columbia for second place with 5 points each, while Princeton was last, with 4 points to her credit.

The majority of the preliminary bouts went to the winners on decision of the referee, neither contestant getting a fall, but there was lively work nevertheless. In the 135-pound class Shimmon of Columbia and Scott of Princeton especially gave an interesting and spirited exhibition. Scott had the Columbia man in some tight places at times, but Shimmon showed superior skill toward the end, and won after an extra period of two minutes.

In the heavyweight class H. S. Page of Yale started out by ripping Escheverria's jersey off. The Columbia man retired and appeared reattired. Escheverria seemed more skillful and more aggressive, but despite this Yale got the decision.

J. M. Howell, Columbia, had little difficulty in disposing of Dole of Yale, and C. N. Joyce of Pennsylvania for the welterweight championship.

In the bout between Herring of Princeton and Page of Yale in the heavyweight class, Page tried to mix things up, but before the bout had fairly commenced Herring had the Yale man on his back with a full Nelson.

LIVELY RACING AT BENNING.

Three Favorites and Two Outsiders First—Miller Rides Three Winners.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—Some interesting racing marked the eleventh day of the Washington Jockey Club's Spring meet to-day. Every event was hotly contested, and two of the finishes were sensational. Three favorites won, while a second choice and two outsiders took the other three events. Miller rode the first three winners.

In the handicap, which opened the card of the day, Pater was made an odds-on favorite. He led all the way, winning as he pleased. Race King ran into the place handily, with Peter Paul third. Only an ordinary lot of maidens ran in the second race. Orphan Lad, the favorite, finished first, with Jai Alai second and Alegra third. Judge White was the favorite for the third race, apparently on account of his jockey, Miller. The Judge won easily. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Pater, 108 pounds, (Miller,) 7 to 10 and out, won; Race King, 114, (L. Smith,) 6 to 1 and 7 to 10, second; Peter Paul, 95, (Romanelli,) 10 to 1, third. Time—1:23. Gallant and Veronese also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For maiden two-year-olds; four and a half furlongs, old course. Won by Orphan Lad, 105 pounds, (Miller,) 3 to 1 and even; Jai Alai, 105, (Diggins,) 8 to 1 and 8 to 5, second; Alegra, 105, (C. Morris,) 15 to 1, third. Time—0:57. Average, Tileing, Encore, King Brush, Blondy, Velocity, Woodline, and Moccasin also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Won by Judge White, 92 pounds, (Miller,) 11 to 5 and 4 to 5; Grand Duchess, 107, (Treubel,) 3 to 1 and 7 to 5, second; Society Bud, 90, (L. Smith,) 10 to 1, third. Time—1:24 2-5. Plantagenet, Loricate, Scarecrow, Blue Grouse, Sir Brinkley, Echodale, Suffice, and Henry Waring also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—For maiden three-year-olds and upward; five furlongs, Columbia course. Won by Arietta, 102 pounds, (Romanelli,) 8½ to 1 and 8 to 5; Donna, 89, (Powers,) 25 to 1 and 8 to 1, second; Welbourne, 91, (Frieshon,) 20 to 1, third. Time—1:03. Ligero, Bedella, High Brush, Stalactical, Adonis, Riggs, Orientamme, Azure, and Lady Georgia also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Selling, for four-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Won by Mettle, 105 pounds, (J. Jones,) 5 to 1 and 6 to 5; Hanover Hornpipe, 102, (Diggins,) 11 to 5 and 8 to 5, second; Zany, 110, (Robbins,) 4 to 5 and out, third. Time—1:24 3-5. Tomcod, Fire Escape, Quiet Tip, and Easter Walters also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; one mile and forty yards, Columbia course. Won by Jack McKeon, 106 pounds, (Robbins,) 8 to 1 and 6 to 5; Bellsnicker, 94, (C. Morris,) 1 to 2 and out, second; T. S. Martin, 88, (Miller,) 7 to 1, third. Time—1:46. Flat, Widow's Mite, and Nonsense also ran.

While in New York, President Maccabe announced that hereafter all requests for decisions on ruling of Amateur Athletic Union laws must be secured from the Presidents of the different district associations of the Amateur Athletic Union, the only exception being in matters relating to National Amateur Athletic Union championships, when requests received through the district associations' executive officers will be passed on and decisions reserved.

Oldsmobile Palace Touring Car.

More than mere power is required in a successful automobile. There must be such perfect mechanical harmony between the working parts that each bears its own load—no more, no less. To secure this condition the car must be correctly planned or designed.

You will admit, upon examining it, that the 4-Cylinder Oldsmobile Palace Touring Car is successfully designed.

Like the trained athlete, whose muscles are perfectly developed, every part of this car is "fit and ready" to do its work. The result is ideal smoothness of running and a long-lived machine.

May we show you?

"THE COMMON MIND."

I am satisfied that there will be no tariff revision this Congress, but it goes without saying that the desire for a change which exists in the common mind will drive the Republican Party, if continued in power, to a tariff revision. I do not want it, but it will come in the not distant future.

These are the words addressed by Speaker CANNON to prominent representatives of the pottery interests in the State of Ohio, interests that have for many years enjoyed valuable favors from Congress at the expense of the people, and especially of that part of the people least able to pay needlessly high prices for articles of daily necessity. That fact throws some light on the term "common mind" used by the Speaker. It might be suspected, were Mr. CANNON a purist in the use of language or one who puts on airs as to the language of his fellow-citizens, that the term was tinged with superciliousness. But that would not be "Uncle JOE'S" way. He doubtless means that he has become aware that the mind of the "common people" has become weary of some of the exactions of the Dingley tariff, that a definite wish has arisen for revision, and that, much as he detests the notion, the revision "will come in the not distant future."

This is decidedly the most important and significant utterance by any of the Republican leaders. It is especially so taken in connection with the proposition of Mr. DAVIDSON of Wisconsin that a subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee sit during the recess and give hearings in different parts of the country upon the tariff. It will be remembered that a like course was taken previous to the revision of the tariff under the Presidency of Mr. ARTHUR. It is true that the revision then made was a sham and a fraud, and its net result was to raise the average rate of duties. But it also is true that this treatment of the tariff was followed by the election of Mr. CLEVELAND in 1884. It constitutes, therefore, a precedent which it would not be entirely safe to repeat. If the "common mind" be filled with "a desire for a change," as Mr. CANNON reluctantly says—and he is a cool judge—we think the change will be a real one.

SENATORIAL SENSITIVENESS.

Sir GEORGE CORNEWALL LEWIS once wrote a book "On the Influence of Authority in Matters of Opinion," which book, according to BAGEHOT, "was described by a hasty thinker as a book to prove that when you wanted to know anything you asked somebody who knew something about it." That seems to be a judicious and commendable process. But it does not commend itself to the Senate of the United States. For the mere rumors that some Senators have been conferring with some railroad Presidents are adduced by other Senators as evidence that the Senators thus inculpated are preparing to betray the people to the corporations. Senator DOLLIVER, charged with the crime of conferring with the President of the United States upon the Rate bill, retorts that some of his colleagues have been conferring with railroad Presidents. Senator BAILEY, assuming, quite gratuitously, that these conferences were held "with a view to defeating" the Rate bill, calls this retort "a serious reflection upon some Senators," and Senator TILLMAN adds that "President MELLEN" has been to the White House and that President CASSATT has been closeted in Senator ELKINS's committee room.

Well, why not, and what of it? The natural impulse of a legislator desirous of framing a rate law which should be workable and efficient would be to "ask somebody who knew something about it," and he could not ask anybody likely to afford him more useful information than President MELLEN and President CASSATT. The assumption that all railroad Presidents are opposed to any rate legislation is not only gratuitous, as we have said, but is in these two cases distinctly negatived. Even if it were well founded, that would not be a reason for not consulting the men who "know something about it." A railroad man might very possibly be able to show a Senator that some provision upon which the Senator, in his innocence and ignorance, prided himself would not work at all, or would work the wrong way, and his hostile criticism might thus be valuable. "Our antagonist is our helper." On the other hand, friendly criticism from an expert would be almost invaluable.

The depressing fact is that the Senators accused of the heinous crime of conferring with railroad men about a railroad measure, instead of adducing these relevant considerations, adopt the point of view of their accusers, and proceed by denial instead of demurrer. Senator FORAKER vehemently asserts that "no railroad officials have talked with him at any time or place," and that he "does not believe there have been any such conferences." He seems almost to admit that Senators could not be trusted to exchange views with railroad men.

Perhaps the climax of Senatorial sensitiveness was reached by Senator BAILEY, when he intimated that he would not confer with the President of the United States upon pending legislation, even if invited to do so, by reason of the importance of keeping separate "the executive and the legislative departments." This is inconsistent as well as absurd. It is inconsistent, for it was Senator BAILEY who twitted the President, only a day or two ago, with taking counsel only with Republican Senators. It is absurd because the President, by his veto power, is a part of the legislative department. To say that he is not to be consulted about pending legislation is to say that he might feel obliged to veto a measure which he might be willing to sign if it were modified according to the views which Senator BAILEY would give him no opportunity of making known beforehand.

Upon the whole, the Senate in this debate made rather a melancholy exhibition of a kind of demagogism from which we have a right to expect that the Senate, at least, should be free.

"THE FOOTBALL OF POLITICS."

The coal operators are amply justified in resisting firmly the proposition of the miners to make a two years' agreement, "thus affording a new opportunity to make this great industry a football of politics."

It is not unnatural that the shrewd leaders of the miners should wish to arrange for their next dispute with the operators in the year of a Presidential election. At such a time the public mind is especially timid about disturbance in the business world and the politicians of the party in power are prepared to go to great lengths to avoid disturbance. Whatever one may think of the motives or the action of the President himself on the occasion of the last strike in the anthracite region, it was well known at the time that the approach of a Presidential contest had a great influence on the minds of the managers of his party. It is not well for the public at large that any great industrial movement involving the interests of multitudes of workingmen and of vastly greater multitudes of consumers should be injected into a political contest always exciting and confusing.

In the case of the coal miners the danger and the wrong are peculiarly obvious. The miners have a compact, disciplined, united, powerful, and not too scrupulous organization, which is sure of the sympathy, and, to great extent, of the co-operation of like organizations. The actual strength and influence of such organized bodies are out of proportion to their mere numbers. Their members act together, and act with regard to their immediate and necessarily selfish ends, with little regard to public interests or rights. Politicians go in fear of them. Men with some reputation as statesmen are scared by them. The people at large are sacrificed to them. It would be a great misfortune if the important National issues that are likely to be presented in 1908 should be pushed aside by the agitation attending a great coal strike, or the immediate fear of one. The operators may rely on general support of public opinion in refusing a proposition that would involve such a peril.

EXECUTIVE LAW-MAKING.

Inter-State Commerce Commissioner CLEMENTS, addressing the National Association of Railway Commissioners, said that no men charged with the regulation of railway rates "will ever, under our system of government, become extreme, radical, and confiscatory, and undertake to destroy the property of railroads." Probably not, but it is as necessary to safeguard the great interests of the country against error as against malice.

We have often criticised the acts of the Inter-State Commerce Commissioners, but never their motives. It is upon the record of their performance that there is anxiety regarding the enlargement of their functions. In this particular case not even the Commission itself would now venture to offer the country the legislation which it recommended last year, and which, if enacted, would have caused endless confusion and inestimable loss. Now it may be confidently anticipated that next year the Commissioners will have an equally poor opinion of this year's bill, with another brand-new one, which will be considered upon its merits when it appears. The Commission has rendered excellent service in many ways, but its legislative activities might be dispensed with as well as the President's. When there are no problems of administration unsolved it will be time to ask administrators of the laws to make laws.

SPRING BOOKS.

The announcements of new books in the special number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, published this morning as a supplement to THE NEW YORK TIMES, occupy a larger proportion of space than ever before, which is an indication of the prosperity of the book trade. No need to say this is an encouraging sign. The publishers are induced to put forth many books only when there is a great public demand for books. It is interesting to note, also, that in these Spring announcements of new books the fiction list is smaller than usual, while there are extraordinarily long lists of historical and biographical works.

Incidentally, we may be pardoned for directing attention to the high literary quality of this thirty-two-page book supplement, issued without extra charge with a one-cent newspaper. There are many articles by specialists in various departments of literature which would not be out of place in a high-priced magazine.

Milwaukee, the stronghold of Socialism in this country, showed a significant reaction in Tuesday's Mayoralty election. The Socialists had boasted that they were about to furnish the first Mayor elected by any great American municipality. Had they carried the day their propaganda would have received distinct encouragement in other large towns. A spectacular canvass resulted in a poll of 15,000 votes by WILLIAM A. ARNOLD, the Socialist nominee, which is 2,000 less than that cast in Milwaukee for DEBS in the Presidential campaign of 1904, who outdistanced PARKER and came within 9,000 of the vote for ROOSEVELT. The Socialists' strength this week fell 5,000 votes below Mayor ROSE's, who was defeated by the Republican candidate, SHERMAN M. BECKER, with a plurality of 1,500.

1904—Parker fund	1,900,000

1896—McKinley fund	6,000,000
1896—Bryan fund	275,000

These figures, with other intimate accounts, are submitted by The Washington Post as coming from "a gentleman who was on very close terms with GEORGE BRUCE CORTELYOU" in the campaign of 1904. Just how nearly the initials of the inspired and omniscient gentleman may resemble those of Mr. ROOSEVELT's campaign Chairman does not require omniscience to guess.

In an interview published yesterday Judge D CADY HERRICK emphasizes the essential distinction that THE TIMES tried to draw between municipal ownership and municipal operation. He quotes from his recent address to the Democratic Club, in which he insisted that, to be made effective, municipal ownership should include the power of always resuming public franchises. Municipalities, he lays it down, should be disabled from granting any franchises or privileges in perpetuity. It is evident that upon this principle this municipality would be far better off than it is. Such a question of vested rights, for example, as the New York Central has shown a disposition to raise in order to maintain its tracks on Eleventh Avenue could not arise at all if the city had not made an improvident grant, and had kept its ownership of its own streets beyond question.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Vesuvius and Its Threats. That the people of Naples are not appreciably disturbed by the present excitement of their terrible neighbor, but are inclined to view the eruption with satisfaction, as adding interest to King EDWARD's visit, is naturally surprising to those of us who live in a land where the mountains are always well behaved. It is the more remarkable because Vesuvius has a grim record as a destroyer of cities and the Neapolitans do not have to go far to see what it can do. And yet, real as the danger is in which they live, the chances are that they are now in no unusual peril, and they may be in less than when the volcano is much less active. For, with such an eruption going on as the dispatches describe, it is evident that the great safety valve is open and that, whatever else may happen, Naples probably will not suffer from such an explosion as sufficed almost literally to blow St. Pierre and all its inhabitants off the face of the earth. Mont Pelée gave no such warning, or, rather, no such obvious warning. It had been evident for several days, indeed, that the mountain was disturbed in its long sleep, and the ancient crater had ceased to be a lake and had become a furnace, but the manifestations were deceptively gentle, and at last it was by a single mighty effort that the imprisoned forces burst their way through the side of the mountain instead of through the long-clogged chimney terminating at its summit. That was opened later, but by what came out there no great harm was done. Vesuvius has never been really at rest for centuries, and though an eruption like that now in progress may overwhelm with lava or ashes the villages on its slopes, the equanimity of the Neapolitans is not as unreasonable as it seems, for it is unlikely that their mountain will do anything much worse than it is already doing. There are, however, no rules for volcanoes, and the safety valve, big as it is and as well opened, may not be big enough to prevent a sudden cataclysmic outburst. If that comes, the city may still escape, for the mountain has many sides and the explosion may be in any direction. Only this is sure—the sides and neighborhood of Vesuvius will be inhabited until the very last day of habitability, and, even if the great devastation comes, people will go creeping back afterward, just as they will in time to the site of St. Pierre. A convenient harbor and rich land form attractions that cannot be resisted, and nobody is really afraid of a danger that comes only once in hundreds of years.

Mr. Foley as a Reformer. While the advocates of phonetic spelling would not be likely to accept that used by Mr. FOLEY in his "Songs of Schooldays" as a scientific and satisfactory illustration of what they want, yet, as Mr. CLEMENS has observed with characteristic shrewdness, these poems have clearly revealed to a good many people that the imagined difficulty of reading an unfamiliar text need not deter them from joining the spelling reformers. At first sight, or, rather, on first seeing, one of these amusing productions of the audacious West, it hardly seems to be written in the English language, but with a little practice—no more than most of our readers seem to have been glad as well as willing to go through—the lines smooth themselves out very prettily and one finds himself reading along with as little hesitation as there would be if all the antiquated, unreasonable, and illogical rules of the standard orthography had been observed by the poet. And some have found this readily acquired facility a source of distinct and conscious pleasure, like that which is experienced when reading with ease a foreign language. It gives the thrill of surprise and the sense of achievement which one does not get from the native tongue in its accustomed dress. That all this, or any of it, has much bearing on the wisdom or the unwisdom of the Simplified Spelling Board cannot be claimed, but it is at least interesting and it does cast a mild side light on the great orthographical problem.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—"How long is Elkins going to speak?" asked a correspondent, meeting a Western Senator in the corridor while the West Virginian was delivering his Rate bill talk.

"Probably two days," was the answer.

"Why should it take him so long?" asked the correspondent in surprise.

"He is to talk on both sides of the question, and he will devote the first day to one side and the second to the other," replied the Senator, chuckling gleefully.

An enthusiastic advocate of the rate bill is C. H. Huffman, Postmaster of Richwood, Union County, Ohio. About 2,000 copies of Senator Foraker's Rate bill speech under Foraker's frank arrived there a few days ago, and Foraker's local agents addressed them and undertook to mail them. Huffman, who had read the speech and disapproved of it, as a loyal supporter of the President held them up. He declined to deliver them on the ground that it was a case of manifest fraud. Foraker had not been in Richwood and hence could not be franking envelopes.

Foraker's friends exhausted argument and finally appealed to the Roosevelt Administration for aid. The Postmaster General accordingly sent a sharp note to Huffman informing him that Foraker's frank was good anywhere in the United States.

"Well, how did you like his speech?" asked a Senator in the back row of his neighbor after Senator Elkins had sat down and was gathering up his manuscript.

"Fine enough," was the reply. "He made me think of Bill Brown up my way. Bill had an indifferent practice in our town and an indifferent farm a few miles outside. We used to say that Bill was a hades of a lawyer among the farmers and a hades of a farmer among us lawyers. Elkins is a great railroad man among us lawyers and I suppose is a big constitutional lawyer among railroad men."

Against Catskill Water Supply.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last Summer I spent my vacation in the heart of the Catskill Mountains, and the hotel where I stopped had about 165 guests. Within a stone's throw of the hotel was a famous waterfall. All the sewage at the hotel where I stopped emptied into the stream referred to, and the water below the hotel was almost the color of tanbark.

I have not been able to understand why New Yorkers should be supplied with such water. The writer is a medical man of considerable army and other experience, and it is my private opinion that Catskill water is anything but desirable as a beverage. There are thousands of hotels in the Catskill region, and every bit of sewage goes into the streams.

Artesian wells might solve our problem. Why not try a few for a start? M. D.

Statues to Great Women.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Sculptors are sadly neglecting their valuable time in not molding statues to great women, such as Queen Isabella of Spain, who gave all she possessed that Columbus might discover America; and Martha Washington, who gave all her real and personal property to the cause of independence.

Besides Queen Victoria there are other great and good women who distinguished themselves, such as Dora Hancock, wife of John Hancock; Susan B. Anthony, and perhaps Jenny Lind, who sang in old Castle Garden half a century ago or more. J. A. B.

New York, April 5, 1906.

A Literary Heretic.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is ridiculous to recognize William Shakespeare as the most eminent authority on "literature." There are grave doubts as to whether it was really Shakespeare who wrote "Macbeth," "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," &c. This makes it evident that such a man as William Shakespeare may never have existed.

As to the real merit of Shakespeare's works, it is sufficient to say that there is very little of it. An intricate conglomeration of large and unusual words forms the bulk of his output. The underlying stories in his plots are taken from books that were printed before his time.

New York, April 5, 1906. LOUIS KERPEN.

A Great Craving for Verse.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have received over a thousand letters from TIMES readers requesting me to write verse for you in order that they may read it in THE TIMES, and get a cent's worth.

New York, April 6, 1906. W. B. CRANE.

Ollygarchy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On behalf of our friends in Missouri may I respectfully suggest that the form of government in this country be hereafter described as "an ollygarchy tempered by investigation"?

New York, April 6, 1906. G. O. WARD.

OTHER VALUABLE BABIES.

John D. Rockefeller III. is worth more millions than any other baby in the world.—Daily Paper.

She isn't worth a fortune and she hasn't any stocks,
Her wealth is all in little shoes and pinafores and frocks.
In little rings of curling hair and big blue,
laughing eyes,
In leaves and grass and buds and flowers and bees and butterflies.
But when she comes in tired from play and crawls up on my knee
She's worth a hundred millions to her mother and to me.

She sits among her dolls and toys and doesn't seem to care
If wealth is all in rosy cheeks and locks of curly hair.
She toddles up to me and like an artful fairy clips
A coupon bearing love from off the sweetness of her lips.
And when she puts her arms around my neck and goos in glee,
She's worth uncounted millions to her mother and to me.

And when she's in her crib at night and daintily tucked in
The wealth of Croesus couldn't buy the dimple in her chin,
And as she blinks her roguish eyes to play at peek-a-boo,
She chuckles me a fortune with each archly spoken goo.
And though she has no fortune, I am sure you will agree,
She's a fortune, more than money, to her mother and to me. J. W. FOLEY.

HUNGARY'S QUARREL WITH THE KING ENDS

Coalition Leaders at Last Consent to a Compromise.

NEW CABINET TO BE FORMED

Alexander Wekerle to Head It—Crown Will Get Recruits and Army Funds Will Be Voted.

VIENNA, April 6.—After fourteen months of controversy, always of an acute and often of a bitter nature, between the Throne and the Coalition Parties the Hungarian crisis has finally been settled. Premier Fejervary has resigned and Alexander Wekerle has been appointed Premier, with a mandate to form a conciliatory Cabinet for Hungary.

The news of peace is received with rejoicing in both halves of the monarchy, every one being heartily tired of the struggle, which has had such a disastrous effect on the financial and economic situation in Hungary. The compromise, which came unexpectedly, was chiefly due to the efforts of the Coalition leaders, who feared at the last moment the advent of a period of absolutism, which was inevitable if the elections were not held before April 9, as prescribed by the Constitution. The Fejervary Cabinet welcomed the overtures of the Coalition, and thus an agreement was speedily reached.

Hungary can now return to her normal political existence. The elections will be held within the proper time, and Parliamentary Government will be re-established, the Crown will get the recruits wanted, the army funds will be voted, and the customs tariff and commercial treaties will be ratified by the Hungarian Parliament. The commercial union with Austria is assured until 1917.

Count Andrassy and Herr Kossuth today had an audience of Emperor Francis Joseph, and afterward conferred with Premier Fejervary. The Emperor approved of the proposal that Herr Wekerle be intrusted with the formation of a new Government.

It is probable that the Emperor-King, after a year's absence, will visit Budapest on April 9 in order to swear in the Wekerle Cabinet.

OUR FISHERMEN FINED.

Action of Newfoundland Causes Consternation in Gloucester.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 6.—The Government was informed to-night that the officials who went to the west coast on board the colonial cruiser Fiona had already begun proceedings against the American fishermen who, it is alleged, have invaded the three-mile limit for trawling and have otherwise violated the local fishery laws.

Clayton Morrissey, master of the schooner Elector of Gloucester, Mass., and Fred Morrissey, master of the Gloucester schooner Whyland, were fined $40 each to-day for using "bull tows" inshore and for fouling the fishing grounds by throwing offal overboard. Other prosecutions are pending.

The Government's prompt action is strongly approved by the residents along the coast affected by the alleged illegal practices of the fishermen.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 6.—It is declared that unless the State Department at Washington informs them that they must do so, the owners of the fishing schooners A. E. Whyland and Elector will not pay the fines imposed by Newfoundland.

The action of the Newfoundland Government has caused consternation among owners of fishing craft in this port. It was understood that the matter of fishing rights had been fixed under the treaty of 1818 between the United States and Newfoundland. It is believed that some Newfoundland law which conflicts with the treaty is responsible for the present trouble.

The matter will be called to the attention of Secretary of State Root.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The action of the Newfoundland authorities in fining American fishermen has so far not been brought officially to the attention of the State Department.

BUELOW IS MUCH BETTER.

Will Probably Go to Italy When He Is Strong Enough to Travel.

BERLIN, April 6.—Chancellor Bülow, who fainted in the Reichstag yesterday afternoon, was so much better to-day that he disposed of some correspondence with his Secretary and wished to receive the reports from the officials of the Foreign Office, but was persuaded that this was inadvisable.

In conversation with Princess Bülow the Chancellor said he regretted that he felt so badly while speaking yesterday as to be obliged to omit certain important statements which he intended to make about Germany's relations with the foreign powers.

The Emperor and Empress to-day sent an enormous bouquet of roses, carnations, and lilacs to Princess Bülow. She intended going yesterday to St. Margherita, a Winter resort near Rapallo, on the Gulf of Genoa, where her mother, Princess Minghetti, is stopping. The Chancellor will probably go there with the Princess as soon as he is strong enough to travel.

MILITANT ANTI-GAMBLERS.

Board a Steamer and Kill or Mortally Wound Five Men.

WARSAW, April 6.—Eight armed men to-day boarded the river steamer Wawel, plying between Warsaw and Plock, and when the vessel was in midstream ordered five gamblers who were playing in the cabin to go on deck, where the men shot the gamblers, killing three and mortally wounding two.

The men then ordered the Captain of the Wawel to stop the steamer at a way station, where they landed and disappeared in the woods.

ZULUS TO FIGHT ZULUS.

Rebels, It Is Said, Number Only 200—Expedition Leaves Durban.

GREYTOWN, Natal, April 6.—Bambaata, the leader of the Zulu rebels, is believed to be within seven miles of Greytown. He has only 200 followers.

It is impossible for infantry to penetrate the bush in pursuit of the rebels, but overlooking their hiding place is an eminence on which artillery is being placed.

Natives also are prepared to tackle Bambaata in native fashion in the bush.

DURBAN, April 6.—A punitive expedition started from Greytown this morning in pursuit of Bambaata.

49 Were Killed by Fall of Hotel.

NAGOLD, Black Forest, South Germany, April 6.—A revised list of the casualties resulting from the collapse of the Hotel Zum Hirschen yesterday shows that forty-nine persons lost their lives and that fifty were severely injured. Dr. von Pischek, the Minister of the Interior of Würtemberg, has arrived here, to inquire into the disaster.

GERMANY COOL TO RUSSIA.

Needs Cash Herself—Part of the Russian Loan to be Issued Here.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, April 6.—It is stated that Prince Bülow's illness in the Reichstag yesterday prevented him from replying to speeches made by various Deputies on the relations of Germany with foreign powers. It is understood that the Chancellor would not have made any sensational statements, but it is said that he would have indorsed the view that the German Government cannot at present encourage the participation of German finance in a fresh Russian loan.

It is stated that the loan will certainly not be placed on the German market, if only because the financial necessities of the empire and Prussia, which find expression in yesterday's announcement of new home loans amounting to nearly $150,000,000, render fresh calls upon the German money market undesirable.

How far the decision leading the German banks not to renew their recent experiment of participating in a Russian loan is due to the influence of the German Government is a matter of conjecture. The Boersen Courier has no doubt that the attitude of the Government settled the question. It states that the Berlin Boerse was unfavorably affected to-day by this decision, and that fears are entertained that German industry will be prejudiced by the diversion of Russian Government contracts to other countries.

The Kreuz Zeitung does not anticipate that the Government will initiate anything like a ruthless campaign against Russian credit and thinks it will only maintain an attitude of cool neutrality.

LONDON, April 6.—According to the understanding in financial circles here a Russian loan of $400,000,000 will be issued immediately after Easter in New York, London, Paris, and St. Petersburg, the two first-named cities probably taking between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 each and Paris $250,000,000.

The report that Germany has definitely decided not to participate in the loan is confirmed in London financial circles.

HUNGER STRIKE IN JAILS.

Political Prisoners at Moscow Are Starving Themselves.

MOSCOW, April 6.—The political prisoners, with whom the local jails are crowded, have declared a "hunger strike," (refusing to partake of food) in order to compel the authorities either to bring them to immediate trial or order their release.

Many of the prisoners have been three months in jail without being confronted with the charges against them.

The decision of the political prisoners to starve themselves has increased the excitement caused by the election campaign here, which closes on Sunday.

M. Shipoff, the well-known Zemstvo leader, heads the "Block" parties' list of twelve candidates for election to the lower house of Parliament. They are bidding strongly for Progressive support, announcing that they have severed all connection with the Reactionaries.

MOSCOW BANK ROBBER CAUGHT.

Leader of Band Which Looted the Mutual Credit Confesses.

ZURICH, April 6.—The leader of the band which robbed the Mutual Credit Bank of Moscow of $437,500 on March 20 has been arrested here. He is a young Russian, who arrived in Zurich on April 3 and had been drinking heavily.

The police took him into custody on the charge of intoxication, and found among his belongings a wallet filled with Russian banknotes. When the prisoner became sober he voluntarily confessed that he had headed the band of nineteen men who robbed the Mutual Credit Bank.

MOSCOW, April 6.—A telegram from Zurich says the leader of the men who robbed the Mutual Credit Bank has been identified as Belenzoff, formerly chief cashier of the Moscow Post Office, who was discharged from the Postal Service for participating in the December strike.

GORKY CAN LAND HERE.

Immigration Officials See No Reason to Keep Him Out.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The announcement from Paris last night that Maxim Gorky, the Russian Revolutionist and author, was on his way to the United States on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, was received with considerable interest at the Bureau of Immigration, where, it was alleged, nothing was known of his coming until the dispatch was read.

It was stated that the bureau was not in possession of such information regarding Gorky as would tend to debar him from landing. In discussing the case today one of the immigration officials maintained that Gorky did not come within the scope of Section 38 of the Immigration act, which prohibits the admission of any person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to all organized Government or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity, or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers of the Government of the United States or any other organized Government.

Unless, therefore, some unforeseen circumstance arises, no obstacle will be put in the way of Gorky's landing upon his arrival in New York.

CANAL FORTIFICATION ISSUE.

General Staff's Recommendations to be Laid Before Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The General Staff of the army believes that the line of the Panama Canal should be strongly fortified and has prepared a plan for the defenses which is now before Secretary Taft. But the Isthmian Canal Commission urges that no attempt be made to erect fortifications, and that the canal should be neutralized, just as is the Suez Canal.

Secretary Taft has taken up this subject with the President and Secretary Root, and it has been decided that in view of its importance the fortification project shall be laid before Congress, with an invitation to that body to express its desires and judgment.

FRENCH STRIKE TO CONTINUE.

Miners' Delegates Decide to Reject the Companies' Offer.

LENS, April 6.—The miners' delegates have decided to reject the companies' offer and to continue the strike. It is understood that the decision was unanimous.

The salvage work at Courrières continues. A number of coffined bodies were brought up from the Sallaumines pits to-day, and there were some heartrending identifications.

The lives of the managers of the mines have been threatened.

Jesuit General Near Death.

MR. CANNON IS OPPOSED TO TARIFF CHANGES NOW

Says Revision Should Be Postponed as Long as Possible.

WOULD CHECK PROSPERITY

But Must Be Complete When It Does Come—Question for the Nation to Decide.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Speaker Cannon to-day made an explanation of the letter recently written by him to a friend in East Liverpool, Ohio, regarding the tariff. The letter seemed to indicate that tariff revision would probably come in the near future.

"I was not aware that I was writing a letter for publication," said Mr. Cannon, "although I have no objection to its publication. There are many people in the country who believe that a single schedule or a few schedules of the tariff may be amended. This is entirely impracticable, for while an amendment to a single schedule might please a single interest, it could not command enough votes to enact it.

"In my judgment, nothing can be done except by a complete revision of the tariff which would be a compromise that would command a majority vote of the 386 members of the House and the 90 Senators.

"The enactment of such a revision and the time necessary to adjust it to conditions would halt production, consumption, and commerce for at least twelve months, and when the compromise is enacted, as a whole, it will probably not be an improvement on existing law. I do not believe a majority of the people at this time desire to interfere with the present conditions, which are the most prosperous conditions we have had in the Republic to the laborer, to the farmer, to the capitalist, to the producer, and to the consumer.

"That the time will come when a general revision will be entered upon I have no doubt, but, for the general interest of the whole country, the revision should be postponed as long as possible. Congress reflects the will of the people, and the House of Representatives is chosen every two years. There will be a general Congressional election next November. Our friends the enemy insist on an immediate revision of the tariff. If a majority of the people demand immediate, general revision, they will elect a majority of the members of this House in favor of immediate general revision."

COAL AND OIL INVESTIGATION.

Railroad Officials Summoned to First Hearing in Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The first hearing of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in its coal and oil investigation, under the recent resolution of Congress, will be held in the United States court rooms in Philadelphia on Tuesday next.

In speaking to-day of the investigation Chairman Knapp said:

"We are taking up first what may be called the Eastern bituminous situation, which, roughly, includes the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia bituminous coal fields, their ownership, the general character of the operations, and the relations of the lines moving that traffic to tidewater and Eastern destinations. The preliminary hearing at Philadelphia is mainly to ascertain the methods of the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia & Reading Lines, including, as a special subject of inquiry, the system of car distribution and the operation and effect of that system on those lines.

"We have directed the attendance on the part of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company of W. W. Atterbury, its General Manager and chief operating official, and Joseph G. Searles, its General Coal Traffic Agent, and on the part of Philadelphia & Reading of Theodore Voorhees, First Vice President and chief operating official."

RAISES TAX ON ALIENS.

House Committee Completes Its Bill to Restrict Immigration.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The House Committee on Immigration to-day completed its bill to further restrict the coming of aliens to this country. The measure will be reported by Mr. Gardner of Massachusetts, and a minority report will be made by Mr. Bennett of New York.

The bill increases the head tax on aliens from $2 to $5. It requires each male adult to possess $25 in money and each female $15. A family may be admitted on its head showing $50. An educational test provides that each immigrant over 16 years of age must be able to read in some language. It places in the excluded class imbeciles, the weak-minded, and manual laborers of poor physique. It gives the Department of Commerce and Labor discretion to admit or exclude immigrants under 16 years of age, coming to this country alone.

National Air Up to Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 6. — Secretary Bonaparte has advised Julius L. Lyons of New York that, after consulting with other members of the Cabinet, he has decided National music is a subject for legislative consideration, and does not fall within the province of members of the Cabinet. Mr. Lyons sought the co-operation of Mr. Bonaparte in a movement to give a prize for a suitable National air.

Bribers Can Be Brought from Japan.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—A supplemental treaty between this country and Japan, which was signed at Tokio yesterday, is comprised in a single article which includes bribery in the list of extraditable crimes.

HELP FOR THE BLIND.

Representatives of Charitable Organizations Seek Incorporation.

Two philanthropic organizations were represented before the State Board of Charities yesterday in a meeting preliminary to seeking articles of incorporation for a society to relieve the condition of the crippled and the blind. The organizations are the New York State Association for the Promotion of the Interests of the Blind and the Crippled Children's East Side Free School. The necessity for such a society was urged by representatives of the two associations.

Charles P. Howland was the principal speaker. He said it had been determined to study and employ all new methods to make the blind happy and more useful to themselves and those with whom they are associated. A canvass had shown that there are 865 blind persons in Manhattan and the Bronx, of whom 460 have expressed a desire to enter such an institution as it is proposed to establish.

William Rhinelander Stewart and Dr. Stephen Smith, both Charities Commissioners, heard the arguments. The State Association has for its sponsors Dr. Lyman Abbott, Miss Helen Keller, Miss Mary A. Hewitt, Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, a daughter of J. P. Morgan, and others.

The proposed institution will not conflict in any way with those already in existence, and its representatives declare that it will not be lacking in financial support. Bequests from Jacob Schiff and others have been refused recently, because the institution was not incorporated.

It is likely that the State Board of Charities will indorse the organization.

CARNEGIE EMBRACES "UNCLE REMUS" HARRIS

Makes a Special Stop at Atlanta in Order to Meet Him.

THEY DELIGHT EACH OTHER

"Just a Plain, Ordinary Fellow," Says the Author of His Visitor—"A Genius," Says Ironmaster.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 6.—Andrew Carnegie made a stop of six hours here to-day on his return journey from Tuskegee on purpose to meet Joel Chandler Harris, ("Uncle Remus.") The two had never met before, but soon after Mr. Carnegie had arrived at Mr. Harris's house they were sitting on a bench together cracking jokes as though they had been companions for years.

Mr. Carnegie was accompanied on his visit to Mr. Harris by the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott. They drove to Snap Bean Farm, the home of "Uncle Remus," in an automobile. Before it stopped Mr. Carnegie had shouted: "Is he here?" A moment later he and Dr. Abbott had alighted and were at the steps of the house.

Mr. Carnegie stopped and laughed.

"Do you know," said he, "I think I'll make Br'er Remus come out to see me." And sure enough "Uncle Remus" came out of the door and started down the steps. Scarcely had he reached the bottom step when Mr. Carnegie literally embraced him, and the philanthropist and the philosopher, were meeting like old friends kept apart by unkind fate, but now permitted to join hands and exchange anecdotes and reminiscences.

"Lord bless you!" exclaimed Mr. Carnegie, "it's simply a compliment. Your writing is so good that we are just trying to copy you."

The party then entered the Harris home, where Mr. Carnegie insisted that the author's wife should be introduced to him. "For," said he, "it is the women, after all, who make us what we are. Our mothers are women, and so are our wives, and usually they are responsible for all the good that is in us.

"Have the collards bloomed yet," asked Mr. Carnegie, "and are the snap-beans sprouting yet? And how is Old Sis cow?"

The author was at first rather reticent.

"You can just go right ahead and talk to me," said Mr. Carnegie, "because I've talked to your aristocrats a lot. There's Josh Billings—say, Br'er Rabbit, you remember the story of Josh Billings?" And here the two, after an exchange of sentences, punctuated by smiles, had a hearty laugh.

"I have certainly looked forward to this visit," said Mr. Carnegie as he was leaving, "and I have enjoyed every minute of it."

"And I regard it as a great privilege to have been present at the meeting between Mr. Harris and Mr. Carnegie," said Dr. Abbott, "for I know how much Mr. Carnegie wished to make the visit, and I have observed how thoroughly they have enjoyed meeting each other."

"Andrew Carnegie is just a plain, ordinary fellow," said Mr. Harris, when asked what he thought of the ironmaster. "He's just like home folks. He's a mighty good companion, and I hope he'll come and spend a couple of weeks with me as soon as he can."

"My visit to Mr. Harris was a great pleasure as well as a great privilege," said Mr. Carnegie. "He has given a helping hand to all the world and brought sunshine into many homes. He has won the hearts of all the children, and that is glory enough for any man. He is a genius."

The visit of Mr. Carnegie to Atlanta, four of whose institutions have received gifts from him totaling more than $200,000, was memorable in more ways than one. Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by a party including Dr. and Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Robert C. Ogden, Isaac N. Seligman, George A. Plympton, Dr. H. B. Frissell, President of Hampton Institute, and Mrs. Frissell; Wallace Buttrick, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes, and Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Villard.

The party were escorted to the Carnegie Library, where they were welcomed by Gov. Terrell and the Trustees of the library, and, after an inspection of the building, an informal luncheon was served. Later brief visits were made to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, where Mr. Carnegie took part in the laying of the corner stone of the new building, for which he recently made a contribution, and to the Georgia School of Technology, also a beneficiary of Mr. Carnegie's bounty. Then, while the others of the party went for a drive about the city, Mr. Carnegie and Dr. Abbott visited Mr. Harris. The party left by special train for New York early this evening.

Mr. Carnegie, at the library, heard ten pretty young women sing in chorus, "Andy, O Andy! You dandy, you dandy! Rah! Rah! Rah! Andy!" It seemed to delight the ironmaster, and he laughed heartily. This incident occurred as Mr. Carnegie and his party were descending from automobiles. The ten young women were on the library steps and continued their chorus until the reception was under way.

GIRL OF THE X-RAY EYE.

The County Medical Society's Agents Have Her Arrested and Held.

Anna McLinelli, Frances Benzecry, and Kitty Flanargoe, agents of the County Medical Society, went into the office of "The Girl With the X-Ray Eyes," otherwise Mme. Jane Endor, of 1,947 Broadway, a few days ago and told her that they were ill.

"We are suffering pain and want to be cured by your treatment," they said.

"Very simple," declared the woman of scientific sight. "I can fix you right in a moment." Then she rubbed her hands over them and gave them a prescription. The society's agents give this account of what followed:

"The trouble with you," Mme. Endor told Miss Flanargoe, "is that you have swallowed something that's alive, and it is still there. Your blood has stopped circulating, and now you can't sleep."

"What is this live thing?" asked the patient.

"It is some kind of fish, and it has legs like a spider; but don't worry, you'll be all right." Miss Flanargoe promised not to worry and departed.

She then went to the office of Mrs. M. E. B. Frank of 363 West Fifty-eighth Street, who had advertised herself as "A Doctor of Suggestive Therapeutics."

"I'll put one of my substitutes under the spell of hypnotism and show you how I do business," explained the "doctor." Then she summoned a colored girl and put her in a dark room.

"I'm in a beautiful place," murmured the substitute. Then the girl told all about Miss Flanargoe's illness.

"It's remarkable!" exclaimed the patient.

Then she paid $2.

Yesterday the three agents had the two "doctors" arraigned before Magistrate Finn in the West Side Court on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. According to the agents, Mrs. Frank had issued circulars, which said:

"Jesus thoroughly understood the principles of hypnotism; the power of suggestion, and mental control is strongly illustrated in the healing of the daughter of Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue. A glance over the miraculous cures of Jesus will show conclusively that they were accomplished by a method similar to that known to-day as suggestive therapeutics."

Mme. Endor was held for examination in Special Sessions to-day, and Mrs. Frank was paroled in the custody of her attorney till next Friday.

A HERO NIPPED IN THE BUD.

Untimely Arrival of the Owner of the Ancient Bendevar.

"Yes," went on Policeman Charles Koerbacher, as he stood before Sergt. McCann in the Tenderloin Station last night; "yes, the horse was madly racing down Twenty-third Street when I ran out and seized him by the bridle. He was going too fast to stop suddenly, and so I was dragged along the ground. I thought for a while that the big colt was going to outdo me, but at Broadway I—"

And then W. H. Bland, an old negro who said he lived at 216 West Thirtieth Street, walked in to interrupt.

"Sergeant, is you seen or heerd anything 'bout mah hoss an' wagin?" he wanted to know.

"What kind of a horse and wagon was it?" asked Sergt. McCann, keeping an eye on Koerbacher.

"Dar warn't nuthin' particular 'bout de wagin, only it war a single wagin an' had on it one table, one set of harness, a bobber cheer, an' two other kind of cheers, an' a 'frigerator. 'Cause, you see, I'm a second-hand furniture man.

"But dere war somethin' particular 'bout de hoss. His name war Bendevar, an' he war betwixt twenty an' fo'ty year ole. He is a sort of cross betwixt a bay an' a roan, he tail bein' mixed wif gray. He am a good an' a steady hoss, an' he'll stand wifout hitchin. I reckon he got hungry to-night, an' started fer de stable, an' somebody must 'a' picked him up. I bought him at de Bull's Head sales fer de sum of $48.10, an' I would not take $50 cash fer dat hoss dis minute. Naw, Sir, he ain't no runner. De onliest time he run am when he gwine to de stable, an' he don't cut a big figger den. But he a good hoss fer me."

Investigation showed that it was really Bendevar that the heroic Koerbacher had caught at the risk of his life as the animal was "madly racing" down Twenty-third Street.

THRONG HEARS DR. TORREY.

Evangelist Addresses Big Audience in the Interest of Summer Meetings.

The Rev. Dr. Reuben A. Torrey and Charles M. Alexander, the revivalists who recently held in Great Britain a series of evangelistic meetings, preached and sang at Carnegie Hall last night in the interest of the Evangelistic Committee of New York, which is making preparations for its tent services in this city during the coming Summer.

Last Summer the committee had five tents; this year it wants ten, and to defray expenses it asks the public for $40,000. Some of the money has already been guaranteed.

Carnegie hall was crowded to the doors to listen to Dr. Torrey, and there were so many people who could not gain admission that an overflow meeting was held in Calvary Baptist Church, across the street.

"We are here in the interests of a very definite movement," said Dr. Torrey, "but what I have to say was said 2,900 years ago. It is in the Proverbs. Ask the men of to-day whom they regard as the wise men of to-day, and you will get a variety of answers. They will say the man who has accumulated a fortune, the man who has come to be a General in the army, or the man who is a great propagator of worldly wisdom, but I say that the wise man is the man who saves souls.

"What is wealth? At the Chicago Fair, thirteen years ago, I saw a magnificent diamond on exhibition, costing a fabulous fortune. Thousands of people marveled at it. It was bought by a rich man for his wife. When that man died in this city some time ago that wife refused to go to his deathbed, and within four weeks after he died she married another man. That is wealth."

The Rev. Dr. Wilton Merle Smith presided, and the Rev. Dr. C. L. Goodell, the Rev. Dr. H. A. Stimson, the Rev. Dr. Richard Hartley, and the Rev. Dr. Donald Sage Mackay also spoke.

It was announced that the Brick Presbyterian Church had promised to support one tent at a cost of $3,000; that the West End Presbyterian and Grace Methodist Churches had volunteered to support another; that the Dutch Reform Church would do the same; that a woman whose name was not given would give $3,000; that a second would give $1,000, and a third $500.

$7,000,000 SUIT SETTLED.

Schandein Heirs at Milwaukee Reach an Agreement Out of Court.

MILWAUKEE, April 6.—The $7,000,000 Schandein case has been settled out of court. Announcement to this effect was made by Attorney George P. Miller on behalf of all parties of interest in the suit in Judge Halsey's branch of the Circuit Court this afternoon. He requested that the case be continued until Monday in order that the terms agreed upon may be reduced to writing, and this was done.

The litigation was over the estate of Mrs. Lisette Schandein, whose property was valued at $7,000,000. Of this amount a share estimated at $6,000,000 was left to Mrs. Jacob Heyl, a daughter. Most of the remainder, estimated in value at $600,000, was willed to two other children, Mrs. Ella Frank and Emil Schandein. Mrs. Frank and Emil Schandein were the contestants in the suit. The will was admitted to probate by Judge Carpenter, and the present suit was brought up on an appeal.

The parlor car Victoria was attached to the train for their use. Besides the wife and daughter of the Governor General, the party included Lady Alexander Beauclaire, Capt. Newton, and Col. Hanbury Williams.

LAST TRIBUTES PAID TO NOCQUET'S MEMORY

Funeral Services Held Amid Statues and Paintings.

EULOGY IN BORGLUM STUDIO

The Body of the Sculptor-Aeronaut Placed in a Receiving Vault to Await Final Disposition.

Paul Nocquet's body was placed in a receiving vault yesterday afternoon, in Pinelawn Cemetery, L. I., where it will remain until word is received from his family in Belgium as to whether they wish it sent to his native land for burial.

The last tribute of love and respect that could be shown to the memory of the aeronaut and sculptor was paid by his friends in the simple but impressive funeral services held yesterday morning in the studio of Nocquet's closest friend in this country, Gutzon Borglum, at 166 East Thirty-eighth Street.

Sculptors, artists, and others of the dead man's friends gathered there, and the unusual gathering illustrated the many points of life that Nocquet had touched in his twenty-nine years. Probably twenty women were among the number, and most of them brought small boxes of flowers.

As the volunteer quartet, seated in a tiny gallery overlooking the studio with its collection of plaster casts scattered here and there, opened the services by softly singing "Be Thou Still," many eyes were wet. Men as well as women gave visible evidence of their grief.

Plaster casts of grimacing gargoyles suspended from the walls looked down upon the solemn assembly. The coffin, banked with a profusion of loose flowers, violets, roses, Easter lilies, hyacinths, white lilacs, and tulips, stood in front of a heroic unfinished study in oils, representing Apollo driving three spirited horses over the sea. "The Setting of the Sun" is the name that Mr. Borglum will give the picture, and to more than one it seemed symbolic of the end of Paul Nocquet.

On a stand just back of the coffin was one of the dead sculptor's favorite pieces, a statuette called by him "The Burning Urn." Another work of the dead man, a plaster bas relief representing the figure of a man, was placed amid the black folds in front of the coffin.

Father Theodore Wucher of the Church of St. Vincent de Paul read the Catholic prayers for the dead, and was assisted by the Rev. L. L. Conrardy of St. John's Home, Brooklyn, who was the companion and successor of Father Damien in the leper work at Molokai. Chancellor Charles Roemaet of the Belgian Consulate then stepped from one of the little groups, and on behalf of the Belgian colony in this city, spoke of the life and death of the young sculptor.

"Not only the people of this community," he said, "but all the people of the United States and of the whole civilized world, were terribly shocked on learning of the sad death of the young sculptor and aeronaut, Paul Nocquet, who after having braved and conquered with so much courage and skill all the dangers of his daring, but to him attractive and fascinating, voyage, fell a victim to his own bravery and self-reliance, and perhaps his laudable desire, but too stubborn haste, to acquaint his friends and the world with the success of his great undertaking.

"Poor boy, to be mowed down thus on the threshold of the temple of merit and of fame! He came here a few years ago, without friends and without funds, but with an indomitable energy, a love for work, and a mastery of his art which were sure to throw wide open for him, in this progressive country, the portals of success and fortune.

"Born on the banks of the River Senne, in the old domain of the ancient Dukes of Brabant, Paul Nocquet had given early proofs of his spirit of independence and boldness.

"While our friend was pursuing his studies, and making what money he could earn in Paris he was always known to send to his mother the greater part of his earnings and savings, and this explains to a great extent why such a meritorious artist should leave behind him so little of worldly goods.

"Belgium loses in him one of its most gifted children, his mother a most loving and devoted son, his friends a kind-hearted comrade, and the Stars and Stripes a prospective citizen destined to add more fame and glory to the flag. Farewell, Paul Nocquet, farewell."

P. J. Leempoels, a Belgian portrait painter and a close friend of Nocquet, spoke a few words in French. Augustus Post, on behalf of the Aero Club of America, told briefly of the dead aeronaut's interest in ballooning and the scientific study that he had given the subject.

The quartet then closed the services by singing "In the Homeland." Its members were Miss Edith Chapman, Miss Helen Niebuhr, John Strong, and Claude Cunningham. The pallbearers who bore the coffin to the hearse were Gutzon Borglum, Augustus Post, Charles Roemaet, the Rev. George W. Montgomery, J. Nilson Laurvik, Daniel C. French, Walter Shirlaw, and Pierre Mali, the Belgian Consul. Half a dozen carriages followed the hearse to the cemetery.

Gutzon Borglum has as yet made no plans for the disposition of Nocquet's estate. Some of his sculptor friends discussed informally yesterday a plan to save a number of Nocquet's best pieces and have them purchased as a memorial gift for the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

LOST—A CEMENT BARREL.

It Had a High Old Time Before It Invaded the Subway.

It was just an old cement barrel, which had seen better days. Its hoops were loosened, its staves sprung, top and bottom were gone, and it creaked infirmity when the wind blew. Whence it came no one knew, and when the merry breeze rolled it suddenly into Times Square yesterday afternoon the old barrel itself did not know where it was going.

Shooting out of Forty-third Street, it bumped against the hoof of a trotting horse, narrowly escaped the wheel of a hansom cab, but bobbed up, damage free, in the rear.

"Hey!" yelled a mounted policeman to a common or foot underling, "git that bar'l out o' th' way!"

The policeman hastened to obey, but an old barrel that is out for a good time and does not care a hoop, any way, is a difficult thing to tackle in a stiff breeze.

The policeman approached, the barrel stopped rolling and trembled uncertainly, and then rushed toward the sidewalk policeman, who jumped back. Despite his agility, he was bowled over. The barrel then continued on its downtown course, the mounted policeman admonishing the man on foot to "get after it." Before the offending object could be removed from the path of traffic it became wedged under a north-bound car. Before it was removed the barrel had been squeezed into such a shape that its designer would not have recognized it. When it was thrown in the path of a swiftly approaching automobile it had a shape of sorts, but when the machine had passed it had none. The car crew gasped:

"Where's that barrel?"

It had vanished down a Subway entrance, from which sounds of strife issued, which have yet to be investigated.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The wedding of Miss Lilian Morrison and William J. Tingue, Jr., will take place on May 8, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in All Souls' Church, Fourth Avenue and Twentieth Street, the Rev. "Coin Silver Plate" All Right.

The Court of Special Sessions, in a decision written by Justice Deuel, ruled yesterday that a silversmith who puts "extra coin silver plate" on his ware is not violating the law, which has heretofore been contended to mean that anything bearing the words "coin silver" must be nine-tenths solid silver throughout.

GEN. PORTER URGES NEW RIVERSIDE PARK

Philbin Opposes Him, Saying East Side Needs Parks More.

RICHMOND GIVES CITY ONE

The Offer Takes the Breath of the Board of Estimate—New Thames Street Favored.

Elaborate arguments for and against the plan to lay out the land between Riverside Avenue, Claremont Avenue, West 116th Street, and West 122d Street as a public park were presented to the Board of Estimate yesterday, but no action was taken other than to refer the matter to the special Committee on Small Parks for a further hearing, to be announced later.

Gen. Horace Porter headed the delegation to urge the plan, while Eugene A. Philbin, for the Metropolitan Parks Association, with John C. Shaw, opposed the plan, on the ground that the money could be spent to better advantage for a park in the congested east side sections. Gen. Porter represented the Grant Monument Association, and Charles Stewart Smith of the Rapid Transit Commission also urged its adoption, as did Walter S. Logan, on behalf of the Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, and Francis E. Ward of the Real Estate Brokers' Association.

The cost of the scheme was given as $2,500,000 by its projectors, but Mr. Shaw declared the city would be fortunate if the sum did not run to twice that figure. Those favoring the plan urged that the land was part of the original battlefield known as Buckwheat Field, where the British soldiers were repulsed by the Colonial troops.

Mr. Philbin said that the park would satisfy a sentimental demand, but that the city's first duty was to provide necessities, not luxuries. Gen. Porter urged that Grant's Tomb was threatened with being surrounded with skyscraping buildings if the land was left to contractors and builders.

A petition signed by various patriotic societies of the State, as well as by the officers of Columbia and Barnard College and by the Trustees of the cathedral and Archbishop Farley, was presented and turned over to the special committee.

President Cromwell of Richmond created a small sensation when he announced that the citizens of his borough desired to present a park to the city.

"Do I understand that this is a gift?" asked the Mayor when he recovered his breath.

"Yes, Sir," replied Mr. Cromwell, "they present this park as a gift and, I think, offer an example that other sections of the city might emulate."

"What's the matter with the property?" demanded the Controller. Mr. Cromwell said there wasn't anything the matter with it.

"This action is respectfully called to the attention of the gentlemen who favor the establishment of the Riverside Park," said the Mayor, as he added his vote to the unanimous voice of the board in accepting the gift from Richmond.

The committee appointed to consider the proposition of the 111 Broadway Corporation, the Trinity Corporation—Mr. Metz, Mr. McGowan, and Mr. Ahearn—reported favorably on the closing of the present Thames Street and the construction of a wider Thames Street a few feet north of the present boundaries of the Trinity Building. The city gets by the scheme 780 feet of land, and the corporation gets an opportunity to double the income-producing capacity of its land.

The board referred the report to the Corporation Counsel to see that the deal between the city and the corporation was legally executed.

An appropriation of $4,100,000 corporate stock was made to the Dock Department as a second installment of the $21,000,000 Commissioner Bensel estimates his department will need this year. Most of the money the Commissioner wants is to pay for terminals and water front already condemned or in process of condemnation by the city.

The board approved acquiring a site for school purposes adjoining the present site of the Erasmus Hall High School, Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn.

SIR WYKE BAYLISS DEAD.

President of the Royal Society of British Artists—Born in 1835.

LONDON, April 6.—Sir Wyke Bayliss, President of the Royal Society of British Artists, died here suddenly last night from heart disease.

Sir Wyke Bayliss was one of those men who, having made high reputations in one art, have damaged such reputations by ill-advised attempts to succeed in other arts. As a painter of architectural subjects he was a legitimate successor of Samuel Prout, and produced many works which have become not only well known but famous. Late in life he turned his attention to literature and wrote a series of books which, one and all, were "slated" by the reviewers as puerile, hysterical efforts, for the publication of which there was no excuse.

He was born in 1835, and studied at the National Gallery, the British Museum, and the Royal Academy. When he was 18 years old he entered an architect's office, and, though he never abandoned his intention of becoming a painter, his work in architecture probably had a good deal of influence in determining his later career. At any rate, as soon as he settled down to painting he devoted himself principally to the depicting of old Gothic buildings. He traveled all over Europe and painted interiors and exteriors of cathedrals. In the course of his travels he picked up much antiquarian knowledge and also acquired a large and interesting collection of antiquities.

Bayliss became a member of the Society of British Artists in 1865, and in 1888 was elected its President. Later the prefix "Royal" was given to the society, and in 1897 Bayliss was made a Knight. He was a member of various other societies.

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 6@30 Per Cent.

Prices Decline, Then Rally on Easier Money and Prospective Gold Engagements.

The first quotation for call money on the New York Stock Exchange was 25 per cent., and the announcement of this rate was the signal for a fall in prices like that which has occurred on previous days of the week, when in the final hour of the trading a similar rate for money has obtained. This unsettlement in prices, which came shortly before the end of the first hour of business, continued until after the noon hour, money having in the meantime once again touched 30 per cent., the high rate of Wednesday and Thursday. Then, as rates eased, prices slowly regained the ground lost by them, the movement developing with the announcement of a 6 per cent. rate into a vigorous advance, under the leadership of Pennsylvania, which was maintained up to the close of business, when the general level of prices was well above that of the night before. It is altogether likely that yesterday's extreme money rate would not have been touched had it not been for the fact that borrowers who for two days past had futilely delayed arranging their loans until late in the hope that the demand being satisfied rates would ease off, pursued exactly the opposite course in an attempt to avoid the mistakes of previous days. This concentrated the borrowing in the fore part of the session, and 30 per cent. money resulted. After this demand had been met the easing of rates was continuous through the day, and money at the close was only 6 per cent. In addition to the influence derived from this source, encouragement was found in the announcement late in the day of the engagement of a small amount of gold in London for importation, and intimations that at least one banking house had made arrangements looking to the engagement of very much larger amounts in the same market on Monday. Sentiment was also helped by the fact that Pennsylvania shares assumed the leadership of the market, this issue, in fact, displaying more activity and more vigor in its two-point rise than at any previous time in the present year. Little interest attached to price movements elsewhere.

Preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week, based on Sub-Treasury statistics and reported transactions of the banks, revealed very clearly one of the forces at work through the week tending to discommode the money market. According to these estimates, there were sent to Philadelphia and Boston alone some $6,000,000, Philadelphia taking $4,000,000 of this. The total loss to the interior was figured at $8,948,000, this comparing with a loss of only $4,000,000 to the interior last week. Estimates of the total amount of cash lost by the banks ranged from $7,500,000 to $10,500,000, the latter figure being more than twice the amount of the surplus reserve held by the banks at the close of last week. The burden put upon the loan item and upon unnoted money movements to preserve any substantial portion of this reserve is obviously heavy. Demand sterling fell still further, following the continued activity in money, the rate touching 4.8455, a decline of 30 points from Thursday's quotation. Under these conditions our bankers are favorably placed to secure such gold as can be had in the European markets. Time money rates rose sharply, funds for short terms lending at 5¾ per cent., and for the long periods 5½ per cent.

CALL MONEY OPENS AT 30, DROPS TO 6 PER CENT.

Large Gold Importations from London Looked For.

MORE TALK OF TREASURY AID

So Far as Wall Street Knows, However, Secretary Shaw Has No Immediate Relief Plan.

Call money was again lent at 30 per cent. yesterday, but before the day was over, sufficient funds were offered to reduce the rate to 6 per cent. There were reports of heavy engagements of gold abroad, but none of these reports was definitely verified beyond the announcement that the National City Bank had obtained a small amount of the precious metal in London. International houses, however, concurred in the opinion that a large amount of gold which it is expected will arrive in London on Monday will be taken for New York. Report had it that this gold had already been contracted for by one of the international houses, but those who were supposed to have made the engagement refused to say more than that the gold was pretty sure to come to New York.

Yesterday's estimates of the loss in cash which the banks have suffered this week varied from about $7,000,000 to over $10,000,000. Forecasts of the bank statement current in conservative banking quarters indicated some reduction in loans, but not enough to prevent the wiping out of the surplus reserve should the loss in cash prove to be as large as $10,000,000. Transfers through the Sub-Treasury yesterday were unimportant, amounting to only $50,000 sent to New Orleans. The continued stringency in the call money market has resulted in higher rates for time loans. Sixty and ninety day loans were quoted yesterday at 5¾ per cent. to 6 per cent., and 5¾ was bid for six months.

Some bankers were confident yesterday morning that Secretary Shaw would come to the relief of the money market by announcing additional deposits of Government money with the National banks. A number of bankers, among them some who were strongly of the opinion last Fall that the Government should not interfere in the money market, expressed the opinion yesterday that the situation at present called for measures of relief by the Treasury Department.

The high rates for money caused a further sharp decline in foreign exchange, which fell to a point making it profitable to import gold were any available at the European centres. Demand sterling sold down to 4.8450 and closed only a few points above that rate.

Discussing the week's movements of currency, The Wall Street Journal says in its issue of to-day:

> The reported movements of currency this week indicate a loss in cash held by the banks of $10,493,300. They received from the interior $3,928,100, and sent to the interior $12,876,400, including transfer through the Sub-Treasury of $750,000 to New Orleans, $300,000 to Washington, $1,500,000 to San Francisco, and $2,406,000 National banknotes sent to Washington for redemption. The loss to the interior was $8,948,300.
> Receipts of new gold were $1,891,900, namely: $1,150,000 gold imports, $721,900 on New York Assay Office checks, $11,900 on San Francisco mint checks, and $8,100 on Seattle Assay Office checks. Gold exports were $50,000 in coin to Colon.
> Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $19,344,100. Payment by the banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, &c., were $22,731,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $3,386,900. The total loss to the interior, $8,948,300, by gold exports, $50,000, and on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $12,385,200. Deducting from this the gain from new gold, $1,891,900, the net loss was $10,493,300.
> Receipts of currency from the interior were about $1,181,700 less than in the preceding week, while shipments were about $5,299,200. Receipts were chiefly from nearby and Eastern points and interior Southern cities. Shipments, aside from the transfers through the Sub-Treasury, were chiefly to Philadelphia and Boston and to the West. Philadelphia took about $4,000,000 and Boston not quite half as much.

So far as is known to Wall Street the Secretary of the Treasury has no present intention of releasing Government funds.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Enormous Amounts of Unfilled Business on Books of Leading Mills.

The United States Steel Corporation, according to trade reports, has contracted for 50,000 tons of Bessemer for the second quarter. The price is put at $17.25 at Valley furnaces. Reports of the unfilled business on the books of leading mills give the Carnegie Company 900,000 tons, the Illinois Steel Company 800,000 tons, and a full year's business to the Pennsylvania, Cambria, and Lackawanna Steel Companies.

President Joseph Wharton of the American Iron and Steel Association is quoted as predicting an advance in pig iron of as much as $1 a ton. He says that steelmakers seem to need all they can get, and declares that the independent makers have sold their entire product for months ahead, in some cases for the entire year. He is making pig at the rate of more than 1,000 tons a day, and expects to increase his output.

The New York City Water Department has awarded a contract for 5,000 tons of cast-iron pipe. The time for submitting bids for the 30,000 tons for Manhattan and the Bronx has been extended to April 18 because of an error in specifications.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 6.—Supplies of money were more abundant in the market to-day. Discounts were firm, owing to the weakness of Continental exchanges and the state of the money market in New York. American eagles advanced, and the price of bar gold was put up ¼d., in anticipation of a demand from America.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were irregular and trading was stagnant, the numerous loan flotations checking investment purchases. Consols were easier, which was attributed to the situation in Natal.

Americans opened dull, but recovered to above parity, notably Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, Erie, and Union Pacific, but the tone generally was unsettled, and business was inactive. Prices drooped during the last hour, and the market closed dull at the lowest figures of the day.

Foreigners generally were fairly steady. Japanese were irregular.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101¼.

Bar silver firm at 29⅝d per ounce.

Gold premiums were quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.22; Lisbon, 4.

Bar gold, 77s 10⅝d. American eagles, 76s 5⅝d.

Bullion amounting to £83,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £50,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—The purely local stocks did not follow the fluctuations of the Arbitrage issues, but held remarkably steady, and, in the late recovery in New York, some of them at least rallied sharply. Philadelphia Rapid Transit was among the latter, but no explanations of its movement were given. The Street, however, is becoming less apprehensive over threatened competition, notwithstanding talk of competing companies. General Asphalt issues, while not active, were very weak, which is due to the unsavory light in which its President, John J. Mack, is being shown. American Cement displayed strength on the rumor that favorable developments affecting the company are pending.

Lehigh Valley held its own, although it was definitely stated that the operators will decline to arbitrate the anthracite differences. Local banks and trust companies have marked up their call loan rate to 6 per cent.

Total sales, 27,052 shares.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A prominent commission house complains: "It is all very well for the banks 'to dissemble their love,' but why do they kick us downstairs?"

When things are running smoothly and Wall Street feels vain and boastful, anybody is applauded who will stand up in meeting and declare that this is the money centre of the world, with strong emphasis on "the." Wall Street's distinctions as a money centre are altogether too wonderful to be summed up in the tiny part of speech so emphasized. They require large and as yet unborn adjectives to do them full justice. One of its distinctions is that at least two or three times a year, when business is active, borrowing money on the Stock Exchange becomes a wild, delirious speculation. Brokers refuse one day to borrow their money in the forenoon at 10 per cent., hoping to be able to get it cheaper in the afternoon, and finally take it at 30. The next day they go in early and pay 30 per cent. with what resignation they can muster, and then two hours later money is offered on the floor at 6 per cent. On Thursday a broker borrowed all but $50,000 of the money he wanted at about 10 per cent., and decided, as he said, to gamble on getting the $50,000 cheaper in the last hour. He paid 30 per cent. for it. Yesterday he borrowed all of his money at the highest rates of the forenoon, and then bet his partners that money would lend at 6 per cent. before the close. It did. The National City Bank came in during the afternoon and doled out money in small amounts at 6 per cent. There was not enough of it to go around, and it was reported from the floor that brokers were matching for it. What would the world think of brokers matching on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange for money in $50,000 lots, or of a money market in which call rates are quoted at 6 per cent. one minute and 15 or 20 per cent. the next?

A visitor from Lombard Street who watched prices advance last December with call money quoted at 100 per cent. said: "The situation is perfectly clear to me. Your pools have got all the money and all the stocks."

Evidently a mistake was made in guessing the age of the Community of Interest idea at three and a half years. It must have been more than five years old when it died. The first appearance of the concrete idea was in an article written in 1900 by Edward G. Johns. He developed it at some length and touched a responsive chord. The Black Diamond reprinted the article in full, and presently the locution "community of interest" was in great vogue. It precisely expressed the notion then in favor among financial interests. There are persons who will remember that the idea was once formally embodied in a round-robin letter signed by four or five of the most eminent railroad capitalists in Wall Street and addressed to other eminent railroad capitalists as an invitation to them to come in and be nice. Nothing came of it. The gentlemen who signed the round-robin doubtless remember it as an act of temporary weakness. Between some of them financial chasms have since opened.

The withdrawal of H. C. Frick from the Rock Island Directorate has given rise to less comment than might have been expected to follow such an announcement, considering the prominence of the man. It is a step that is likely to cause Mr. Frick's name to be associated more intimately than hitherto with that of Mr. Harriman. They are close friends, and, apparently also, they have become allies in finance. It is understood that Mr. Frick liquidated his holdings of Rock Island some time ago. His retirement from the board has had no effect upon the quotations for Rock Island securities.

Mr. Harriman begins to loom large upon the horizon. With the Union Pacific treasury and its free assets, estimated all the way from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, behind him, he is undoubtedly the most formidable figure in the railroad world of this day. He is ambitious, very aggressive, and intolerant of dictation. But even his enemies concede that he is a great railroad man. The Wall Street Journal, which evidently does not love Mr. Harriman for the enemies he has made, says: "In the years specified, and for divers and sundry reasons, these financial interests have become enemies or antagonists of one man, E. H. Harriman: 1901, James J. Hill, J. P. Morgan & Co., First National Bank; 1903-04, Edwin Hawley, Charles H. Tweed, the Rock Island crowd; 1905, Hermann Sielcken, Thomas F. Ryan, George J. Gould, James H. Hyde; 1906, Stuyvesant Fish, James Speyer."

Presumably acting upon the idea that a moving up of stop loss orders and a three days' reaction in prices had brought a weak bull account nearly to the surface, traders went in at the opening yesterday morning and hammered the market aggressively. Prices ran off pretty sharply in the first half hour, but large supporting orders had evidently been placed in the stocks upon which a bearish demonstration might be expected to converge. This support was most pronounced in Union Pacific around 157, Amalgamated Copper around 110, and United States Steel common around 42. There was very heavy trading in these stocks at fractions above and below the prices named. There was one lot of 3,900 Amalgamated Copper at 110, one of 3,200 Steel common at 42, and lots of 1,500 shares and more in Union Pacific were reported consecutively on the tape. The lowest prices were made in the first hour. Thereafter the market disregarded the wild quotations for money. At midday the whole active list was higher than Thursday's closing, and further general improvement occurred during the afternoon.

The strength the market has displayed this week in the face of 30 per cent. call money has but one precedent within the memory of the younger generation of traders, and that was in December of last year. The bull crowd is repeating the arguments which were advanced then. Money is going to be easier after a while. In the meantime the bulls are willing to pay the price for money and keep their stocks. Commission houses hold exactly the same attitude they held in December. They cannot permit their clients to load up with stocks in the face of such money market conditions, to which everything else is subordinate in their estimation. There is very little commission house participation in the market at the present time, except that which falls within the definition of professional or semi-professional business. Bankers held out the hope of easier money ten days or a fortnight hence, some of them expecting the turn to come even sooner, and so long as the so-called big interests in whose hands many of the stocks are concentrated show no anxiety, the more highly speculative followers of the market are willing to pay the high rates for money and hold on.

"There are only two parties in this market," said a broker yesterday. "On one side you have the big manipulators and on the other you have the professional trading element. There is no public in between."

Flower & Co. were reported yesterday to be buying Amalgamated Copper heavily around 110. The stock gave a very satisfactory account of itself. In the forenoon it sold as low as 109⅝, then it rallied to 111⅞, and closed at the top. The market for this stock evidently is controlled absolutely by the bull crowd.

Pennsylvania was turned to the bull side of the market yesterday in a somewhat emphatic manner. It enjoyed a maximum advance of 2 per cent., and closed within a fraction of its highest. The buying was the most aggressive that has been seen in the stock for many weeks, and, so far as could be learned, it had no reference to developments in the labor situation. The choice of time for bringing the stock forward and giving it the prominence it has been so long denied might strike some persons as somewhat malapropos, since conditions yesterday seemed hardly propitious for inaugurating a bull movement, but Pennsylvania is a stock that is often handled in that manner. Its strength was a benefit to the whole market, the more so, perhaps, as it was unexpected. The stock has been one of the most conspicuous laggards in the list. Bankers who are consulted on Pennsylvania affairs explained the advance yesterday by saying that a good many persons had evidently made up their minds that the stock was cheap. They themselves would venture to say that it was not dear.

The difference between buying or selling a line of 50,000 shares and trading in 100-share lots evidently has never been considered by those who blithely report the exact fraction at which some eminent capitalist has just liquidated an interest of $7,500,000 in Union Pacific or taken an equivalent interest in something else. The big interests, so called, may control the market, especially their own stocks, but they have not yet perfected that control to the fineness of eighths.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 6.—Money is again tight in the local market, and the prevailing rate is 6 per cent. Though the interest and dividend disbursements this week were large, it is said that there has been an extraordinary demand for money, which has resulted in a tightness in the market.

The decline in the prices of United Railways securities the last few days is attributed to rumors concerning labor troubles in the operating department of the company and the tightness in the money market.

Weakness of the stocks of the Houston Oil Company has been accompanied here by rumors of a pending assessment on the stock. That an assessment is contemplated, however, is denied by interests prominently identified with the company, though a reorganization of the finances of the company is in prospect, which, it is said, will entail the issue of new securities, which come ahead of the preferred and common stocks.

While the trading was fairly active to-day, most of the favorite and speculative issues suffered fractional declines. Seaboard ten-year 5s declined ¼. Alabama Coal and Iron 5s jumped ½. Mercantile Trust advanced 3 points.

Georgia Southern and Florida second preferred advanced ½. Northern Central dropped ½. Atlantic Coast Line rights broke ½ to 5, rallying later to 5¼. United Railways pooled stock eased back ¼ to 18¼. Seaboard new common declined ½.

The close was firm, but dull. Sales: Shares, 350; bonds, $44,000. The list:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 6.—There was some support for Box Board preferred on the local Exchange to-day after its liquidation of yesterday. The stock opened at 11⅝, but sold up to 12⅝. The common was easy around 1⅝. Subway shares were rather active but steady around 51. Brick lost the firmness it showed when it sold ex dividend and eased to 60. National Carbon, which lost its dividend yesterday, ran up 2 points, to 91. Biscuit was easy at 66. Union Traction common went at 6⅝. South Side Elevated sold at 94. Illinois Tunnel bonds showed some activity as of late, and sold at 92.

In the afternoon Swift's was rallied to 107¼, recovering from the weakness of yesterday caused by selling on the news of the death of Chairman E. C. Swift. Diamond Match lost its recent strength and sold below 134. The special meeting of May 1 is not unlikely to be a test of President Barber's dividend policy. Canal and Dock was weakened around 61¼.

Money, 5½@6 per cent. New York exchange, 10@5c discount.

WINTER WHEAT THRIVING.

Reports to Bradstreet's, However, Show Backward Spring Planting.

A special report gathered by Bradstreet's on crops indicates excellent Winter wheat conditions. The same rains, however, which have helped the Winter crop have retarded Spring planting from one to two weeks in the Southwest. The first Government crop report of this season is due on April 10.

Bradstreet's telegrams follow:

ST. JOSEPH.—Wheat conditions are excellent. Outlook superior to same time one and two years ago.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Abundant moisture practically assures a good wheat crop. Indications point to a yield of at least 500,000 tons.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Crop conditions are excellent.

CHICAGO.—Winter wheat condition is favorable; the crop is making good progress. Plenty of rain. Farm work is delayed by rains. Oat seeding already delayed one or two weeks, but not dangerously late. Too much rain in Kansas delayed plowing for corn and seeding of oats, and corn will go into the ground there later than last year. Some seeding in Northwest, but not general.

CINCINNATI.—Spring plowing is backward. Growing wheat is in promising condition and the acreage is larger.

ST. LOUIS.—Growing crops in fine condition.

DES MOINES.—Though cold weather has delayed field work, there is a good outlook for wheat. Rains are regarded as timely.

KANSAS CITY.—Winter wheat is in splendid condition.

SIOUX CITY.—Some seeding on highlands. Lowlands are in bad condition. Winter wheat is favorable.

DULUTH.—Spring-wheat seeding likely to begin in about two weeks.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Winter wheat is well advanced and the condition is reported as nearly perfect, with a largely increased acreage over last year.

OMAHA.—Reports as to the condition of small grains are favorable.

SIOUX FALLS.—Farming operations are retarded. The acreage will be fully equal to last year, and any increase will depend upon the weather.

ST. PAUL.—Farmers are getting ready for seeding. The ground is in excellent condition.

DALLAS.—Small grain crops are in good condition. The fruit crop was but slightly damaged by the freeze.

WACO.—All crops are in excellent condition.

LOS ANGELES.—Liberal rains thus far assure better crop conditions than have existed for nine years past.

MILLIONS INVOLVED IN SUIT.

H. Clay Pierce and C. J. Van Blarcom Want Accounting from Trust Co.

ST. LOUIS, April 6.—Suit was filed to-day in the Circuit Court by H. Clay Pierce and J. C. Van Blarcom against the William H. Thompson Trust Company, executor of the estate of the late W. H. Thompson, who was President of the Bank of Commerce and Treasurer of the World's Fair. The possession and division of Tennessee Railroad property, valued at from $12,000,000 to $13,000,000 is involved in the suit.

Van Blarcom succeeded Mr. Thompson as President of the Bank of Commerce, and Pierce is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.

The petition alleges that in February, 1902, Van Blarcom, Pierce, and Thompson entered into an agreement to promote and finance the Tennessee Central railway and acquire several properties belonging to that company. The three borrowed money, and, the petition states, many of the notes are yet unpaid.

It is set forth that the executor of the Thompson estate, the William H. Thompson Trust Company, has repudiated the oral agreement and refuses to settle with the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs ask the court to order an accounting and release securities pledged by Pierce.

NATIONAL LEAD CO. REPORT.

Net Earnings the Largest in the Company's History.

The annual report of the National Lead Company shows net earnings of $2,082,632, the largest in the company's history and an increase of $486,939 over those of 1904. President Cole says that the company expects to pay dividends on the common stock, beginning July 1.

The United Lead Company, the purchase of which was accomplished since Jan. 1, is not mentioned in the President's report, but he says that the concern has demonstrated an earning capacity sufficient to take care of the fixed charges on the additional securities issued to pay for the new properties and "leave a handsome addition" to the net revenue of the National Lead Company. Payment has been made to the United Lead Company's stockholders by the issue of $5,713,600 of preferred and $5,750,000 of common stock of the National Lead Company, provided for last June, when the capitalization was increased from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000. These additional issues were made after the close of the fiscal year, and do not appear in the financial statement.

The report shows a decrease of $985,000 in accounts and notes payable, which were liquidated out of the surplus of net earnings. oNtwithstanding these payments, the surplus has increased $486,939, and is at present $3,554,596.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Spring trade is in a flourishing condition, according to Dun's Review, despite the interruption to coal mining and the heavy rains which have prevailed over wide areas to the damage of country roads. Dun's Review says:

> Were it not for a few labor controversies the commercial horizon would be cloudless. But some manufacturing plans will be compelled to suspend if the fuel supply is cut off, and structural work is interrupted by demands for higher wages in certain localities. That the year 1906 started out to eclipse all records is evidenced by bank exchanges 18 per cent. larger than in the first quarter of the previous prosperous year, while liabilities of commercial failures averaged only 81 cents to each $1,000 of solvent payments through the Clearing Houses, which is the lowest commercial death rate for the first three months of any year. Railway earnings in March were 6.9 per cent. larger than last year, and foreign commerce at this port for the last week showed gains of $1,189,369 in imports and $837,959 in exports, as compared with the corresponding week in 1905.

Bradstreet's says:

> The rush of Spring jobbing is now about over, but improved retail demand has already evoked some reorder business, and encouraging reports as to enlarged orders for Fall delivery present themselves. Continued warm weather is expected to result in a very large Easter trade, and all kinds of light Summer-wear goods are active and strong in price. Dry goods, millinery, shoes, clothing, and farm implements are marked features at retail, while in wholesale lines the demand for lumber, hardware, paints, glass, and other materials bears witness to the present record rate of building construction.

The cotton market here was very much neglected yesterday. The high money rates are a factor confronting the holders of May options. If they accept deliveries it will be pretty expensive to carry actual cotton on the present basis. Much of this cotton was bought at about three-quarters of a cent a pound under present prices, and it is thought that the clique's holdings are heavy, being enough to break the market 1 cent, or 100 points, if thrown on the market. Developments in this situation may not be looked for until the first of next month. Meanwhile, the condition of the growing crop will come more into prominence. The opinion prevails that the market will be abandoned to scalpers for the balance of April.

The range of prices in the local market yesterday was confined to 9 points. Opening 5 points lower, at 11.12, May sold up to 11.15 and down to 11.07, closing at 11.08. July fluctuated between 11.03 and 11.12, opening at 11.08 and closing at 11.03. October sold down from 10.52 at the opening to 10.45, closing at 10.45, and December from 10.55 to 10.46. The latter finished at 10.48.

The total in sight movement for the week amounted to 132,778 bales, against 135,982 last week and 248,796 last year. Since Sept. 1, 9,498,833 bales, against 10,968,956 last year. Interior receipts for the week were 56,150 bales, against 62,250 last week and 130,712 last year. Shipments, 87,832 bales, against 89,250 last week and 141,842 last year. Stocks, 445,096 bales, against 477,789 last week and 524,695 last year. Port receipts yesterday, 16,843 bales, against 11,959 last week and 37,941 last year. Thus far this week, 110,332 bales; total last week, 101,482; last year, 194,890. Since Sept. 1, 6,805,763 bales; last year, 8,066,225. Cotton Opinions.

THEODORE PRICE received the following from Liverpool: "We expect temporary decline."

DICK BROTHERS & CO.—The week's developments demonstrated quite clearly that the bulls are in full control. Prices are on a very stable basis.

HUBBARD BROTHERS—There has been little or no support given to May, as it would be only natural to allow the market to drift, with the purpose of keeping away shipments.

ATWOOD VIOLETT & CO.—The market is well able to sustain itself, and any depression will likely be only temporary.

MARSHALL, SPADER & CO.—We see nothing to cause a lower market.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—We think fundamental conditions still favor the bulls.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

	Opening.	Highest and Lowest.	Closing.	Prev. Close.
January	10.55	10.56-10.50	10.51	10.58

Market closed quiet. Estimated sales, 200,000 bales. New Orleans closed 8 to 10 points lower—May at 11.16, July 11.26, October 10.39, and December 10.40. Tone quiet.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The trading in grain was marked by extreme dullness, wheat prices scarcely varying more than ½c all day, with the opening ⅛c lower, followed by a ¼c advance, and finally a steady tone at a net decline of ⅛c, but without sales for export. These were the salient points of the market. Conditions were rather bearish, but with the price of May 25c under last year's (albeit there was a corner in May wheat a year ago) the trade is not inclined to sell the market with confidence. Argentine exports for the past week were 4,032,000 bushels, compared with 3,304,000 bushels last week and 2,152,000 bushels last year. Since Jan. 1 the total is 34,604,000 bushels, against 35,472,000 bushels last year. Cash wheat closed quiet. No. 2 red, 87c, elevator, and 89c, free on board, afloat, and No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Without activity the corn market was firmer on cash demand and further reports of belated Spring work on account of wet lands. The market advanced ⅛c on May and ⅜c on September, closing firm at the best prices of the day. Exporters took 40,000 bushels of corn. Argentine corn exports for the week were 408,000 bushels, against 238,000 bushels last week and 230,000 bushels last year. Since Jan. 1 the total is 4,464,000 bushels, against 7,602,000 bushels last year. Cash wheat closed firm. No. 2 corn, 55½c, elevator, and 53c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white and No. 2 yellow, 54c, free on board, afloat.

ENGLISH METHOD OF HOME BUYING

and of how many happy and independent HOME OWNERS it has made throughout the UNITED KINGDOM?

We are operating the same safe and conservative system here in OUR COUNTRY, and it has proven very successful, because the money you have paid heretofore in rent each month through our system is a payment towards a HOME, and you pay no more than you now pay in rent, and in a few years you will have YOUR HOME all paid for.

You have to pay only $5.00 down on each thousand you wish to invest in a home; $2.50 per month on each thousand (for three months), receiving credit for $2.00 of the $2.50. After the home has been purchased for you, you then pay us $7.00 per month per thousand, receiving credit for $5.00 of the $7.00 each month on the principal.

Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros.

Gentlemen:—We accept your order for 500 of our beautiful Walters Belford Pianos, to be delivered to you in time for your Easter sale.

These pianos are the finest that skilled labor can build. The design of the cases is original, beautiful and attractive. We have put our expert knowledge into every detail of these Walters Belford Pianos. They are creations in piano construction and

Masterpieces of Piano Building

We do not know of a piano (and we are acquainted with almost every piano that is manufactured) at double the price you are going to offer these pianos for that will equal them in tone, durability, beauty of design and workmanship. It is an opportunity rarely heard of where one can become the possessor of the highest grade piano at ONE-HALF ITS WORTH, on such liberal terms as you offer.

These Walters Belford Pianos are one of the handsomest and most beautiful pianos we have ever made. Their tone is one of the main features, being rich, mellow and resonant; the touch is exceptionally elastic and responsive.

The 500 pianos we are making for you will be sold very quickly, and it will be the cause of making lifelong friends for the house of Bloomingdale Brothers. Yours respectfully,

ATLANTIC TELEPHONE CO. TO PAY CITY $3,000,000

Franchise Terms Are Agreed On, with a Proviso.

MUST HAVE CONDUIT RIGHTS

A Decision on This Point and Board of Estimate's Approval Needed to Perfect Grant.

After six months of proposal and counter proposal, franchise terms have been agreed on between the legal representatives of the Atlantic Telephone Company and Harry P. Nichols, chief of the Bureau of Franchises of the Board of Estimate. Under the agreement the company will pay to the city an aggregate of $3,000,000 as a minimum for a twenty-five-year grant. The matter will be laid before the Board of Estimate on April 20 for its action.

There is one point, however, on which the officials of the Atlantic Company want to be assured before they bind themselves to pay $3,000,000, of which $200,000 will have to be cash when the contract is signed. The company insists that the city guarantee to it the right to lay its wires in the conduits and ducts of the Empire City Subway Company, which is owned in the greater part by the New York Telephone Company.

Martin W. Littleton, attorney for the company, declares his company has the right to enter the conduits of the Empire Company and lay its wires, and he said yesterday that the company would join with the city in any litigation to enforce this right, but he wants the city to agree that the company shall be protected in its demand or else be not held responsible for the money payments stipulated for the franchise.

Last Fall the Atlantic Company applied to the Board of Estimate for a franchise to do a general telephone business. Late in September Mr. Nichols made a report on the application and fixed $7,750,000 as the compensation, $250,000 to be in cash and the rest based on a percentage of the earnings of the company. The attorneys for the company said this price was excessive, and since that time they have been trying to bring about the readjustment on which they now have agreed. The approval of the Board of Estimate and the conduit guarantee clause remain to be obtained before the franchise becomes operative.

Final action by the Board of Estimate cannot be had until the Court of Appeals passes on the constitutionality of the act of 1905 transferring the franchise-granting power from the Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate.

In addition to the cash compensation for the franchise the Atlantic Telephone Company agrees to furnish to the city free telephone service for all departments in all boroughs, exclusive of long distance calls. This, it is agreed, is to go in the contract. The company also guarantees a five-cent interborough rate to all pay station users and to private subscribers. Connection with the independent exchange at Elizabeth and thence with the Keystone Telephone Company in Philadelphia also is a part of the contract guarantee.

The backers of the Atlantic Company are Joshua D. Powers, President of the United States Trust Company of Louisville; Edward L. Barber of the banking firm of Barber & Brailey; L. T. Watson of the banking firm of Watson & Co.; James R. Branch, Secretary of the American Bankers' Association, and John M. Shaw of the banking firm of J. B. Russell & Co. of 46 Wall Street, which house acts as fiscal agent for the company. It is incorporated for $5,000,000, and an increase of stock to $25,000,000 has been authorized.

KLAW ON METCALFE BILL.

Under It, He Says, Drunkards or Lunatics May Enter Theatres.

Marc Klaw, speaking of the Metcalfe bill now before the New York Legislature, yesterday said:

"The bill is an absurd one on its face, as under it a drunkard, a lunatic, or a man with a contagious disease must practically be allowed to enter a theatre, and ticket speculators would have the theatre absolutely at their mercy. The latter is probably the main reason why Belasco favors the bill. The question of criticism has never entered into Mr. Metcalfe's exclusion from the theatres, and it is only another evidence of ignorance when one speaks of criticism in the matter. If any defender of the bill reads Life he knows that what Metcalfe has been writing has not been dramatic criticism.

"As far as the syndicate is concerned it has had absolutely nothing to do with Mr. Metcalfe, either in excluding or admitting him to any theatre, and nobody knows this better than Metcalfe. Nor is the Managers' Association a trust or a syndicate, and the so-called Theatrical Syndicate has a very small voting representation in the Managers' Association."

BINGHAM'S FIRST REPORT.

Has Restored 1,016 Policemen to Active Duty—Ten Squads Abolished.

Police Commissioner Bingham made his first official report to the Mayor yesterday. It covers the operations of the Police Department for the first three months of Gen. Bingham's administration, which ended March 31.

Police Headquarters was on tiptoe for the report, thinking that it might contain something exciting. It was a dry, routine document, however, and told what the Commissioner had done in the way of increasing the number of actively working policemen.

"On Jan. 1, 1906," says the report, "the consolidated report of the force showed 2,207 policemen on so-called 'detail' duty. In March, 1906, this number had been reduced to 1,191. This number, it is hoped, will still be further reduced."

Commissioner Bingham then directs attention to the fact that he has abolished the firecracker, the vice, the pistol practice, the theatre, the newsboy, mendicant, ferryboat, Chinatown, bicycle, and "shoofly" squads and put the men at regular police work. He says that better protection has been furnished to the Bronx and other outlying sections by the addition of mounted men, and that the upper west side is better policed than it was two months ago. He refers to the better police conditions on the Brooklyn Bridge also, and recommends that special officers should be employed there by the railroad companies.

"This department," he concludes, "no longer supplies persons employed at Headquarters with mineral water, and the supply of daily newspapers has been cut off. Many changes have been made in the handling of street traffic, all tending to simplicity. These changes have been made in Times Square, Columbus Circle, and the Plaza. Although many mounted men of the traffic squad have been sent to the outlying districts, the strength of the traffic squad has not been decreased."

New School Opened Here In Connection with Bellevue Hospital.

A primary school for women hospital nurses was opened on Thursday at 212 East Twenty-sixth Street. It will be run in connection with the Bellevue Training School, and will be under the direction of the latter's Board of Managers. In fact, it is a project that was long advocated by Miss Jane Delano, who was until recently Superintendent of the Training School.

With the exception of a similar school at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, the Probationers' Home, as it is called, is the only institution of its kind in this country. That is, there are no others in which the elements of a nurse's profession are taught exclusively, such as cooking, the care of the sick room, and the feeding of patients.

In the new school there will be classes in all these branches, and after a course of about three months candidates will be required to pass an entrance examination for the Training School. The average age of the probationers, as they are called, is about 27 years, and at present there are eighteen of them.

The object of the founders of the new school was to relieve the Training School of its primary classes, and to provide room for a larger number of those who had made a preparatory study of nursing. More and more graduate nurses are required for the hospitals every year, and the Bellevue Training School has always received more applicants than it could accommodate.

The probationers, during their three months' stay at the home, receive no salary, but are given their board and lodging free.

CRIPPLES' HANDIWORK SALE.

Many Interesting and Beautiful Specimens on View To-day.

An interesting sale of handicraft work was opened yesterday afternoon at the Chelsea Handicraft House Exchange, 428 West Twenty-third Street, and will be continued to-day from 3 until 6. The Chelsea House is a settlement started within the last six months and with a special aim aside from its regular work, that of providing employment for the shut-ins and cripples in its neighborhood. Much of their work is to be found at this sale.

Pretty rugs and bead work, lace handkerchiefs made from sheer linen and beautifully hemstitched by hand; rugs in pretty designs and baskets are a few of the articles offered for sale. With these is antique furniture which the House picks up and sells at low prices; Porto Rican drawn work and embroidery, waists and dresses, Russian brasses, and pottery, both Indian and modern.

Embroidery and lace making are among the arts taught; orders are taken for shirt waists, which cost from $3 up. One young man among the Chelsea House beneficiaries does excellent work in making tools for metal workers.

Miss Edith Schieffelin Sabine is the head worker of the settlement, and there have been sixteen residents there this last Winter.

NOT LIKE MOTHER'S BISCUITS.

So the Captain and Cook of the Brick Barge Fought.

John A. Wilson recently went to Capt. Thomas J. McKeever of the brick barge John H. Buckley, at Thirteenth Street and the North River, and applied for the job as cook. McKeever hired him. Yesterday they had a row over a pan of biscuits.

"I reckon a brickyard's about your size all right," sneered the Captain. "These biscuits ain't good for nothin' but to pave streets."

"I'm from Newburg," asserted Wilson, "and I can cook biscuits to the Queen's taste."

"I'm from Verplanck's Point," growled the Captain, "and I know a good biscuit when I see it. Now, as for you, get back to the mud pile. Tie one of them cannon balls around yer neck and jump overboard. Skidoo!"

Instead of retreating Wilson showed fight and Policeman Kearns of the West 125th Street Police Station soon had both men in the Harlem Court. Magistrate Crane, after hearing the facts, gave them a reprimand and released them.

PRINTER FINED $50.

Union Man Attacked Non-Union Man Employed by the Grannis Press.

William J. Lewis, a union printer and member of "Big Six," was fined $50 in Special Sessions yesterday for assaulting John McSweeney, a non-union printer employed by the Grannis Press.

"This case is so flagrant," said Presiding Justice Olmsted, "that I must make an example of it in order to impress upon the members of the union that they must keep within the law. This is no reflection on their right to picket, but they must not resort to practices like these."

End of the Tenderloin Clubhouse.

The old house in West Thirtieth Street in which the old Tenderloin Club of reporters was organized seventeen years ago has been auctioned off for $8. The new West Thirtieth Street Police Station is to be built on the site. It was in this house shortly after the Tenderloin Club was formed that Otero, the famous dancer, first made her appearance.

Lawyer Perry Disbarred.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court disbarred Lloyd Perry, who is now serving a three years' term at Sing Sing. Perry was admitted to the bar in 1866. He was convicted of subornation of perjury in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York and was sentenced on Dec. 28.

PATRICK WON'T LET HOUSE GO ON THE STAND

His Counsel Says That He Is Suffering from Delusions.

NEW WITNESSES ARE BARRED

Corp. Stanberry Is Absent, but Jerome Has the Court Order Ordering Him to be Present Monday.

Ex-Judge Olcott, counsel for Albert T. Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder of William Marsh Rice, in the proceedings to obtain a new trial now pending before Recorder Goff in General Sessions, announced yesterday afternoon, when the hearing was once more postponed, that his client had positively refused to permit his former counsel, Frederick B. House, to take the stand for the purpose of denying or affirming the truth of Valet Jones's testimony at the trial to the effect that Patrick, in his presence, made a confession to Mr. House. This declaration followed Mr. Olcott's request that the court permit him to introduce affidavits by four new witnesses from Texas, whose names had not even been heard by the District Attorney before. When asked by the court whether he had any objection to offer, Mr. Jerome replied:

"I'll consent to the acceptance of these and any other affidavits if in return Mr. Olcott will permit Mr. House to take the stand—"

"I must object right here," Mr. Olcott broke in. "That poor convict up there, fighting for his life through these five years, has developed certain delusions. He imagines that the Rice millions are arrayed against him, and he is afraid to trust my friend, Fred House. Such is his delusion, and we cannot turn him away from it. It it illegal for the District Attorney to go on rubbing in this matter under such circumstances. The effect of it is unfair."

"Here is a man who knows the truth, and could settle the whole matter in a few minutes," Mr. Jerome rejoined. "A man who has no motive for concealing or falsifying the truth. One word of his would be sufficient to clear Patrick. His lips are sealed by a question of technical right.

"All right, if counsel wants to stand on his technical rights, so will we. But it is not my choice. If counsel will meet us in the right spirit then I'll co-operate fairly and sincerely with him to my utmost power. I am anxious to find the truth, and if that be what his client asserts, that client ought to have nothing to fear. If, on the other hand, this defendant comes here not to have it determined whether he is a murderer or not, but whether his technical legal rights have been infringed or not, then I, too, must insist on technicalities."

Recorder Goff denied Mr. Olcott's request, and the four new Texas witnesses will not be heard. They are John G. Giesberg, Anna A. Wright, Deputy Sheriff Robert Adams, and Dr. Henry Griffith. Mr. Olcott told the court that two of these witnesses would contradict the assertion of Mayor Rice of Houston that he had never met Jones in his life. The other two, Mr. Olcott said, had heard Lafayette Jones, brother of the valet, deny that he ever sent any chloroform to his brother at New York, although he, Lafayette, came to this city and gave testimony to the contrary.

Mr. Jerome called for Corp. Alexander B. Stanberry of the United States Thirteenth Infantry. Stanberry was one of the original affiants on the motion for new trial. Shortly afterward his regiment was sent to the Philippines. The Government sent him home to testify in behalf of Patrick. Stanberry was formerly Rice's valet, and later his private secretary, Jones succeeding him. The witness was not in court yesterday when Mr. Jerome called for him. The District Attorney told the court that he could not examine any other witnesses before hearing Stanberry.

"I withdraw the affidavit of Stanberry, if that can facilitate matters," Mr. Olcott put in.

"Oh, no, I object to that," said Mr. Jerome. He then intimated that if Mr. Olcott would not produce the witness he would himself communicate with the commander of the department. At Mr. Jerome's request, Recorder Goff ordered Mr. Olcott to have Stanberry in court next Monday afternoon.

NEW HAVEN RELIEF LINE.

Will Cut Distance Between New York and Danbury by Eight Miles.

At a meeting of the Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, held in the Grand Central Station yesterday, the Directors voted to authorize the construction of a relief line between a point on the main line between Greenwich and Port Chester, through Ridgefield to a point on the New England Railroad just west of Danbury station, about thirty miles in length, at a cost of approximately $2,500,000.

The object of the construction of this line, which will be double tracked on low grades and right curvature, is to shorten the main line of the company's road into the Berkshires about eight miles, reducing the distance between Danbury and New York by the same amount and to turn a considerable portion of the freight business from the New York division to the New England Railroad, leaving the New York division freer for the handling of the rapidly increasing passenger business of that line.

SAID TO BE WALDO'S FRIEND.

Woman Charged with Shoplifting Nursed His Mother, It Is Asserted.

Two fashionably dressed young women who said they were Alice and Elizabeth Heist, sisters, were in Jefferson Market Court yesterday charged with grand larceny. It was alleged that they had taken goods to the value of $38 from a Sixth Avenue department store.

Lawyer Michael O'Sullivan, who appeared for them, said that both prisoners were respectable. There was, he said, no reason for them to steal, as they were well supplied with money, having in their possession more than $300. He also said that one of the women had recently been acting as nurse to Mrs. Stebbins, who is at the Hotel Lincoln, Fifty-second Street and Broadway, and that she was also a friend of Deputy Police Commissioner Waldo, having acted as a nurse to his mother.

Magistrate Steinert held the two prisoners in $1,000 each for trial.

We hesitated to say, right off the bat, that we're the only clothiers who have gone in extensively for really high class and reasonably high-priced boys' clothing.

But after looking around we find that outside our stores, the ready-to-wear equivalent of what the best custom tailors are making for boys is almost unknown.

It's very much the same way with boys' furnishings, hats and shoes.

IDEAS AND FANCIES OF ARTHUR SYMONS.

The English Poet, and Follower of Walter Pater as Critic of Art, Literature and Life—His "Spiritual Adventures"—A Master of Harmonious Prose.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

JAMES HUNEKER,
Author of "Visionaries."

TO criticise criticism is to deal with life at third remove. And of the criticism of critics there is seemingly no end. But in voyaging through the published criticism of Mr. Arthur Symons, the English poet, one feels in the thick of a reality far more tangible than is experienced when reading Mr. Symons's master, Walter Pater. The pulsebeat of the younger man's prose is quicker, he has lived in the midst of things, has not regarded life as a picture to be curiously wrought into suave and multicolored prose; and his range is wider than Pater's—Symons loves all the arts, from the art of mimicry to the art of living. He never sits aloof as did Pater, weaving with infinite patience those shining lengths of rare and lovely phrase, weaving books not without a touch of that disdain we surprise on the sculptured lips of the Greek gods. Arthur Symons, while he shows his literary birthmark, is not of the Attic breed. He is a modern among moderns, a poet, yet a critic, a critic and a writer of hauntingly strange fiction.

In the preface to his "Plays, Acting, and Music" he wrote that he had been slowly working his way to "the concrete expression of theory, or system of aesthetics, of all the arts." Of this series we have "The Symbolist Movement in Literature," the above-mentioned volume, "Cities," "Studies in Verse and Prose," and "Spiritual Adventures." Another book is to be called "Studies in the Seven Arts," with special reference to music, painting, sculpture, dancing, and the various arts of the stage; for the English critic holds as a cardinal doctrine that "art has to do only with the creation of beauty, whether it be in words, or sounds, or color, or outline, or rhythmical movement; and the man who writes music is no more truly an artist than the man who plays that music, the poet who composes rhythms in words no more truly than the dancer who composes rhythms with the body, and the one is no more to be preferred to the other than the painter is to be preferred to the sculptor, or the musician to the poet, in those forms of art which we have agreed to recognize as of equal value."

Truly, a quickening conception of the arts. Mr. Symons has lived up to his theory. "Plays, Acting, and "Music," without being so rich in thought as "Studies in Prose and Verse," nor yet so profound and brilliant as "The Symbolist Movement in Literature," covers a diversified group of subjects, betraying a mind actively curious and one free from prejudices academic or the cant of the new—which already sounds so old. From Duse to Yvette Guilbert, Nietzsche to Vladimir Pachmann, "the Verlaine of pianists," a remarkable bit of impressionistic criticism, acute and true, vivid yet not dogmatic, this latter; from Tolstoy to Stephen Phillips, Sarah Bernhardt to "Parsifal"—there is strong meat for many tastes.

MR. SYMONS was the first to avow some years ago that "'Mrs. Warren's Profession' is not a representation of life; it is a discussion about life. * * * The difference between the spirit of Tolstoy and the spirit of Mr. Shaw is the difference between the spirit of Christ and the spirit of Euclid."

From "Studies in Prose and Verse" one may quarry a veritable mound of ideas about literature, scaling down from De Quincey and Balzac to Wilde and d'Annunzio. The revulsion of opinion in the case of the unhappy Irishman has gone to strange extremes. For some inscrutable and wholly uncritical reason Germany has discovered in Wilde a supreme artist—and the man never wrote an original line, conceived an original dramatic situation. Such tawdry, undramatic stuff as "Salomé," a doubtful pastiche of Flaubert's beautiful and impeccable tale "Herodias," has had the honor conferred upon it of Richard Strauss's music, an honor that will embalm it for the future like the conventional fly in amber.

> His intellect was dramatic, and the whole man was not so much a personality as an attitude. * * * A showman of souls. * * * Among these souls there was one after the fashion of Flaubert, another after the fashion of Pater, others that had known Baudelaire and Huysmans and De Quincey [he refers to the bald imitation of "Pen, Pencil, and Poison" in De Quincey's "Murder as One of the Fine Arts"] and Swinburne. Each was taken up, used, and dropped, as a kind of persistent illustration of "the truth of masks." * * * Of the purely poetical quality he had almost nothing; his style, even in prose, becomes insincere, a bewildering echo of Pater or of some French writer, whenever he tries to write beautifully. Such imagination as he had was like the flickering of light along an electric wire, struck by friction out of something direct and hard, and, after all, only on the surface.

NOW here is sweet reasonableness in a theme that has given rise to much unnecessary irritation. Yet Wilde is the most brilliant mocking bird of English literature, more so than Robert Louis Stevenson—who had as a substratum a sweet, boyish personality. But you can never pin Wilde down to a personality. He is elusive as sheet lightning playing among June clouds. Those who most praise his books have never read Huysmans's "A Rebours," or even Poe's "The Oval Portrait," or Hawthorne or Barbey d'Aurevilly. This latter eccentric writer was the prime model for Wilde's pose in life—lace, epigrams, and strut. And what a consummate conversationalist was Oscar! He really talked as George Meredith describes his own characters as talking. His plays to-day seem like melted cream puffs, so flimsy are they in construction. But a marvelous fellow, and never sincere for more than a second. "De Profundis" was just one more mask.

Mr. Symons prints a photograph taken at a race course by Count Primoli of Gabriele d'Annunzio, which is a perfectly expressed criticism of the real d'Annunzio. I can only compare this face of the Italian poet to that of a vulture of genius—he seems to be swooping down on his notebook as though he were transfixing a mighty thought. And what he probably wrote was the odds on "Helvetia," or the Italian equivalent for a "good thing." Mr. Symons, who has translated a d'Annunzio play in a faultless manner, has his say about the poet. He knows "his Renaissance personality," his specific brutality and beauty of style. And to those who cry aloud his immorality, he answers that nature, too, is immoral.

By denying to George Meredith the title of a great novelist the critic invited rough handling from many camps. But in the main his criticism tallies with that of W. E. Henley, George Moore, and of our own distinguished master of criticism, Mr. W. C. Brownell. It is whispered that Mr. Meredith called Mr. Symons a decadent, to which he replied by explaining, "What decadence in literature really means is that learned corruption of language by which style ceases to be organic and becomes in the pursuit of some new expressiveness or beauty deliberately abnormal. Meredith's style is as self-conscious as Mallarmé's." Meredith, then, is a decadent. And decadence is not, as the gentle souls in criticism believe it to be, a matter of morals, but one of rhetoric. Courage, good lads, there is yet hope for those who do not servilely imitate eighteenth century prose or the bleak positivism of the iced-spine school.

READ the studies of Hawthorne, of Maupassant, of Stevenson, of Pater, Daudet, Zola, Tolstoy on art, W. B. Yeats, and you will be interested always, often shocked, by the novelty of opinions, while your ear will be assaulted ever by music. He is a poet who writes prose, true prose in rhythm, and shadowy, perfumed prose. He says simple things about subtle things. He makes portraits of his sitters, disengages the secrets of their personality in a few penetrating lines. He is the Whistler of critics. To the imaginative sensibility of his descriptive writing in his "Cities," Mr. W. D. Howells has already paid tribute.

Personally I believe his earlier book,

"The Symbolist Movement in Literature," to be the most important book in humanist criticism since Walter Pater's "The Renaissance." Perhaps I am prejudiced by the subjects so eloquently, so learnedly, handled in its pages. It is written for those who are not willing to view the Zeitgeist only in the garment spun by Time and Space, but who see creation as a symbol. The visions of those men of our days who saw beyond the veil are treated with sympathetic understanding. He begins rightly with Gerard de Nerval, the French translator of Goethe's "Faust," a mystic, whose dreams overflowed into his daily life. With him, as Symons finely says, "Imagination is vision." He tells us of the famous sonnet "Artemis," beside which Mallarmé is simplicity itself. Of value is the study of Mallarmé, far more human than Edmund Gosse's; while his explication of that immortal and puzzling Faun—whose afternoon has always seemed to me to have been spent in the most sensible, faunlike manner—is clarity itself. "Carry the theories of Mallarmé to a practical conclusion, multiply his powers in direct ratio, and you have Wagner. It is his failure not to be Wagner. And, Wagner having existed, it was for him to be something more, to complete Wagner." But even in Wagner—and there is nearly all our emotional life—is there Mallarmé's "horror of the forest, or the silent thunder afloat in the leaves"? "Poetry," said Mallarmé, "is the language of a state of crisis." And, slim as is his contribution to the living stream of French poetry, it is nevertheless a genuine contribution, and more akin to the genius of the tongue than even his admirers suspected.

Striking are the essays devoted to Villiers de L'Isle Adam, Jules Lafargue—charming Jules, master of irony, of spiritual prose—Huysmans, Maeterlinck, and Arthur Rimbaud, that singular boy of genius who in his leaflets of prose and verse, tinged with reflections from hell fire, embodied the tenets of the new school of symbolism. Interspersed are intimate personal details of these poets, some of whom Mr. Symons knew in Paris. It is impossible in a single article to convey an idea of the many jewels one may find in this volume. It is criticism raised to a superior degree of actuality. Huysmans once confessed, I suppose in sheer desperation at the buzzing of the clans over realism, symbolism, idealism, naturalism, and other "isms," that for him the only question was whether a writer had talent or not. So let me sum up by saying that Arthur Symons is a writer of talent first, and incidentally a critic, one who confirms the fallacy of the notion that creative and critical gifts are always asunder.

HIS first fiction, "Spiritual Adventures," is newly published. It will recall to the true Paterian, the lover of his "African" prose, as Mr. Greenslet puts it, his wonderful, ever wonderful "Imaginary Portraits," which, as Mr. Symons has told us, was Pater's favorite. But here again it will not do to confound master and pupil—himself a master of more viable material. Symons has adhered to the low-toned harmonies of Pater, has seen fit to adhere to his scheme of formal presentment, something between the naive narration to be found in legends and the poignant intimacy of a personal confession. Symons has poured into this form things of the soul that happened yesterday and may happen to-morrow, but will never happen to-day. Yet it is a world he shows, the world of the soul across the sill of which we discern disquieting visions. There is the soul of Christian Trevalga, who played Chopin so intensely that at a concert he saw "just above the level of the strings on the open top of the piano * * * like gray smoke, forming and unforming as if it boiled up softly out of the pit where the wires were coiled up." It was the visualization of a Chopin study. True musicians are mystics. They see music at times—but if they see it too often, then they are taken away. Christian realized music vividly. He became tone. And he died mad. Esther Kahn was an English Jewess who discerned the world as gesture. She was an actress. But she missed something. She was cold. Even the inevitable lover did not unlock her nature. But when she saw the man she was weary of in a box at the theatre with another woman, jealousy was the releasing key to her soul's enigma. She was transformed into a great actress. This study is extraordinary. Peter Waydelin was a painter of new, brutal and beautiful pictures, a composite of Degas, the Japanese, and Toulouse-Lautrec. He dared to live his pictures. And he died from them, died from their hideous reality, after achieving something as new—or as old—as the Japanese. He opened a fresh window in the ugliness of life; but his own soul escaped through that window—the penalty of his discovery. The first tale, "A Prelude to Life," has something of the simplicity and finality of Pater's "The Child in the House," though hardly so exquisite a production. The "Childhood of Lucy Newcome" is the record of a child's soul until the budding. Then the confession snaps, leaving the reader, who is looking for the mechanically rounded short story of commerce, rather in the air. Steward Lackland is the study of a religious monomaniac, a man with a New England conscience, which kills his mind—instead of following the good and tried Puritan fashion of killing some other man's mind, while roasting him with fagots and soothing him with texts. To many the Journal at the end of this book will make the potent appeal. Something happens, or has happened, to its characters, something on the "physical plane," as our star-hunting brethren would say. Evocations, these tales, if tales you can call them, will prove attractive for some to whom English fiction has become too material, too much a thing of bricks and mortar; those who are better satisfied to hunt the soul as the best sport in fiction, leaving to others the depiction of dancing dolls and the doings of human apes and tigers. Somewhere Mr. Symons has said: "The great exterior novels have been written. * * * We know that the finest imaginative work can be built only out of the primary emotions. * * * We have in the novel a new form, which may be at once a confession and a decoration, the soul and a pattern." He was writing of Huysmans. He may have been thinking of his future "Spiritual Adventures." The book is dedicated to Thomas Hardy, and this dedication may prove another milestone in the artistic pilgrimage of Arthur Symons.

J. H.

MAID ROBIN HOOD.

THEN ho! for the forest of Ardennes!"—with a band of outlaws ranging the greenwood and a Rosalind-Robin Hood in command—a slender dark maid rigged to match the scenery. You name her "Marcelle the Mad," (D. Appleton & Co.,) and there you are ready for any amount of romantic adventure. Especially when the author, Seth Cook Comstock, lugs in Charles the Bold of Burgundy, the Constable of France, divers brave knights and fair ladies, and the rebellious town of Dinant, famous for brasses. It's the old, old story of Shakespeare's false Duke, or Sir Walter's base King John and good men and true driven by tyranny to sleep upon dry leaves and consort with outlaws, except that Duke Charles plays a sort of composite of Richard and John, and Robin Hood, as was said above, is transformed into a maid—a maid with deep wrongs, a high spirit, and a tender heart in spite of her fierce masquerade. So at least the author conceives her, and he produces the illusion passably well, weaving a tale of a knight who was banished for a high lady's sake, fell into the hands of Marcelle's band, was sworn one of them, and won the heart of the lady captain.

Naturally, the other lady—the high one—presently found her way to the forest also, and Duke Charles followed after, and the Duke's archers, and plenty of fighting ensued, with all sorts of dramatic opportunities, both in Ardennes and in the doomed town of Dinant, whither the survivors of the first encounter fled. And so to a climax of considerable melodramatic merit. As a romance—a mere romance—of the time-killing variety, Mr. Comstock's story will do very well indeed. As a picturesque figure, his lady outlaw has obvious points—some advantages over Robin Hood even—and he has worked up his effects industriously and enthusiastically. A lover of a humorous turn is a distinct relief, too—naturally, he's not the lady outlaw's lover.

"The Four Million."

O. Henry explains the title of his book published this week by McClure, Phillips & Co. in his foreword:

> Not very long ago some one invented the assertion that there were only 400 people in New York City who were really worth noticing. But a wiser man has arisen—the census taker—and this larger estimate of human interest has been preferred in making out the field of these little stories of the four million.

THE POETRY OF WATTS-DUNTON.

A New Edition of Collected Verse by the Prophet of the "Renascence of Wonder"—"The Coming of Love."*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

H. W. BOYNTON.

MR. WATTS-DUNTON'S position among English men of letters is a peculiar one. He was as a young man a very intimate friend of Rossetti and Morris, and in his quiet way of amateur was involved in that whole movement which was dubbed Pre-Raphaelitism. To this movement and to the broader tendency in modern letters of which it was an early manifestation, Mr. Watts-Dunton has given the label "Renascence of Wonder," an effective if somewhat pretentious phrase which might be called the text of the considerable body of criticism produced by him during the past generation. This criticism has taken the form of reviewing, mainly in The London Athenaeum. The fact that the critic is a man of wealth may do something toward accounting for his never having taken the trouble to assemble these fragments. Nevertheless, their character has been sufficiently marked to secure for him an interested audience and some disciples. Two years ago one of the latter published a book about his master which, while on the whole sufficiently absurd, did bring together in intelligible form some of the more important teachings of this prophet of Romance. These are, according to the judgment of Mr. Watts-Dunton himself, better enunciated in his two imaginative compositions, "Aylwin" and "The Coming of Love," than in his specifically critical writings. It is as a poet that he wishes to be remembered. "Aylwin" is unfortunately upon that dubious borderland between prose and verse. There is no denying to it a distinct charm; but whether it is the charm of oddity or of power is a question hard for the most interested reader to answer. It would be hardly worth while to try to answer it, if it were not for the indubitable evidence of power afforded in "The Coming of Love" and "Rhona Boswell's Story." This man is undoubtedly a poet, and should be content so far as his exercise of the creative faculty is concerned with nothing short of the pure poetic medium.

THE peculiar quality of his poetic charm is hard to analyze. It does not exist in every one of his verses. Yet his work as a whole has an undoubted atmosphere of its own, and in none of it, unless in a few of the sonnets, is there a suggestion of imitativeness, so far as style is concerned. This is the more remarkable from the fact that for many years he has been the friend and housemate of Swinburne, a poet whom one might imitate as instinctively as a person with a lisp or a squint. They have, it appears, all sympathies and many joys in common. Swinburne has recently dedicated his collected works to Watts-Dunton, whom he pronounces "the first critic of our time, perhaps the largest-minded and surest-sighted of any age." One of the sonnets in "The Coming of Love" has sent me back to Swinburne; there to find, apparently, a record of the same experience, had by the two friends in common. Here is the end of the sonnet:

* * * Young with the youth the sea's embrace can lend,
Our glowing limbs, with sun and sea impearled,
Seem born anew, and in your eyes, dear friend,
Rare pictures shine, like fairy flags unfurled,
Of child-land, where the roofs of rainbows bend
Over the magic wonders of the world.

This is called "A Morning Swim Off Guernsey with a Friend." Swinburne's poem is called "In Guernsey," and dedicated to Theodore Watts, (the Dunton had not then been affixed.) Here is one of its characteristic roundels:

Across and along, as the bay's breadth opens before us,
Wild Autumn exults in the wind, swift rapture and strong
Impels us, and broader the bright waves brighten before us
Across and along.

The whole world's heart is uplifted, and knows not wrong,
The whole world's life is a chant to the sea side's chorus;
Are we not as waves of the water, as notes of the song?

Like children unworn of the passions and toils that wore us,
We breast for a season the breadth of the seas that throng,
Rejoicing as they, to be borne as of old they bore us

THERE is no doubt who is the greater lyrist of these two; but in all qualities of restraint, of balance, of moral earnestness and spiritual passion, Watts-Dunton is as much Swinburne's superior as he is his inferior in sheer melodiousness. It is a consequence of his sobriety of method that a good deal of his poetry seems at first sight conventional. His verses of occasion are always happy, but they often seem to generate their own saving heat by a too obvious verbal rubbing of the hands and slapping of the chest. Even "Christmas at the Mermaid," with all its fine things, might, taken by itself, impress one more with its elaborate felicity than with its true poetic force. It is in the Gypsy poems, especially in "Rhona Boswell's Story" that one catches most clearly the poet's peculiar note. This is not simply because, being concerned with the love between an English gentleman and a Gypsy girl, and being cast largely in Gypsy slang, they are novel, odd, "original" in that perverted sense. One is impressed almost in spite of himself with the romantic sincerity, the human reality of this almost grotesque narrative. What a wonder that Rhona's wild grace should be unspoiled for us by the distressing lingo in which she is condemned to speak! How is it possible that our sympathies can weather such a passage as this from one of Rhona's letters to her absent lover?

Mose nights I lays awake, but when the cock
Begin to crow and rooks begin to fly,
And chimes come livelier out of Rington clock,
It's then I sees your picture in the sky,
(So plane it seems to bring the mornin' nigh,)
Bal, danniers, canners, yockers, moey, nock;
My daddy's bort me such a nicet new frock.
Your comly korly chy.

And yet nothing is really more unfair than to wrench such a passage from such a context. Rhona does not need apologies; she is better worth worshipping and pitying; and we do not wonder that her lover wakes at sunrise to read once again

Beautiful Rhona's letter, which has lain,
Balming the pillow underneath my cheek,
While in the dark her writing seemed to speak;
Her great eyes lit my brain.

Is this not a passion more noble as well as more common than the Swinburnian ardors and languors and surfeits? Rhona's beauty, Rhona's purity, Rhona's jealousy, remorse, self-sacrifice; the fatality which casts its shadow over the blameless fulfillment of her passion, and cuts it off untimely—these are the materials of a true romance. The poet who has accomplished such a feat of romantic naturalism need not be laughed at for believing in "The Renascence of Wonder"—the importance of recovering in our art the power to reveal the romance which ever abides in human life.

Some two years have passed since the writer read the earlier version of "Rhona Boswell's Story," and he has not that version at hand; but if his memory is not altogether at fault, the additional matter given in the present text is not of the minor sort. The reason given by the author for its former incompleteness is extremely quaint; it is a little hard to judge whether it has come about through an excess of pride or an excess of modesty. The new edition is dedicated to "C. J. R.," and may speak for itself;

> "The Coming of Love" is the expression of the heart-thought of my life. And yet, so long did I delay collecting its various sections—scattered through many old periodicals—that I often ask myself whether the idyl would ever have been published at all save for you—you who hunted out the lyrics and sonnets with such pertinacity, made a collection of them for yourself, and became so familiar with the entire poem that at last you knew it better than he who wrote it.

The problem suggests itself to the inquiring mind why, if a man has a heart-thought, and is conscious of having expressed it to the best of his ability, he should not think it worth while to give it, at the expense of some momentary trouble to himself, a chance of permanent hearing. Or is it a law regulating such matters that a friend be raised up to take the trouble? Mr. Watts-Dunton has found a Douglas for his prose, and a "C. J. R." for his poetry; for the latter piece of good fortune, at least, we should be duly thankful.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

CLASSIFIED LISTS OF SPRING BOOKS.

The Production as Large as Ever, But Many Leading Publishers Are Curtailing Their Fiction Lists.

ONE thing is really notable about the publishers' Spring lists, and one thing only—the small space which fiction occupies in the bill of fare offered by several of the oldest established and largest New York houses. One such house, which last Spring had fifteen novels, has this time about half that number; another which usually promises half a dozen at least has only two, another has only one, yet another, without making so sweeping a reduction, falls a third behind its average for some years past. And there are others in much the same case. "Fiction has been overdone," said the publisher who has only two novels; "we've all overdone it. I've been as bad as the rest." Hitherto, of course, the Spring season has been dedicated to novels. There was a theory that the plain people during the heated term cared little for anything else. The explosion—or partial explosion—of this theory is merely an incident of the tendency to the fading out of "seasons" in the book trade which was noted in THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW in connection with the Autumn lists six months ago. However, the fashion of less fiction has not been followed by everybody. One old house at least marshals a long array of novels at the head of its list—an array which includes at least three individuals which may be expected to attract wide attention, for themselves or for the names they carry on their title pages. Moreover, a younger house in New York and several houses in Boston are very busy indeed with fiction. "Boston," (so a New York bookman remarked,) "has the habit."

THE NEW NOVELS.

WE are supposing, in spite of some publishers' observed reluctance to novels, that the readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW are conservative enough to retain the traditional vernal interest in this department of literature. Therefore we call attention to some of the writers who are billed for entertainment of this character, many of their books, of course, being already out. One publisher has new stories by Winston Churchill, Eden Phillpotts, Owen Wister, Egerton Castle, "Ouida," and John Luther Long; another presents Mrs. Humphry Ward, Mrs. Margaret Deland, and Mark Twain, to say nothing of lesser lights like Rex E. Beach, Irving Bacheller, Margaret Potter, Roy Rolfe Gilson, and Philip Verrill Mighels; still another advertises Mrs. Burnett, Robert Grant, Nelson Lloyd, and Frederick Palmer; while a fourth gives you Upton Sinclair, reeking of the slaughter house; Ellen Glasgow, Una L. Silberrad, disciple of Hardy; Judge Shute, who celebrates boyhood; and two new persons said to be promising, Olive Ransom and G. B. Lancaster. A fifth publisher tempts you with the names of Baroness von Hutten, G. B. McCutcheon, C. T. Brady, Max Pemberton, and Beatrice Harraden.

From Boston come new stories by Morley Roberts, Andy Adams, Gelett Burgess, Eugenia Frothingham, and stories not quite so new—for they are being "revived"—by Henry Holt.

HISTORICAL WORKS.

IN place of fiction, deposed as headliner, at least three conspicuous publishers have set up a series of titles pertaining to matters historical and biographical. The house which has half as much fiction as usual has approximately twice as many books of this more serious classification, while even those faithful to the old order have not failed to "hedge," as it were, by featuring at least one book of history or biography each. Not the least interesting volume in the biographical class—taking the country over—will be the "Reminiscences of Joseph Jefferson," by Francis Wilson, while the life of Lord Randolph Churchill (by Winston Spencer Churchill) will attract many, M. P. Birukoff's "Early Life of Leo Tolstoy" many others. Certain letters of George Washington, many of them almost or quite new, have their interest, too. They are, it appears, letters of household economy—the Father of His Country was a specialist in household economy—addressed to his confidential man of business, by name Tobias Lear, and are accompanied by Lear's diary.

History proper—of the mature, formal, retrospective kind—is represented by several new volumes in the Harpers' American Nation, (Prof. A. B. Hart's undertaking,) a volume of the Cambridge Modern History, (Napoleon and His Times,) a history of the Inquisition in Spain, by Henry Charles Lea. Books on the Eastern Asiatic question there are, of course, B. L. Putnam Weale's "The Reshaping of the Far East" in particular; "The New Far East," by Thomas F. Millard, and "The Philippine Experiences of an American Teacher," by William B. Freer. The crop on the new anarchy in Russia has not had time to mature, perhaps; but that, too, is coming. Some samples have already appeared, and there is Father Gapon's account of his own life.

Sociological subjects in the nature of the current trend of thought cannot be neglected by any publisher who is not a specialist in other branches. So we have many books on conditions, tendencies, remedies. There is John Spargo's "Bitter Cry of the Children," dealing with the effects of poverty upon the young; there is a book on "The Living Wage," one on "How to Buy Life Insurance," one on "The Modern Trust Company"; there is a whole series of volumes published by one house on American public problems, to say nothing of Dr. Caleb Williams Saleeby's general consideration of the whole lugubrious business of modern life in the light of Mr. Spencer's philosophy. That philosophy, by the way, is bearing much fruit just now in the way of child study, and many books result therefrom, as, for instance, "Problems of Babyhood."

Science (of the inorganic kind) and art come in for no specially noteworthy attention, though, of course, scientific works duly appear, as do religious works for those that way minded. Two houses at least—one old and one new—are convinced that the literature of country life, whether on the manor or the cottage scale, is a literature to foster. You will find them trying to cover the whole field of the hoped-for rural reaction. One deals with the new agriculture on its theoretical and practical sides in many volumes, the other takes care of the more spectacular and immediate aspects of house, garden, stable, kennel, greenhouse, and what not.

THE POETS.

VERSE, as usual—except by a few publishers in ordinary to bards irrepressible—is sadly neglected. Some houses publish, however, an odd book of poetry or rhymes. One may name at the two extremes a volume by Mrs. Louise Morgan Sill and one by THE NEW YORK TIMES'S Songs of School Days poet, J. W. Foley. Miss Carolyn Wells has a book of verses, too—of course. The classified lists of new and forthcoming publications follow.

A FRESH, FASCINATING ROMANCE, Authors of "My Friend the Chauffeur"

Lady Betty Across the Water The Williamsons

¶ We have often in fiction had the American girl crossing the water to discover her English and European cousins, and a kind of life wholly new to her Western experience; but never until now has the process been reversed, and the real, typical, clear-complexioned English girl come to our shores in search of adventure. We hail Lady Betty, therefore, as a most delightful and feminine Columbus, and feel that now for the first time we have really been discovered. Everybody will be delighted to learn precisely how she found us and what things in our life particularly struck her wide-open and engaging eyes, and gave her food for fun and reflection. Evidently she did not find us all savages, for there was one man—but we must not anticipate the charming story which is unfolded, and which takes her nearly across the continent and into all sorts of places from West Point to a typical farm in the far West. Cloth. Eight illustrations by Orson Lowell, beautifully reproduced in colors. $1.50.

In Our Town WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

¶ Who does not know this author's Court of Boyville and its delicious record of a Kansan boyhood? Combining a delicate and yet thoroughly American humor and a vein of genuine feeling, Mr. White suggests Barrie more than another living writer, and it may be said of his new book that it does for the daily life of a modern Kansas town just what Barrie has done for a Scotch town in "A Window in Thrums." Cloth. Sixteen illustrations. $1.50.

Red Saunders' Pets HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS
and Other Critters

¶ Red Saunders, who is so well known and so endeared to thousands of readers, has in this book not precisely fulfilled the Scriptural prophecy of making the lion and the lamb lie down together, but in one story he achieves admirable results in the same direction with a bobcat, a snake, and an eagle. This is only one of the hilarious stories in which Red recounts his experiences with his little animal friends. Cloth, 12mo. Sixteen illustrations by A. B. Frost. $1.25.

"Pigs Is Pigs" ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

¶ This story, when it appeared in a recent magazine, created such an uproar of merriment throughout the country that we determined to issue it in book form with all the original illustrations which contributed so greatly to enhance the comic effect. This little masterpiece of American humor is one of the season's biggest hits. Bound in cloth, and attractively printed, with original illustrations by Will Crawford. Price, 50 cents.

The Four Million O. HENRY

¶ The talent of this admirable humorist, whose first book, "Cabbages and Kings," attracted so widespread attention, was never seen to better advantage than in these brilliant sketches of life in a great city—the home of millions. In Mr. Henry is shown once again that the true gift of humor is allied to the appreciation of human pathos. Cloth $1.00.

More Stories of Married Life MARY STEWART CUTTING

¶ Cynics tell us that courtship is the happiest period of a man or a woman's life. Mrs. Cutting has devoted herself to the refutation of this theory with what success the thousands of readers of her exquisite stories well know. Every one who owns her earliest book will wish to possess this latest collection. Cloth, 12mo. Frontispiece in color. $2.25.

The Meaning of Good G. LOWES DICKINSON

¶ In this fascinating book, which takes the form of the Platonic dialogue, yet which preserves all the delightful informality of a familiar conversation among men of our own day, Mr. Dickinson finds fullest scope for his powers, both as a perfect, pure writer and as a subtle thinker. As to his style, The Athenaeum said in a recent review that he is "one of the few living Englishmen who can really write prose . . . prose, limpid, natural, musical." Cloth, net, $1.20; postage 9 cents extra.

The Struggle for Self-Government LINCOLN STEFFENS

¶ Being an attempt to trace American political corruption in six States of the United States. With a dedication to the Czar. Some of the chapters are—Folk's Fight in Missouri. Chicago's Appeal to Illinois. Rhode Island: A Corrupt People. Ohio: A Tale of Two Cities. Wisconsin: La Follette's War on the Railroads. Cloth, net, $1.20; postage 10 cents extra.

The Life of a Star CLARA MORRIS

¶ America, though a young country, is rich in stage tradition. Great actors and actresses have adorned our stage and made the history of the Green Room. Miss Morris's experience on the stage was unique in the opportunity it gave her of meeting and knowing the most interesting people of her profession. This experience, combined with her delightful and well-known style of narration, makes her book one of the most readable and remarkable of the season. Cloth. Frontispiece. Net, $1.50; postage 8 cents extra.

Wayside Talks CHARLES WAGNER

¶ Pastor Wagner not only finds sermons in stones, but in everything, and all the commonest sights and experiences of the way seem to point some simple lesson of life. Mr. Wagner refers to this volume as the notebook of his life. Cloth. Net, $1.00; postage 8 cents extra.

The Far Country FLORENCE WILKINSON

¶ A new book of poems by the brilliant author of "Kings and Queens" and "Two Plays of Israel." This book shows the wide sweep of her emotions and an unusual breadth of knowledge. Net, $1.00; postage, 10 cents.

"Some of the chapters in these volumes are model records of economical investigation. They sum up clearly and succinctly, and, without exaggeration, vividly and often in picturesque phrase, the outcome of much careful, dispassionate examination. * * * We know few recent books likely to be more instructive and helpful to employers and workmen."—The Times.

"* * * the wealth of illustrative examples, the clearness of the style, and the extended bibliography and list of periodicals, Government reports, &c., to be consulted—all of these and other features unite to make the book one which is to be especially recommended to the reader who is not a trained economist; for either advanced student or business man not specially trained in economic reasoning it would not be easy to find a more appropriate book."—Journal of Commerce.

"* * * These volume titles of themselves suggest a work of philosophical conception, and if it be executed with the breadth, penetration, and clearness of expression that mark the first installment, it will assuredly attain a high standard. The results of investigation are handled with a narrative skill that invests the driest of facts with the interest of freshness; the tone throughout is scrupulously impartial, and the requirements of perspective are unfailingly observed."—The Outlook.

SEYMOUR VANDELEUR: THE STORY OF A BRITISH OFFICER

Being a memoir of Brevet-Lieutenant-Colonel Vandeleur, D. S. O., Scots Guards and Irish Guards, with a general description of his campaigns. By Colonel F. I. MAXSE, C. B., D. S. O., Coldstream Guards. With Plates from Water Color Drawings by NICO JUNGMANN. Five Full-page Illustrations from Photographs and Nine Maps. Small 4to (7x10 inches), net, $4.00.

CONTENTS: I. Early Life.—II. The Story of Uganda.—III. Soldiering in Uganda.—IV. The Story of Nigeria.—V. The Acquisition of British Nigeria.—VI. England on the Nile.—VII. The Egyptian Army at Work.—VIII. On the Atbara.—IX. Omdurman, September, 1898.—X. Another Year in the Sudan.—XI. In the Boer War.—XII. The End.

Seymour Vandeleur had the good fortune not only to see much service, but to see it in many parts of the Empire. The record of his life is therefore the record of Imperial development during the past decade. Colonel Maxse has wisely chosen to elaborate his background, and write in full the tale of Uganda, Nigeria, the Sudan, and the Boer War, so that Vandeleur's career stands, not by itself, but as part of a great work of Empire-building in which he, and many like him, bore a hand. We do not know any other book which sets out so succinctly and clearly Imperial achievements which are wholly creditable, and which are too apt to be forgotten in the present windy war of theories. And in addition there is the portrait of a brilliant soldier, done with all the sympathy and knowledge of long friendship.
